Barrie says he is not a writer of the immortal, but of the day. His aim is to him as it was to Blake a sort of passing show, the past and the future—he is the modern Shakespeare with lonely people and those who have fought and failed in life and—to them he brings a message of courage. He feels that deep down in the soul of every man, standing life is being lived. He endeavors to make the best of a world of sorrow mankind with him and give a glimpse of beauty charity and love towards one's fellows. "That is Barrie's lesson, and man today needs it," the professor said. "In this tragic workday world of ours."

Mr. J. E. Berry, President of the Chamber of Commerce, presided, and Prof. Roy was introduced by Archie Cameron, the Council, with thanks was moved by Principal Cassidy of the Ontario School for the Deaf.

LOTTERIES HIT BY PRESBYTERY

Toronto Body Assails "Gribbling" in Churches

Toronto, Feb. 12.—Lotteries and games of chance termed "gambling" and "disgraceful" in churches, were the severe criticism by members of Toronto Presbytery of the United Church of Canada, meeting yesterday in Howard Park United Church. A resolution introduced by Rev. J. Russell Harris, and adopted by Presbytery, recommended that "in view of the rising evils of the gambling spirit, and wide ramifications of commercial gambling, that Presbytery suggest to its ministers, Sunday School teachers, and office-bearers, that definite teaching of this evil be given to congregations and classes."

Attention was called to pamphlets prepared on the subject by Rev. C. O. Dixon of the Social Service Council of the United Church.

Rev. Mr. Russell remarked that he had not specifically named any churches who followed the practice of gambling.

"Does the Presbytery not know that lotteries and gambling are being going on in some of our United Churches?" demanded Rev. W. G. Conning.

Presbytery also approved a recommendation which would respectfully suggest to the Minister of Justice that the death sentence of Allan Cowan of Barry's Bay, should be commuted to imprisonment because of the youth of the criminal, and because of his low mentality, and that the death sentence of Mary Cowan should also be commuted because of her low order of mentality.

Discussion on the latter resolution was terminated abruptly, when a motion was made to exclude the press.

Presbytery unanimously agreed in recommending that the City Council take action in regard to the amalgamation of housing conditions in putting into effect the housing scheme advocated by the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

Suit for Damages To Health Fails

Toronto, Feb. 12.—The action of Gordon Cunningham, against Consolidated Beverages Ltd., was dismissed, with costs, in Court yesterday. Parker in County Court yesterday. Sweetman has asked $700 damages, alleging a bottle of stone ginger beer made by the defendants had made him ill when he drank part of it.

It was pointed out by Judge Parker that the plaintiff had failed to show that there was any negligence in the manufacture of the beverage or its bottling. The evidence, he said, had satisfied him that every precaution was taken and that nothing that could have been done had been omitted.

"There was no doubt the bottle in question came from the defendant's plant. His honor continued, but the plaintiff had had no opportunity of inspecting it, as he gave the stone bottle instead of pouring it into a glass, and also failed to have an analysis made of the liquid which remained in the bottle. The court held that if there were any damages sustained they would be very nominal.

Cayuga, Ont., Feb. 12.—(CP)—Eighteen cars of an eastbound Michigan Central Railway freight train were derailed near here late yesterday when a switch broke on the line. Cayuga is 40 miles west of Niagara Falls.

The derailment was caused by a broken brake on a box car, it was believed.

130 CATHOLIC LEADERS ARRESTED BY NAZIS

Dusseldorf, Feb. 12 (CP-Havas)—The arrest of 150 leaders of the Catholic youth movement for an alleged Catholic-Communist plot against the state climaxed a concerted attack unleashed last night by Nazi authorities against the Catholic Church.

According on many places throughout the Reich, political police seized both priests and laymen as ringleaders in the youth movement, and clapped them into jail.

This drive had been initiated over last week-end, when the Nazi Minister, Ludwig Wolker and 30 other Catholic youth leaders.

The Suicide Trail

By GAYER GRAHAM

"H—l" uttered Henry Hadsum. He peered about to see if anyone had overheard, but no one noticed him hunching his five-four there upon the steps of the Paramount Advertising Company. The earth still turned. Business had just been fired.

Calamities are lighted by woman's sympathy, but Maizie had turned up a pert, powdered nose as he walked humbly out of Paramount—forever.

There came to Henry the most startling idea ever to tax the brain of a Hadsum. He would suicide. It was the laugh at the world. No one had cared about him since his stepfather remarried. No girl.

Funeral expenses? His insurance, made out to Maizie, had suffered a two-page lapse, usually fatal. He must cost quite a bit to die, Henry figured, thinking of the upkeep of the various fortunes he had been on his way to work.

He reached into the pocket where his watch would have been if it hadn't been in a pawnshop. The last of the Hadsums hoped against hope that he would find more than the ten cents in his palm.

A newsboy approached with a "Thanks Mister," loaned a paper to his lap, and Henry was broke.

As he finished rolling a limp-looking cigarette, the paper in his lap swam across his field of vision. "Protect yourself against accident and old age," a canny insurance man admonished him. "Be independent."

Henry took too heavy a draft at his cigarette, became dizzy, and within his brain the new idea rioted. He would bang onto life until he had paid up some more insurance and sell his bills. Then he would shake the mud of the world from his feet and rise to higher realms where no more the burden of making a living would oppress him.

Idly, he turned the paper to the "Help Wanted—Male," but as always, found nothing but salesmen wanted. There was one ray of hope. "WASTE PAPERS WANTED. 30c PER HUNDRED.

Waste paper! His landlady had a whole stack of newspapers in the basement. Must be a couple of hundred pounds. Henry knew where he could get some more.

The work was slow at first. Many housewives mistook him for a stocking salesman or a collegiate selling magazines, and would shut their doors in his face. Gradually he became more assured and urbane, flashing a winning smile across the horizon as he said serenely, "Any waste paper you have no use for, madam?" Then he would clean the basement by his patroness, making friends for future use.

Though he grew thinner, he stuck to it. "Many a little makes a nickel," he quoted. "No, that isn't right."

When the day came that he had two dollars left after paying room and board, Henry had an interview with Barchus in a beer parlor and emerged with another idea. He would form his own waste paper company.

There was a headache the next morning, for the Hadsums never were drinking men. But the idea remained. There must be plenty of profit for a company, Henry figured.

Apartment owners. Hotel keepers. Private residences. The city became waste paper conscious. In the vanguard was a horse and wagon soon decorated with signs of the Hadsum Waste Paper company. "We are to serve again."

A small truck. One man hired then two. Soon, Henry reflected, he could take out more insurance if he had ever possessed in his life.

Then, just like that, it was done. Henry Hadsum sat in the presidential office of the Hadsum Waste Paper company. "We serve to serve again," Pondly he gazed upon a twenty-thousand-dollar policy made out one Henry Ira Hadsum, with insurable et ceteras and provisos.

He called his lawyer in. "Make complete in every way," he cautioned, shoving his fifty-cent cigar to the opposite corner of his mouth. "Does it have—I mean, does it cover everything?"

The lawyer rubbed his hands. "A practice had gained considerable since the great Henry Hadsum used him for his first case. "Everything, sir. Except, that is, one to two years' suicide-clause. Not force for the full five years, see—"

But the Great Hadsum had thrust his cigar at him. "We can do without," he quoted. "No suicide clause! hire you and you get me no suicide!"

After the first disappointment over and he straightened his shoulders, Henry found he didn't feel bad as he imagined.

Phenzania Die of Cold

Cobourg, Feb. 12—Phenzani are having a hard time to exist during this cold spell. Residents of Northumberland County report a great number of these beautiful birds have been found frozen in the bush. It is said the snow and sleet storms have covered the ground, making it impossible for the birds to get through to the earth, where they secure much food. Many farmers are supplying feed to the hungry birds, who frequent the barnyards during the day, but always return to the woods for the night.

LARGE DECREASE IN EXPENDITURE

The Dominion Budget Will Aggregate $364,427,548 in 1936

Ottawa, Feb. 13 (CP)—Suspension of operations under some of the social measures recently submitted to the Supreme Court of Canada for a validity test contribut ed to the decrease of $12,061,993 in the estimates tabled in the House of Commons today by Finance Minister Dunning.

Ordinary and capital expenditures of the Government for the fiscal year beginning next April 1 were placed at $364,427,548, compared with an estimate or $376,509,542 a year ago.

There were few reductions in any of the essential and customary services and grants to various societies and bodies of a semi-public nature were generally maintained. In some instances they were increased.

Restoration of statutory salary increases accounted for a jump of $235,000 in the cost of civil government and there were increases in amounts estimated as necessary for many divisions of the service, although decreases were more general.

LINCOLN

Today is Abraham Lincoln's birthday in the United States and on this day are paid honors greater than any which could be paid to Roman emperors.

Old pagan emperors ruled with a dead hand and bestrode the people like a colossus but Lincoln lives after death in the immortality of fame based on human brotherhood. White and colored in the United States revere his memory because he not only freed the slaves but also freed the United States from the incubus of the curse of slavery.

Is the world growing better or worse? is often asked, but surely it grew better at least up to Lincoln's day and there are certain signs that it has grown better since and even in the past two decades. The proof—the greater humanity of men and acknowledgment of their obligations as brothers. Though there may be some dark moments as men doubt what kind of world it is wherein man foment war, yet in spite of that fact the world surely is better.

In this bettering of the world Lincoln holds one of the highest places that man ever held. In his life he was tried in the furnace of trial and tribulation, but he passed through pure gold, even though it meant the way of sacrifice. He went the full way of brotherhood. Lincoln's greatness was observed in his lifetime and since his death his greatness has continued to grow upon the world.

FAST TIME

Belleville ought not to go out to establish a new time as it has permitted the city clock to do. The ancient timepiece in the tower has been inviting contempt as a type of standard time and radio time with the consequent annoyance of citizens. Some effort should be made to make the clock keep time. This ought to be an easier undertaking than for the thousands of citizens to keep their many thousands of watches and clocks in Belleville in time with the city hall clock or tower face.

Later Tuesday the clock returned to correct time.

IN NEW YORK PULPITS

Each human life was viewed as a mission by the Rev. H. N. Holmes, secretary of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches, speaking on Sunday morning in New York. No two are alike and each has its part in God's plan, he said. He advised that all should learn to appreciate our fellowmen and to understand their hidden qualities.

"The greatest thing about life," he affirmed, "is that when God makes a man or a woman he makes something that He cannot repeat. It is a common saying that when God made Lincoln He broke the mould. But that is true of all of us. We cannot be duplicated. We cannot be repeated. Each of us is made to do something, and if we do not do it a bit of the dream of God goes into history."

Mr. Holmes said he had learned to love groups of men for he can discover in groups of friends the one who will stand by him through life. He had travelled on five continents and had learned to love life. As a guide to life he used the admonitions of Jesus: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart," and "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

"Two thousand years have passed since Jesus lived," declared the minister, "but no man and no age has added one inch to His moral philosophy. Never has a man spoke as He, nor lived as He."

Nationalistic and racial exclusiveness were condemned by the Rev. Dr. Stanley Hinkey, of the Plymouth Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, as having grown out of too great pride in ancestral pedigrees. Drawing upon the findings of scientists he said that "so far as modern science knows human life began with a black man, probably a little black pigmy. It is likely that is true. Long, long centuries went by before a white man was ever heard of."

There is need for the application of the golden rule in business today, in the view of Rev. Dr. Frank Hall, of the Universalist Church of the Divine Paternity. "Some of us have listened to a citizen of Japan who came to this country to teach us Christianity," he noted. "He has preached nothing new. Co-operation, he calls it. It means working with one another. Why is it that we cannot get together on that principle?"

Aristotle's ideal of a high-minded man of moderation never overstepping the bounds of moderation, is not enough, Jesus pointed out the difference, Dr. Frank Morfeldt, declaring that "Jesus saved us from such a false and insufficient ideal of life and conduct. He exalted the virtues of fine living to such a height that he considered worthy of honor was no longer simply one cultured in the high learning of the day, nor one who never overstepped the bounds of propriety, but one who was a gentleman, one moved always by kindliness, by the instinct of consideration for others. To our manner, politeness and gestures we must add a Christian relationship with others."

METAMORPHOSIS

As when a lovely garden first perceived
Disarms the visitor, its color and scent
Assaulting heart and memory interleaved,
So my new world, but with presentiment
For here where the wand of blue delphinium sways
Above the mignonette, and scarlet phlox
Bow to the climbing rose—pale chrysoprase
On stem and leaf—and arrogant hollyhocks
Command the scene, will be a garden wrenched
By rabid riot of wind and sullen cold;
This perfumed rainbow of flowers will be quenched:
Winter's edict waits to be unrolled.
Though jealously the ground preserve the roots
Different blooms arrive with Spring-time's flutes.

SOCIAL CREDITORS ARE BEGINNING TO HEDGE. At the opening session of the Alberta Legislature government members intimated that there had been no promises by Premier Aberhart to institute payment of twenty dollars per month as a credit to citizens. That surely is a right about face with a vengeance for amateur politicians who did most of their campaigning from the pulpit.

MRS. HUEY LONG, SENATOR, has arrived in Washington with her three children, ready to draw dollars in her new duties filling out her husband's unexpired term in the Senate. She says she is anxious to have plenty of work to do, but as yet is a little hazy as to what her duties and responsibilities will be. By the time her term expires she may have a still more hazy idea of what is a Senator, U.S.A. style. Anyway there will be occasion in the turmoil that her belligerent husband did when he turned the otherwise sedate Senate chamber into a bullring of oratorical clashes, Mrs. Senator Long has passed the barrage of press interviews very creditably and the newshawks describe her as a pleasant home body, rather retiring, and in all quite an attractive personality.

WHEN THE CITY HAS TO ADVERTISE FREE SAND WITH FEW TAKERS there must be something wrong, either with the sand or the people. There are many miles of sidewalks in the city which would be made safer for democracy with the city's free sand scattered thereon, and while it is said that the wicked stand in slippery places all the time, the good also take their bumps, but object to taking unnecessary falls through unconsulting on slippery sidewalks. Perhaps the business men feel that the payment of business tax and other taxes should entitle them to sidewalks safe to walk upon winter and summer.

Feb. 12., 1906

There was a tremendous crowd in the Belleville rink when the Port Hope junior and the Cobourg juniors met to decide the group championship in a sudden death game. Special trains came in from both towns and there must have been about 400 visitors here. It was a fast and furious game and "Sandy" Burrows, the referee, had to go some to keep up with them; as it was he ruled off 34 men, 17 on each side, several of the players being ruled off 4 and 5 times. However, in a close finish the Port Hope team won, the score being 4 to 2. The Cobourg players are a bunch of game losers. They had no complaints to make; the only thing they regretted was that they had not been beaten by Belleville instead of by their close neighbor, Port Hope. "Sandy" Burrows was complimented by both teams after the match for his work as referee. "You gave us a fair break, old man," was what both teams said. The gate receipts amounted to $236.00. What's in the pe..ple of this city do not show a little more of the sporting spirit which actuates Port Hope and Cobourg.

WALKER FREED ON THREAT COUNT

Judge Dismisses Charge But Jury to Deal With Other Counts

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 13.—(CP)—When the Ontario Supreme Court jury took their places in court today at the trial of Henry M. Walker on K. C. Thomas, Mr. Justice Charles McTague informed them that the charge of demanding money with menace from Premier Hepburn had been quashed. The jury still must decide, however, as to Walker's guilt or innocence of two other charges.

Decision to withdraw the one charge came late yesterday after Norman F. Newton, Crown Prosecutor, had handed his case and the jury retired. Defence Counsel C. W. Bell of Hamilton argued no menace against Mr. Hepburn had been shown.

Justice McTague ruled against Mr. Newton's intention to bring before Premier George S. Henry and former Highway Minister Leopold Macaulay as witnesses to identify letters claimed sent them by Walker, seeking investigation of his charges of Highway Department payroll padding. The Court ruled such corroborative evidence unnecessary until Mr. Hepburn's evidence was questioned.

Feb. 13th., 1886.

An old landmark was removed when fire destroyed the frame building on the corner of Pinnacle and Dundas Streets. It had been occupied for some time by William Emsley who carried on a small grocery business. The place had been visited by the recent flood and Mr. and Mrs. Emsley were away for a time, but yesterday the place was opened and fires started, but no one was in the building when the fire started. How the fire caught is unknown. The property belonged to the McAmmond estate and is damaged beyond repair. The building was one of the old landmarks of the city and had quite a history. It was erected about 56 years ago by the late William H. Wallbridge, father of Chief Justice Wallbridge of Manitoba, and was used for some time by Mr. Wallbridge as a store for the goods which he used in his lumbering business. Some years later it was used as a general store, by one of the village, by the late Francis McManmon and the late Henry Baldwin, who composed the firm of McAmmond and Baldwin. Later it was used as a "tin" shop under the proprietorship of John Nichol. In later times the condition of the building deteriorated as the business centre moved northward.

Premier Hepburn gave evidence again yesterday, detailing his dealings with Walker concerning the latter's dismissal as Highways' Superintendent panned Gunning. The premier related he then as leader of the Liberal Opposition, had promised to seek public investigation of Walker's charges. Later Walker had demanded $1,000.

In the general election last November, Sir Ian MacDonald retained National, was elected with a majority of 5,000 votes over J. M. McDiarmid, Labor.

Pneumonia Follows In Wake of Cold

Chicago, Feb. 12.—A new menace—disease—joined winter's carnivals in the midwestern United States yesterday.

Dr. Frank Jirka, director of the State Health Department, announced cold wave had reached the "pneumonia stage" in Illinois with a record of 1,000 cases today reported for the last week.

Piercing cold held full sway from the continental divide to the Atlantic seaboard, but sunny skies favored efforts to shovel away the snow of the century in the Prairie States.

A tale of perdition came from Prairie du Chien, Wis., John Murphy 16, was drowned while a critical throat infection at a forestry camp, eighteen miles from town. Captain Robert Wilson, camp physician, optimistic, placed the youth in an ambulance and held the hole in the patient's windpipe open so he could breathe while four comrades cleared a path through the snow barriers. The trip required three hours.

Engineer Drives Tho Leg Broken

Hamilton, Feb. 12. —Pinchly remaining at his post despite the fact that he had received a double fracture of the leg when the reverse lever jerked back on him, Engineer John Sprague, London, Ontario, brought his train into the Hamilton Station before summoning medical assistance. In some manner unexplained, the big level swung across when the train was between Brantford and Lynden, knocking Sprague down. Although suffering excruciating pain, he eased himself to a position where he could operate the engine for the remaining sixteen miles. Clarence Perkins of London was in the cab with him at the time. Railway officials venture the guess that the engineer may have moved the lever with the steam on, producing an effect somewhat similar to the backfire of an automobile.

INCOME TAX BILL HOLDS INTEREST

TORONTO, Feb. 12.—(CP)—Provincial Income Tax Bill which gives the province the right, formerly held by municipalities, of taxing income holds the centre of the stage in the Ontario Legislature today when the measure comes up for second reading.

Meanwhile the Conservative Opposition was scheduled to go into a morning caucus to discuss the measure and lay down general sessional policy. A prominent opposition member has indicated he does not expect an effort to block the measure.

The Income Tax Bill introduced yesterday in place of the traditional calls of office bill, provoked a brief exchange between Opposition Leader George S. Henry and Acting Premier Harry Nixon which broke the calm of opening day.

Mr. Henry asked for postponement of second reading so the opposition could have an opportunity to study the Bill. He said he had approved introduction of the measure the first day of the special session which had been called for January 21 but postponed owing to the death of King George but now circumstances were different.

The Acting Premier, leading the Government in the absence of Premier Hepburn in London at the notorious trial of Henry Wallace, said the Bill was released for publication several weeks ago and its contents well-known. He said it was his intention to call the Bill for second reading today.

Care Needed to Select Cock for Breeding Pen

The mating of the breeding pen should be a matter of careful study, and careful consideration, for the success of future operations depends more on this than on any other phase of poultry work. Nor does the next season's success depend on it, but it may seriously affect the work of future years as well.

If trapnesting and pedigree breeding have been followed, full advantage should be taken of the records left, and males and females that have been proved to be breeders by the test should be used in future matings and the offspring, particularly the sons of those matings that have proved best, retained.

For many years the endeavour in breeding has been along high egg production lines and in many cases not sufficient attention has been paid to breed type which is conductive to high table quality.

A drive has been inaugurated this year to try to improve the type of Canada's market poultry. (See publication 583, Farmer's Bulletin, Dominion Department of Agriculture). Stress should be laid on vigour, breed type and the qualities as outlined in the bulletin, without, however, losing sight of the egg laying qualities of the flock.

The male is half the pen, and special care should be taken in his selection. He should be the son of a high-laying, large-egg hen, and should be well-grown, show good size and breed type, and above all he should be vigorous.

While vigour may be denoted in every section of the bird the broad back, deep body, well set legs, and general action — nervous force, the paramount requirement in an egg breeding male, is indicated by a bright prominent eye set in a clean-cut face. This is the kind of a male that should give results when mated to equally carefully selected females.

It will pay those who have no such males, to purchase them from careful breeders who have them.

A safe plan to avoid all danger of the bringing in of disease, is to purchase pedigreed hatching eggs or day-old chicks, and select the breeders from among the males raised from them.

Trenton, Feb. 12 (Special)—Louis LaFrance in his 94th year passed away at Hoag Dies, Kingston, Monday evening at 6 p.m. Mr. LaFrance prior to being in Kingston, resided on Bay Street, Trenton. The deceased was born in 1842 at Quebec City, Que., the son of Mr. and Mrs. Basil LaFrance. He had resided in this locality for the past sixty years where up till 1892 he carried on an active barbering trade. Mr. La France, prior to his coming here, lived in Ottawa, Winnipeg and Collingwood. Many interesting stories were related to his children of the time he lived in Winnipeg. It is told how Louis Riel, during the Rebellion, was one of his steady customers. Mr. Riel liked his barbering so well that while he was in jail he had Mr. LaFrance call at the jail to shave him. Mr. LaFrance started barbering when he was thirteen years of age. At that time dentistry was connected with the trade and he told his children that he had extracted as many teeth in one day as he had cut heads of hair. He leaves to mourn his loss, three sons, Basil of Toronto; Michael, of Trenton, and Amedie of Dexter, N.Y.; three daughters, Mrs. H. Eagan and Mrs. E. Rose, who both reside in Trenton. He was predeceased by two daughters. Others surviving are, twenty-one grandchildren and twenty-four great grandchildren. Mining News in Brief

The crosscut from the 400-foot level of the new shaft at Greene Stabell Mines is expected to reach its objective under Stabell Lake by the end of this month. Diamond drilling in this area indicated favorable mineral sections.

Hollinger Gold Mines is continuing its search for new gold sections, and it is stated that encouraging results were obtained in recent drilling from the 875-ft level.

At St. Lawrence Mines plans to form a new company to develop its property in the Pamour section of the Porcupine area, and it is stated that plans are under way to award a diamond drill contract in connection with which work will be started as an early date.

Canadian Kirkland Mines has awarded contract for new diamond drill program at its property in the Kirkland Lake area.

With the New York market closed today, the local will be "on its own" for the session and it will be interesting to watch its action without the influence of Wall Street. Interest in mining securities has tended to decrease somewhat from the industrial board, but in time, the public is again expected to look to the leading base metals and industrial stocks for business.

Brazilian Traction is well lifted in many quarters. W. M. MacDonald, & Co. of Toronto state: "Hear by, very good authority that a dividend is coming on Brazilian Traction."

Both the paper and construction stocks have been strong features during today's trading. It will be recalled that Financial Service has on numerous recent past occasions called attention to the more promising outlook for these industries for 1936. The strength in these stocks is attributed to buying by investors and traders who are favouring to discount the not too distant future.

Distiller-Seagrams' American subsidiary will give the Kentucky distillers something to about as with its new ultra-modern plant at Louisville, Kentucky—also 14 terrazzo floors and the last word in air conditioning system are its features.

International Nickel

Expressing the opinion that International Nickel's fourth quarter's earnings will be below the third quarter level, Standard Statistics says:

"Although it has been estimated in some quarters that International Nickel equalled its third quarter earnings (30 cents a share) in the last three months of 1935, it seems more reasonable to look for some decline. Canadian nickel exports amounted to $10,215,000, or 7 per cent less than in the July-September period and although there may have been some compensatory increase in copper sales, it is improbable that the drop in nickel volume was fully made up. Our idea is that Nickel earned less than 50 cents a share in the final quarter, and that between $1.50 to $1.75 is the full year."

Gold Mines Employ 30,000 Men—Pay Roll Is $100,000 Daily

Employment in the gold mines of Canada may be estimated at close to 30,000 men, and this would not include the small army of prospectors and others constantly prospecting, supported by grubstake or their own capital. A pay roll of $100,000 daily is no mean contribution to national income and explains the unlifting efforts of Dominion and Provincial officials to provide all possible information and legitimate help to the industry.

Taking the Price of the Market

One would not have to spend much time in a brokerage office to discover that many persons of limited means, who took a mild "flyer" in stocks in 1929, are fighting to keep once more possession of a few shares. But, as it happens, a "rich man's market" prevails; absorbing mainly trading has been ruled out, and standard dividend stocks have advanced to levels where fair-sized capital is required to buy 100 shares. In recent months, low-priced issues—those selling at less than $5.00 a share—have acquired a not inconsiderable public following. If the high-priced stocks may be said to be in strong hands, the opposite is true of many of the low-grade issues, and anybody attempting to size up the market's technical position is confronted immediately by two quite dissimilar situations.

Lodi, Calif., Feb. 12 (CP) — Through fingerprints authorities today sought identity of a man whose body, preserved in alcohol, was found in an almost empty wine tank car in the railroad yards here.

Authorities believe the man, about 30, crawled into the car to get wine and was sealed inside by workmen unaware of his presence. The car arrived here Jan. 14.

TREND UPWARD SUN LIFE REPORT POINTS TO SIGNS

Assets of Company Are Now at All-Time High

Montreal, Feb. 12—Definite signs of an improvement in general business conditions can be gathered from the 65th Annual Report of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada just released for publication by Arthur B. Wood, President and Managing Director, in his statement reflecting the strength and stability of life insurance, a voluntary co-operative institution which for generations has stood every test.

Life insurance companies' annual statements always considered barometers of general business conditions in the territories they operate in, have been accurate indicators during the depression and since 1933 have shown, in no uncertain terms, that general business is making headway.

The Sun Life's financial statement for 1935 shows still greater strengthening and improvement, that of the report for 1934 showed progress over 1933, the year the depression reached its low point.

Assets of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada stood at an all-time high the year-end—an increase of forty-one million dollars for 1935, and now over seven hundred and seven million dollars.

The Bond Account increased from one hundred and sixty-two million dollars by two hundred and eighteen million dollars and is now over thirty per cent. of the assets.

Profit from redemption or sale of securities during the year was over five million dollars. The Sun Life has always conservatively written off securities during the year when over five million dollars. The Sun Life has always conservatively written off securities during the year when over five million dollars. The Sun Life has always conservatively twenty-one million dollars. During 1935 mortgage loans repayments took a decided upward turn which definitely indicates a return to better times. These cash repayments on loans exceeded any previous in the history of the company and were twenty-four per cent. higher than in 1934. Investment income showed a notable increase over 1934, while expenses were further reduced, and by any insurance yardstick the report is an excellent one and encouraging for future prospects.

Another definite sign of improved business and a better standard of employment, gathered at the meeting, is the increase in Group Assurance, designed primarily for commercial and industrial plants. This phase of the Sun Life's business shows an increase for the year of twenty-three per cent.

Payments to policyholders and their beneficiaries since the company was organized 65 years ago exceeded nine hundred and eighty-eight million dollars and during 1935 payments of this nature were over eighty million dollars.

New business paid for during the year was over two hundred and nineteen million dollars, and the assurance in force total over two billion seven hundred million dollars. Total income for the year was more than one hundred and fifty-three million dollars, a decrease from 1934, but on the other hand, also a substantial decrease in total disbursements, the excess income for 1935 was forty-seven million dollars, as compared with forty-four million dollars in 1934. The surplus earnings for 1935 are even better than the very satisfactory record of the previous year and the company is continuing the wise and conservative policy of employing these surplus funds to write down the value at which securities are carried. The place in this way strengthen its investments as well as its surplus, a policy which in the long run will naturally benefit policyholders. In referring to the advisability of making sound investments at satisfactory rates of interest, Mr. Wood apparently feels that the low rates will continue for some time but will increase if business activity there should be a gradual improvement. In the field of life insurance, however, the Sun Life not only maintained its rate of progress but records a slight increase over that of 1934.

The Insurance Executive confined his remarks largely to the highly satisfactory financial statement presented by his company but in passing spoke of the importance of life insurance and how it had grown to be of really staggering figures and for this reason was apt to be classed as a so-called "big interest" in a country that has been "soaked" by them. Nothing could be further from the truth. Life insurance companies are essentially democratic institutions and the accumulation of small sums administered by insurance companies in the custodian funds is carried on in a manner which would be impossible for them to do otherwise. There is a misconception of the principles and methods of the co-operative feature of the business of life insurance there was still a tendency to look upon life insurance companies which meant that the thrifty were being penalized. The Sun Life in 1935 paid out in taxes, exclusive of those on real estate, a total of over one million six hundred thousand dollars; this amount is the equivalent to be annual premium on fifty million dollars of insurance. Figures like these impressively demonstrate the taxation question and policyholders do not realize that taxes imposed on a life insurance company fall directly upon them.

Mr. Wood, in commenting on general business conditions in the countries where the Sun Life operates and the favourable trend in the United States, Great Britain and Canada, the three countries where the company secures most of its business, stated that the world is slowly but surely emerging from the depression and that although many uncertainties as to the future still exist and that there will be setbacks from time to time, the significant factor is—that all those indices by which business improvement is judged clearly indicate that fundamental economic forces are gradually having their effect in bringing about recovery and that this comment is steadily approaching normal conditions.

GRAIN

Winnipeg, Feb 12—(CP)—Wheat prices advanced in early trading on Winnipeg grain exchange, reflecting the unexpected upturn at Liverpool and fair-sized overnight export sales of Canadian wheat.

Values near mid-session were 1-3 cent higher, May at 83 5-8, July 84 1-2 and October 83 1-3 cents.

Liberal offerings accredited to the Canadian Wheat Board were absorbed without difficulty by the strong support in evidence. No figures were placed on the overseas movement.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Feb. 12—Wholesale butter prices at Montreal were again lower yesterday, the market ranging from 32 1-2c to 33c for No. 1 in cartons of 1-1 lots, compared with 33c to 33 1-2c on Monday. The market was weaker largely because the result of two more announcements from Ottawa. The first announcement was that stocks of creamery butter in Canada, in cold storage warehouses on February 1, totalled 24,250,722 lbs. compared with 23,643,880 lbs. on the same date last year. It was pointed out however, that the latest total includes 250,000 pounds of butter that previously was added to the list since June 1, 1935. The second Ottawa announcement was that production of butter in Canada during January totalled 9,382,000 lbs, against 7,998,141 lbs. in the same month last year.

Wedding Ring Suggested

Crown Attorney Cecil L. Rogers, in his address to the jury, said the existence of bond-swindling ring in the United States was established by the evidence. Mr. Rogers referred to the records of former crime, Willson returned to Belleville, and his two small, young viewers he intended making his living by writing. He used a pen name then, Quentin and deported to Canada, his birthplace, after "dickering" with Canadian officials of the police.

Within a few years he said, bargaining with the authorities, offering to return to them $1,000,000 in bonds, he was granted permission to enter America. He was then known as Clarence Bullock, of Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York and Boston. He said he picked up the bonds in Pittsburgh and that he was freed on condition that he return to Canada.

Was Former Preacher

Willson was born in London and, after serving a short prison sentence as a boy, returned to announce that he had reformed. Later couple years ago he preached on downtown streets, Clarence Bullock, operation of a furniture store in Toronto. Several months ago he left there for Oregon.

He had a Baptist Church pastorate in Pittsburgh, Rev. Bullock's official coast police heard that Willson was back in the area and raided Willson's parsonage and found guns, ammunition and burglar tools.

$7,000,000 in Robberies

Willson said last spring that his gang took more than $7,000,000 in mail robberies, bank hold-ups and in safe-breaking enterprises, mostly in California and Oregon.

Harry Jones, left there, however, Willson's chief lieutenant was shot and killed during an attempted prison break before Willson was convicted of murder. He spent a year and a half in the death house, but eventually his death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

Detective Identifies Willson

London, Ont., Feb. 12.—(CP)—Detective Inspector Thomas Bolton of London police department today identified Frederick Zeidler, alias Willson, as arrested here and held in Toronto by police on charges of bond-selling in the banks, as the evangelist-bandit whose sensational career in the United States ended in San Quentin prison. Willson returned to London June 11, 1931, following his release.

"Certainly it is Herbert Willson who was imprisoned in San Quentin," said Inspector Bolton. "There is not a shadow of doubt, that it is he."

(By the Canadian Press)

Cecil Dillon's goal in the New York Rangers' game with Montreal Canadiens last night also brought the sharpshooter up from Sweeney Schriner of Americans in the N. H. L. by seven. It gave him 17 goals, three more than anyone else and 10 assists for a total of 27 when the season is over.

Larry Aurie's two assists gave him 24 points and put him two others for last place in the charmed circle, swelling it to include three players.

Slight difference could be seen, Prof. Rogers said, but their exact similarity was perfect. Color could not be gauged by him.

He said that the hairs on O'Donnell's clothing and those from his wife's bed jacket are not exactly the same in color.

"I can't measure shades, though I can measure colors."

Re-examined directly, Prof. Rogers said he had no theory as to the bearing from O'Donnell's bed jacket with hairs on her husband's clothes. The two specimens were not the same.

The crown then rested its case, and Mr. Donnelly submitted that he would not be ready tomorrow morning. Court was adjourned until 9 a.m.

Sweam Wife Wore Blue Jacket.

One of the highlights of the defense case was injected into the proceedings when Margaret O'Donnell, Harry's sister, testified on the witness' return before Mrs. Bell was killed, O'Donnell visited his wife in the hospital and noticed that she was wearing a blue wool bed jacket, put on his coat when leaving and kissed her good-by, but did not again kissed her.

Much crown evidence hinged about more than 200 tiny blue hairs found on O'Donnell's clothing. They were called as crown witnesses said these hairs were indistinguishable from those found on a sweater worn by Taylor when her ravished body was found in a vast and ruins.

Donald Schell, son of the landlady where O'Donnell had a room, testified he was questioned briefly and said he saw nothing unusual in the O'Donnell home during which Mrs. Bell was slain.

The defense then rested its case, which it began yesterday morning. A recess was called and Crown Counsel J. C. McRae announced he wished to call Mrs. Bessie Bell, director of the Toronto Humane Society, who testified for the crown Saturday and said O'Donnell visited the hospital during the evening Ruth Taylor was killed.

Testifies Accused Kissed Wife.

Margaret O'Donnell, a slender brunette, spoke in a firm, clear voice in giving her evidence. Her brother listened calmly by the witness dock. They exchanged no glances.

She said when Harry visited his wife in the hospital he kissed her. Under cross-examination, Margaret O'Donnell insisted she was sure the jacket was of blue wool.

"I saw it seven or eight times at the hospital," she said.

Mrs. Bell had been told of seeing "nothing unusual" in the O'Donnell apartment the November morning that Miss Taylor was killed. His evidence was much the same as that given by Mrs. Bell yesterday.

No Sounds Heard in Room.

The boy said the heat in the O'Donnell apartment had been turned off that week-end.

Under examination, he said he had been told by his mother to keep quiet. He said he never heard O'Donnell in the apartment the night of the slaying. Joseph O'Connell was represented in a statement to police as saying he slept there.

Frank Regan, K.C., defense counsel with Frank Regan, K.C., has put forward a plea of insanity with the dapper O'Donnell.

The trial opened in the case at 2.57 and a recess was called.

Dr. Frederick Zeidler, textile specialist, testified he had only the hairs in Ruth Taylor's sweater bore "similar characteristics" to the hairs from baby articles found in the O'Donnell home. Dr. Zeidler, attempting to fasten sweater hairs to O'Donnell's clothing, had produced expert testimony to the effect they were distinctly dissimilar.

Touching on the crown contention, Dr. Zeidler asserted it would not be possible to establish a link between a fur-collar sweater and O'Donnell's clothing were of the same color.

HOSPITAL BED-JACKET FIGURES

ter O'Donnell's arrest. Mrs. O'Donnell, she said, had not handled the sweater all the time she was in hospital.

Questioned by Mr. Regan if she had not been asked by him at the hospital whether Mrs. O'Donnell had blue clothes and if she had not told him that Harry had none, Mrs. Back replied, "no".

Mrs. Back was asked if she could identify the sweater in court positively. She said she did so through a mend on the sleeve and a match of dark blue.

Counsel Clash.

"Mr. Regan does not want the jury to hear . . ." interrupted crown counsel as the O'Donnell lawyer leaned close to the witness to question her.

"I protest most vigorously," Mr. Regan said. "I resent the suggestion that I do not want the jury to hear."

Mr. Justice Nicol Jeffrey interposed, and Mr. McRae completed.

Bed Jacket Questioned.

Soon afterward Mr. Regan was on his feet. Mrs. Back under further questioned Mrs. Back's identification of the sweater. Mr. Regan assured Mr. Justice Jeffrey the close interrogation was not intended to "embarrass" the crown counsel in committing perjury.

Next, Mrs. Back confer today with Detective McIlraith" Mr. Regan asked Mr. Back.

"No."

"Didn't you and he walk around the garden in the courthouse?"

"I had nothing to do with the case."

His Lordship took over the questioning and said, "did you talk to Detective McIlraith about the evidence you were to give today?"

"No."

"It was just about five minutes before you went into the witness box?" Mr. Regan resumed.

"Yes."

"I didn't know you were a detective as well as a lawyer," His Lordship said with a smile.

In re-direct examination, Mrs. Back said Mrs. O'Connell was "not wearing this sweater or any other one" the day before Ruth Taylor was killed, or after O'Donnell's arrest, she said, she had loaned O'Donnell the blue sweater for over-wear.

Difference In Fibres Testified.

Prof. Gordon Rogers, Provincial Analyst, was recalled after Mrs. Back. He had tested fibres in the hair, Mrs. O'Donnell's sweater, he said, and found it "not the same" as the fibres from Queenie and deported to Canada, his birthplace, after "dickering" with Canadian officials of the police.

Within a few years he said, bargaining with the authorities, offering to return to them $1,000,000 in bonds, he was granted permission to enter America. He was then known as Clarence Bullock, of Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York and Boston. He said he picked up the bonds in Pittsburgh and that he was freed on condition that he return to Canada.

He had a Baptist Church pastorate in Pittsburgh, Rev. Bullock's official coast police heard that Willson was back in the area and raided Willson's parsonage and found guns, ammunition and burglar tools.

$7,000,000 in Robberies

Willson said last spring that his gang took more than $7,000,000 in mail robberies, bank hold-ups and in safe-breaking enterprises, mostly in California and Oregon.

Harry Jones, left there, however, Willson's chief lieutenant was shot and killed during an attempted prison break before Willson was convicted of murder. He spent a year and a half in the death house, but eventually his death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

Detective Identifies Willson

London, Ont., Feb. 12.—(CP)—Detective Inspector Thomas Bolton of London police department today identified Frederick Zeidler, alias Willson, as arrested here and held in Toronto by police on charges of bond-selling in the banks, as the evangelist-bandit whose sensational career in the United States ended in San Quentin prison. Willson returned to London June 11, 1931, following his release.

"Certainly it is Herbert Willson who was imprisoned in San Quentin," said Inspector Bolton. "There is not a shadow of doubt, that it is he."

were good when he presented them to the investment company. He held the $84,000 in his vault, returning them when the bonds were found to be worthless.

Swindling Ring Suspected

Crown Attorney Cecil L. Rogers, in his address to the jury, said the existence of bond-swindling ring in the United States was established by the evidence. Mr. Rogers referred to the records of former crime, Willson returned to Belleville, and his two small, young viewers he intended making his living by writing. He used a pen name then, Quentin and deported to Canada, his birthplace, after "dickering" with Canadian officials of the police.

Weddings

ROSEVEAR—JUDGE

A quiet wedding took place at Toronto on February 4th, when Louise Eva, daughter of Mrs. J. W. Judge, Belleville, was united in marriage to Harvey Rosevear, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Rosevear, Toronto. Rev. J. D. Parks officiated in the quiet ceremony. Following a short honeymoon the happy couple will take up residence in Toronto.

Dr. Brock's Daily Diet Hint

Select your food for its satiating qualities as well as for its palate content. Meat, for example, ispeasas hunger quickly. Hard boiled eggs satisfy the appetite more readily than do eggs cooked in any other way, although the calorie value be the same. Potatoes are more filling than bread, yet both are carbohydrates. The addition of butter makes a meal more satisfying. A sweet dessert at the end of a meal has the same effect.

Follow Rules for Best Make-Up

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

Let the long-nosed critics say what they will. Those women who use make-up cleverly look better than those who don't their cheeks are synthetic blushes and a bit of color on the lips. Take a bird's eye view of your sister passengers in any public conveyance. Shining noses and pale or purple lips are no help to pulchritude.

There are a few simple rules that will guide the candidate for beauty laurels. When the face is round and plump, forehead narrow and chin dimpled, blushes should be placed high on the cheek bone but not spread out close to the ear. A film of faint rouge on the eyelids makes the face look more oval.

No matter what the shape of the face, rouge should not be placed too low. Natural blushes aren't like that. It is only on the cheeks and the chin centre that capillaries brighten their rosy streams through the skin structure. Oh yes, the ear lobes redden when a woman blushes, but they don't count.

One definite rule is to avoid carmine lipsticks and rouges artificial. Another is to blend the edges of the rouge application with powder. The latter is a well-defined color bond between rouge and lipstick. Colors need not be precisely the same, but they must belong to the same family.

Any beauty shop can provide you with a little nightcap to keep the finger wave fresh and in order. Caps with elastics are difficult to wear since the rubber band usually looks upon slipping down over one's nose. The most convenient ones have long ends that cross at the back, tie over the forehead. No matter how restless your sleep may be, this bonnet of silk braid won't budge.

We must caution the peroxide blonde against home-hair dyeing. Oh yes, sometimes the golden girl gets tired of her bleaching regimen and is willing to accept the drab tones that have come with the years.

When hair has been bleached within an inch of its life, shafts have lost their lustre, but the pallor which has been touched with lanoline or cocoabutter.

HEALTH and PSYCHOLOGY

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.

Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The world is ready and willing—nay eager—to give golden prizes to the man or woman who thinks. Not ordinary thinking, mind you, but exceptional thinking, the kind that leads to surprising results.

It is strange how little attention is paid by the average man to his mind. Why not study psychology, for instance, the same as one studies arithmetic or spelling? Is it not the mind that in one way or another controls the body? Is it not the mind that invariably is the dominant force in fashioning our ends? Is it not the mind that makes us experience happiness and contentment, or depression and misery? Is it not the mind by means of which we come into contact with other people and things?

In short, it is the mind—first, last and always. Therefore, train your mind to the highest pitch of efficiency. Study your mind. Analyze it. Use it to the utmost. A mind without action is not a very effective organ.

We think, we imagine, we plan. Then we take up ideas. Then we put them into execution. Between all these Thought and action, therefore, are intimately related. In many ways they are inseparable.

To act practically without thought is as unwise as thinking without action or later putting the thoughts into active use. Nevertheless, thousands of people act impulsively without recourse to thought. Many act automatically or reflexly, without allowing their actions to be sobered by thought.

Barbara Blane

She knows one must follow the rules of make-up for best results

If always we would stop to think before we act, how many scores of mistakes would be saved! Think first, before one puts thought into execution, does not imply craftiness or design. But it implies common horse sense, and that's a lot!

The rule of always thinking first should prove especially valuable to persons of quick temper, to nervous excitable people, and to those who hold it almost to be a virtue to say what they think. Many feelings are hurt, friends lost, misunderstandings brought to life because one lets the tongue run away with the head. Jobs are lost, friendships broken, marriage ties severed for no other reason.

There are many excellent books on psychology that will aid you to understand the mind. Understanding the mind of others helps you to understand your own mind.

"Millions in the Air" Funny

A human pyramid, an impersonator of Popeye, a singer with a girl tap dancer for accompaniment, and a comedy Houdini are among the contestants seeking glory and gold in the story about the new entertainer broadcast which Paramount has made. There is also an authentic air drilling. Is it not the mind that invariably is the dominant force in fashioning our ends? Is it not the mind that makes us experience happiness and contentment, or depression and misery? Is it not the mind by means of which we come into contact with other people and things?

In short, it is the mind—first, last and always. Therefore, train your mind to the highest pitch of efficiency. Study your mind. Analyze it. Use it to the utmost. A mind without action is not a very effective organ.

We think, we imagine, we plan. Then we take up ideas. Then we put them into execution between all these Thought and action, therefore, are intimately related. In many ways they are inseparable.

To act practically without thought is as unwise as thinking without action or later putting the thoughts into active use. Nevertheless, thousands of people act impulsively without recourse to thought. Many act automatically or reflexly, without allowing their actions to be sobered by thought.

If always we would stop to think before we act, how many scores of mistakes would be saved! To think first, before one puts thought into execution, does not imply craftiness or design. But it implies common horse sense, and that's a lot!

The rule of always thinking first should prove especially valuable to persons of quick temper, to nervous excitable people, and to those who hold it almost to be a virtue to say what they think. Many feelings are hurt, friends lost, misunderstandings brought to life because one lets the tongue run away with the head. Jobs are lost, friendships broken, marriage ties severed for no other reason.

There are many excellent books on psychology that will aid you to understand the mind. Understanding the mind of others helps you to understand your own mind.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Unfinished Symphony"

A picture that lends lovers should see; Stage show

Today and tomorrow matinee and evening, we are presenting on the stage an "All colored Revue" showing "The Rhythm Racketeers", A feature which adds great interest to the program is the fact that these dusky entertainers direct from the "Cotton Club" New York, are also shown on the screen in a Universal musical production, see them in person and on the screen at the Capitol.

Unfinished Symphony

A poverty-stricken schoolmaster and composer, Franz Schubert, is engaged to play his unfinished symphony at the Countess Kinsky's soiree. During the performance Count Esterhazy, interrupts the performance with a burst of laughter which so incenses Schubert that he refuse to continue his recital.

At Caroline's instigation, Schubert is appointed music master to the Esterhazy girls. In Caroline he finds a kindred spirit but her intent on his music to perceive that she is in love with him. During rests at a village inn, Caroline awakens Schubert's love The match is resented by his family, who sends Schubert on a mission to Vienna whilst he hurries the preparations for Caroline's wedding to a wealthy officer.

On Caroline's wedding day Schubert arrives. He has brought Caroline as a wedding gift his symphony which with her love for inspiration, he has finished. He plays the symphony and at the identical passage where Caroline again interrupts, this time with a flood of bitter weeping. Schubert destroys the music from this point declaring that his symphony, like his love, shall forever remain unfinished.

The music-lover who is very particular concerning his favorite composer will proably complain that the director of "The Unfinished Symphony" has taken unwarranted liberties with the known facts of Franz Schubert's life. That fact at least should make this Gaumont-British picture more interesting. Whatever the liberties with his life at least they have taken no liberties with his feelings or his delightful music.

Feminine Faces Are Becoming Prettier

Joan Muir

Her fine-textured complexion shows the result of care

By HELEN FOLLETT

There's no doubt about the world war against complexion ills is being won. Feminine faces are getting better and prettier. Lovely women are everywhere, in the shops at tea fights, in offices and on the shopping buy-ways.

What has become of the worried old cardinal who claimed that make-up would ruin complexion? She's right here with us busy with her beauty kit like the rest of the dear brigade.

When women got friendly with the cold cream pot, they were doing a friendly turn for their faces. The human hide needs oil if it is to be satin smooth. The more oiling, the cleaner the fabric of the skin. And creaming didn't mean a let-up on daily facial soaping. A clean skin is bound to be healthier than one that isn't.

Patting and creaming helps to keep solid the facial tissues, which means that wrinkles aren't likely to appear before a woman is due. Soaping helps to remove dust and sebaceous plugs from the pores. Powder serves as a protective barrier against biting winds and stong sunlight. Rouge and lipstick do the high lighting and they don't do a bit of harm. Everything hunky-dorkey.

Leap Year Provides No excuse for Girls to usurp Man's Prerogative of Proposing

Dear Miss Fairfax:—In the United States senator got a laugh from his colleagues by saying: "In addition to our troubles over the Constitution and the AAA., we're now confronted with Leap Year." Lord have mercy on us!

There is no doubt that girls propose every day in the year by such sweetly subtle methods that cannot possibly know nothing about it, they select their victim, lay the trap, and gladly wait to the altar imagining they have been the instigator for the whole thing.

Bug for the poor woman's pointed proposal, regarded as O.K. in Leap Year, no one seems to know how it really came about. There are traditions which go back to the Romantic days, when the first authentic date we have is 1288, when a law was enacted in Scotland. In the reign of "Good maist Blissit Mogsie," that a maiden lady or both high and low degree might be at liberty "to bespeak the man she likes."

The law set forth that if the man thus bespoke was not plighted to another, he was liable, for a fine of one pound if he did not marry the lady who fancied him. Exactly the same penalty fancy regarding the thrift of the Scots be true, it is safe to say that she escaped matrimonially - inclined ladies in the year 1288, especially if the fancied startling amounted to a goodly amount in those days.

A few years later, setting how well the Scotch lassies made out, a similar law was passed in France, in the 16th century, which was legalized in Genoa and Florence. There is at the present time in the three United States on a man declining an offer of marriage, he is liable to pay a budget to him his brother, the benedict.

A number of letters have come to this column from girls asking if it would be wise to take advantage of Leap Year. The question frankly to laggard suitors. To my way of thinking, a girl cannot play the part of a girl is pretty dangerous business.

Granting that the man of her choice is shrinking, bashful, diffident, modest, coy shamefaced demure with an inferiority complex into the bargain it is well worth while to lead him up and rob him completely of the privilege of proposing. Why should he not have the credit as much proposing as the man. But it's so much more plausible done by the latter that not often does one of the sterner sex really know how it came to arrive at the altar to chant the "I will" in ringing tones.

To continue: I have tried and tested methods is the best advice I can give girls who write me about the problem of proposing in Leap Year. Also, bear in mind that well-chanted road to a man's heart is the stomach.

A parting word of wisdom is, do not become too deeply interested in any man until you are reasonably sure of his intentions — some of them are great jollers.

Inheritance Not to be Blamed

(By Lisa Grenville)

When George stayed one of his tantrums, mother's lips would tighten and she would say, "George has his father's temper."

Frank, grabbing all the cake, was selfish like his father, while Grace, too easily crushed by teasing, was sensitive, like her mother.

And it was left for that: You can't buck inheritance, can you? If father has a temper you must resign yourself to George having one, too. "It's the same with Frankie," sighed "like father, like son" — since the world began and no help for it.

Sensitiveness, too, is passed down. Elderly sort of sensitiveness, that is called handicap, as mother herself will know, but quite insurable, Physical size, shape, and coloring are inherited, obviously. It is also true, though less obvious, that certain aptitudes, both physical and mental, are passed down. Instinctive tastes, mental quickness, or slowness, seem to be inherited; also keenness of perception, quickness — in the broader sense, that is, not sensitiveness to touch, but the gift of sensing things quickly, sensing the feelings of others, atmosphere, etc.

Not Inherited

Temper itself is not inherited — unless by all of us! Temper is the explosive expression of emotion with a show of rebellion. Every baby has a temper, unless he is sick. But the fact that father has never learned to control his doesn't mean that George can't learn to control. Just because George has possibly inherited a quick, hasty and strong will power doesn't mean he should not control it, and encouraged from training these excellent qualities into steadfast determination of force.

All normal inherited characteristics are capable of control, and, preferable through training, and sample, of being either an asset or a handicap.

Perhaps Frank is naturally lacking in unselfishness, and if everything is done to cure him of it — if there are always a slice, cake, pie, he is obliged to share with George, if all show of unselfishness, exhibited by him or anyone else is praised extravagantly, and if Christmas presents are not unselfish, but exhibitions of generosity, Frank's natural selfishness will be sufficiently discouraged so that he is likely to develop ability to look after his own interests, which is a decided asset.

Sensitiveness, too, can be turned into a gift instead of a curse, if she is properly trained. These her kindly at home, until she becomes hardened to it. Teach her to laugh at herself a little. Build up herself-confidence until that sensitiveness which was such a handicap becomes a really useful quality that has understanding, sympathetic and appreciative of beauty and fineness as only a sensitive person can be.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Aldem)

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Going big is the important little frock, as shown in the new collection. A delightful model is of navy blue sheer woollen entirely covered by tiny box pleats. An extremely soft belt with inverted scalloped edges sets off a huge bouquet made entirely of tiny colored beads, that is appliqued in the bodice at the side. Just above this belt.

It isn't necessary to be a prophet to predict that suits will again be universal next Spring. A grand advance model is in black and white tweed with a green overplaid. Jaz left and gilet are both very flare at the back. Double collar and double cuffs all of white piqua, mark the fitted jacket.

"A sparkling note is added to many white frocks." For wear north or south, there is no more effective one than white taffeta, the skirt marked by high, flaring fullness. The camisole bodice has a deep yoke of ribbon stones, these being repeated on the girdle ends.

The whistle sounds and away goes our fair traveller wearing a suit o' beige tweed over which she wears a cloth length cape of nutria with gathered shoulder detail and a front panel.

Sing in the rain because you are wearing a smart rain coat. A new model has a hood that is made large enough to keep hair and hat entirely dry. It is double-breasted, the hood covered in water-proof velvet. The case in which the coat is kept has a zipper fastener and handles. It has a silk fastener.

Don't forget that a beautiful evening frock is necessary if your evening costume is to be a perfect picture. A most useful model, since its tan be worn with many changes, is a chain bandle pouch of sheer jet beads with a scroll design of gold and emerald green beads in sparkling flower heads. These are outlined by gold embroideries.

Standing out from the general design and appearance of the evening wrap dress is a sweeping white ribbed velvet in fingertip length cape attached to the back of the low-cut swagger coat of fine Alaskan seal. The cape is embroidered and lapped with a soft convertible collar. There are silk pockets at the hipline.

Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to give a party in a few weeks to a group of young college men and women. I do not know them very well, having spent only two pleasant evenings in their company but I would like to ask them better. The young men are friends of the young man I go with.

Should I say my friend for the pleasure of numbers of these young people? Is it correct to bring his girl friend; or should I ask him to invite these young men for me? Or might I telephone the young men and the young women separately? I do not know the girls' telephone numbers or address either.

None of the plans for this inviting is as good as sending a note or card of invitation to each. Since you know this group of people so little, the form of your invitation should be most carefully considered. Telephoning an invitation suggests a certain closeness of friendship that is not justified in this case.

The form of invitation that I should most enthusiastically recommend is sending your visiting card with the date, time, and kind of party written on it. I suggest that your party be, for instance, a tea-party from four to seven, say o'clock Saturday or Sunday. Then, on your visiting-card, on the lower left, you would write:

Tea

Sunday, April second

Four to seven o'clock

In the lower right corner, if your address is not already engraved on the card, write your address.

If you do not wish to send your invitation in this form, write the formal notes of invitation. Then write the invitation to each girl and to each man, and do not telephone or have it relayed by your mutual friend. This invitation should be most dignitiedly extended, for your entrance into the circle of friends should be perfectly messenger-ed

Visitor's Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly advise me as to which is correct? I has my husband a few months ago and I would like to have some calling cards made; I thought it proper to use my husband's name (Mrs. Clarence D. Brown). I have been told that my name (Mrs. Grace A. Brown) is more proper, very much prefer using my husband's name.

Constant Reader.

You are right in your reaction on this question of the use of your own name. That is, you should use your husband's name, in just the form that you have been using it. It is highly incorrect for you to change the form of your name to one that includes your first name.

Also you should not use initials on your visiting-cards. These cards are the height of formality, and therefore we should not use the affectation that is not of the most formal. Initials are informal.

So, as a widow, your card should read:

Mrs. Stewart David Snow

(Or, if you wish, you may omit the middle name.)

Bridesmaid

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a married person to be a bridesmaid? I have an only sister who is married who is going to be my matron of honor. One of my best friends is married and I would like to have her act as bridesmaid. I am having three other bridesmaids who are single. Friends tell me that it would be wrong to ask a married person to be a bridesmaid.

Claire.

Nowadays no differentiation is made between married and unmarried people as wedding attendants. And this is true of the attendants of the bride as well as of the groom. By all means ask this good friend of yours to be a bridesmaid.

Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answers questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

SECRET GAME OF CITY POLICE IS FRUSTRATED

IF THE ICE COULD TELL

Reporter Tries to Portray in Words Scenes in the Arena

The suspicions of the police in this city were aroused yesterday following a hurry-up call that was received at the police station. There had been serious trouble somewhere in some outer section of the city. The call resulted in the abrupt culmination of a secret hockey practice being held by the police hockey team at the Arena, but upon the arrival of the long arm of the law at their destination, no crime was in evidence. Only Manager Chief Kidd and Coach Sam Sparrow, it is now claimed that their hockey rivals, an amalgamated team of service-chiefmen in the city and district, responsible for the false alarm and it was done only to halt the officers in their hockey practice yesterday. When the hurry-up call was received by the police headquarters and carried from their practice, some wearing skates and others not even dressed for lacing up their shoes, but today the "cops-per" state that the quickness of the service club team a real shellacking, when they met during the afternoon V.O.N. ice carnival next Thursday. "They might have had their fun yesterday, but the game is going to get sweat revenge on some person for interrupting yesterday's work-out", stated Manager Chief Kidd today.

Good Practice Held

Yesterday morning all doors and windows at the Arena were barred and locked, while the police team held a secret practice in preparation for their approaching hockey match versus a team composed of members of the Rotary, Kinsmen, Kiwanis and Lions Clubs and the Goalie Sergeant Booth was absent owing to illness, but will be available for the game. Sergeant Major Frank Gardener, who only donned skates for the first time two years ago, is fast rounding out into an expert puckster, that is if the grilling is all one way. The Inspector says there should be a rule made to allow the opposition to skate on what they are looking and not to circle around at random. Chief Kidd and Bert Delaney locomote his motorcycle for a pair of skates and with a wide swath, this standing perpendicular, Constables Arnott, McBrien and Gardner, who are known as "Mounted", were seen practically body-checking the pavement as they are going to form the rear-guard, if their predictions prove true. P. C. Ivan Evans says he is in splendid condition and wants to get a crack at either Rodney or Kiwanian Jack McIntosh, he care little which one, for they are both engaged both to play centre against Thompson, Napanee veteran. Harman were only onlookers yesterday, but the pen proved too great a temptation to turn out for the next year's practice, if the charity games does not bring in enough cash to all concerned. Fred Izard does not as yet appear to be in training shape but was cutting quite a few capers during the right bouts and seems to have the potentialities of a well under manoeuvre.

Manager Chief Kidd says he'll make a public appearance, but only on one condition, if they let him referee Joe Wilson wearing skates and allow him to turn the net back-ward. Doubtlessly Rotarian Bill Deacon and Kiwanian George Lee will not permit such action as Chief will have to run his team from his sidelines. Following several strenuous work-out, however, a few casualties were noted among the ranks of the police, but Constable Harry Armstrong, of the O.P.P. was not seen hobbling around the rink of a hockey stick as a cane. Constable Jack Kelly found it quite comfortable to sit on the ice, when suddenly charged by P.C. Arnott and both had to be sanitized to the dressing room for repairs.

Rising a Trainer

Jack "Romeo" Gordanier, Belleville's famous lacrosse and boxing trainer, volunteered to come out of retirement and act as trainer for the police team. Jack's first duties were to be the assembling of a team out of the sore and weary players on hand, for you see the police officers' bunking time at present is crutches or riding around in the ambulance, don't be at all surprised, as it is only the result of one of their practices prior to the big charity hockey game versus the service clubmen for the V.O.N. to be presented at the Arena next Thursday. Incidentally the "law" will appreciate all donated by the laity and while uniforms, while their virus will rush this season and wear green and white.

WORLD CHAMPION WOMAN BOWLER

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mrs. Floretta D. McCutcheon is the best woman bowler in the world. Further, she is a great teacher of the game as hundreds of bowling fans who have learned during her exhibition here will testify. In a series written exclusively for this paper by Mrs. McCutcheon, writing at her home, Columbus, as well as here, points the way to skill in the game. Starting today, Mrs. McCutcheon has rolled nine perfect games or 300; ten games of 290 or better; and several championships at Los Angeles in 1931, 1932, and in the National series ever bowled at Syracuse 311 to 97 Smith, 704 to 607.

This is my tenth season in bowling. I never even heard of the game until I was 32, and did not take it up in a big way until four years later. It has brought me a lot of fun and good health, and thousands of women who have been in my classes have told me it has done the same for them.

Bowling is one game for all the family. It is hard to watch it and not want to take part, and in this regard it differs from most games. In most games there are many spectators and few participants, but in bowling there are many players.

Girls Welcome

It is an ideal game for husband and wife or young couples to spend an evening. No professional strength or ability is required, and the 98-pounder as well as the 200-pounder can bowl skilfully and pleasurably, if had no particular instruction when I started the game myself, but I have found in my classes that the observance of a few simple fundamentals enables the beginner to start early, acquire confidence and lay the foundation for a good game.

Correct Form Easy.

I have been bowling for seven years now, and I am continually finding new ways of helping out the beginner. I learn by teaching. What is more, I am a better bowler. Correct bowling is so simple and logical and easy. The more naturally you bowl the better you bowl. Striving is an ideal way to remove cross leads and build up proper positions in a healthy way. I am no lightweight myself, but by the very few seasons in active bowling I took off fifty pounds of superfluous flesh.

As long as you have the right beginner may pick up the game, I have found that the most successful pupils who attended my classes in Minneapolis. I explained the fundamentals to her and had her roll four practice balls. She went to another alley with a friend and rolled seven or eight more, then started her first game. She got seven strikes in her first game!

BUFFALO—LONDON LOCKED IN FIGHT FOR 2ND PLACE

(By The Canadian Press)

Buffalo Bisons and London Tecumsehs are locked in a close struggle for exclusive possession of second place in the Eastern Section of the International Hockey League standing. Bisons shoved the Tecs down to third spot last week, but the resilient Londoners bounded back to regain second place in the last night with a 2-1 victory over their arch-rivals at London.

Another Canadian club reinforced likely with players from other clubs stretched their winning streak to three games at Rochester when they trounced the Red Wings 6-2 in a rousing battle. Cards stayed in fifth place in the Eastern section and Falcons hung on to second place in the Western Division.

Windsor Bulldogs walloped Detroit Olympics 5-2 at Windsor and pulled to within three points of Cleveland. Despite last night's reverse Detroit has the net for possession of the Falcons.

Jack Portanier of Buffalo and Yank Boyd of London drew major penalties for fighting in the second period of the Tecs-Bisons game. Owen Lennon beachcandled Portanier to the nets but Referee London's opening goal in the first period. Lole Couture played Rabbit McVeighy past out of a goal-mouth scramble in the second and it was 2-0 for Tecs. Patterson gave Mahoney Cards a present on the Red Wings' goal in the third period and Bisons put the pressure on when Jack Portanier got his lucky goal. The Londoners hung on stubbornly and kept Bisons from scoring any more.

Smith Scores

Smith scored for Rochester in the first period of the Cards' triumph. Fred Cross tied it up but Whitey Farrant and Art Metcalfe scored two more before the period ended.

Farrant and Halliday stretched it to 5-1 in the second period, when Ken Doraty counted the second Cleveland goal in the first five minutes of the last period, but Bartholome and Rennie both scored for the final Wings' counters. Halliday and Fred Robertson and Lloyd Thomas, the latter two of Cleveland, were carried from the ice slightly injured in the brushing third period. Joe Cooper failed to click on a penalty shot for Falcons when Cunningham tripped Cross.

Bulldogs beat Olympics for the second consecutive time, poking in two goals in the first period and one in the third. Clarence Drouillard barged through for Mackenzie the other. In the third period Carl Liscombe of Detroit and Davis Dowlie, Bulldogs winger started swinging fists at each other, but dropped them and fell to the ice together amid whirling fists. Finally pulled apart they each got a major. Drouillard scored his second goal while they were off.

VARSITY SENIORS END GAMELESS

Blues Hang Up Sticks For Second Off-Season

(By The Canadian Press)

University of Toronto's senior hockey team, record-smashers in a big way, were all through with the Ontario Hockey Association campaign today. The blue team completed its second consecutive season without a victory last night by dropping an 8-4 decision to Hamilton Tigers.

Senior hockey in Ontario hasn't had such a consistent loser in decades as the Varsity teams of 1935 and 1936. Warren Stevens, noted football coach, but a novice at hockey, handled the Blues during the disastrous 1934-35 season when the boys managed to gain one tie in the O.H.A. schedule.

Last fall Stevens gave it up and turned the job over to Irvin (Ace) Bailey, former Toronto National Leaguer. Under Bailey's expert coaxturing the Blues got no better but, They equalled the record of one tie and no victories.

Without Syl Apps, the team's highest-scoring forward, Tigers had little difficulty upsetting the Varsity squad last night in Toronto. Hasle and Mackie shot the Tigers into a two-goal lead in the first period and the game was engineered a five-goal assault in the third period when play was one-sided.

In the other scheduled contest, completing the pre-playoff arrangements, Toronto Dukes defeated the Oshawa sailors 5-3. The loss definitely eliminated the sailors from the Eastern Group playoffs, leaving Dukes, Tigers and Oakville Villans to fight it out.

The Dukes ran up a 5-0 lead before Bert Colborne broke through late in the third period for three quick goals. Shorty Robinson and Sherry Duncanson each scored two for the Toronto team and Ken Gilchrist got the other.

OLYMPIC TEAM FULLY CONFIDENT AFTER DEFEAT

Canadians Prepare to eMost Hungary After Tuesday's Loss

GOALING WAS WEAKER

Canadians Superior in Almost Every Department

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 12—(CP)—More determined than ever after their 2-1 defeat by England, Canada's Olympian hockey squad today shook the championship trail today confident of their ability to keep the Dominion's international supremacy in the sport intact.

As they prepared to meet Hungary, there was no one to deny the Canadians' chances for the title. It was agreed on every hand that it was goalie Jimmy Foster who hung the defeat around on the Canucks last night more than the English team as a unit.

The former Winnipeg and Moncton netminder who played such superb games in the Canadian rivalry was under a withering puck bombardment from start to finish. It rivalled for intensity to the controversy that has swirled around Foster's head during the winter games opened.

Foster and another ex-Winnipegger Alex Archer, were permitted to play for the Canadian hockey officers of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association agreed to waive suspension for the duration of the Olympics. The blacklisting followed the Canadian transfer rule.

Maple Leaf Superiority

Except in the goal tending, the Maple Leaf team was superior in every department. The title defenders cracked the English defense almost at will. Hooley Smith, particularly true of Ralph St. Germain and Hugh Farquharson of Montreal Winged Wheel, Winnipeg batman from Port Colborne, Ont.

With smooth passing and fast skating Manny Mackie took command but it was 13 minutes before Cy Gerrard, on a pass from Jim Haggarty of Fort Arthur, was able to pull Foster out of position for a winner.

Rush after rush—Coach Pudas termed the Canadians had 80 per cent of the play—steamed into England's defense but turned them back as if by black magic.

The break came in the 14 minute of the second period. Dalby Jones tore in on goalie Moore, fighted him to the corner, flicked a pass to E. Brembley for the deciding goal.

From then to the final bell the English team "iced" the puck to keep the powerful Canadian search for an equalizer.

If the Dominion team can beat Hungary today and repeat over Germany, its chance of advancing to the final round-robin appears excellent, England faced the strong German entry.

RED WINGS SEEN AS 1936 VICTORS IN STANLEY CUP

Boston Bruins Show Strength Defeating Black Hawks

SIEBERT'S TWO GOALS

Clapper Scores Seventeenth Goal For the Season

(By A. C. Fulford)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Those sinisters Detroit Red Wings who are called the Motor Athletic team will win the Stanley Cup this season, Conn Smythe, today's their 7-3 win over the present holders, Montreal Canadiens, not even the most biased Boston fan had to admit the bruising Bruins showed unexpected strength in bowling Chicago Black Hawks 7-1.

The whole story of Boston was that the defencemen scored five goals and rearguard Shaughnessy Cleghorn added his second assist this season and Ted Graham and Bill Hollett, other rear-guards, also contributed. Graham's goal was his third in two seasons, all scored this year, and Hollett's first.

Clappers Two

Dit Clapper and the other two Boston tallies and Glen Brydson scored the only Chicago goal of the game, played before 12,000 persons in Boston. It was the most one-sided contest Boston has had this season and the worst defeat Hawks have encountered.

Bruins scored two goals in the first period, when Hawks' only penalty was chalked up to the second and three in the third. Shore and Jimmie McFadyen enlivened the middle session with a scrap that brought Cotton Fitzsimmons' only penalty for the Boston defenceman. It was his third this season and automatically meant a fine.

Eddie Shore opened with a dazzling attack Wings produced in the first five minutes. Although they held them even in the second period, Shore, Clapper and Adams' team produced batches of three goals against single Marson from Patrick and Howe from Kromm.

Goalies Young and Bowman, whose goal was his first of the year, both had little to do. Bowman's work in the Sorrell beat Bill Beveridge for Wings and Gordon Pettingre sore Boston. Referee Mitchell Dickey and Smith added their counters.

Boston's total for the night.

Dave Kerr, Ranger goalie, gave the Toronto Maple Leafs enough strength to offset Canadien attacks for the two periods Lester Patrick's team were in control of the play and Will Cude starred in the Habitant attack, but Kerr stopped the determined onslaught in the final session.

The game's two goals came within two minutes late in the second when Jack McGill gave Canadiens a short-lived lead on a clever passing play. Then Doug Brennan and Odie Dillon tied it up working with Lorne Parker and Howe in succession.

It was Clapper's 17th goal of the season giving him the league lead and the Boston team moved up within three points of Sweeney Schriner of Americans at the top of the scoring standings.

BLIND BOWLERS LOSE MATCH

Handicapped By Hundred Points, They Lose By 16 Points

(By Andy Clarke, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Feb. 12 (AP)—Five bowlers who live in a world of darkness competed with their seeing brothers last night and lost.

With a handicap of 100 pins, they lost 870 to 854 but if enthusiasm

Eddie Thomas' Redmen went to town in a big way at Napanee last night to take Walker Gerow's pets into camp 5 to 1. The Gibbards have a smart team and are yet to be considered. They are no pushovers in any man's language. Every goal the locals bagged last night was the result of hard work and continued power plays. As Skipper Thomas remarked after the game—"We are not out of the woods yet. Napanee will play a far better brand of hockey on their ice than they did at home and we'll need all of those goals before the series is over." Cy Barriage's shooting was right on centre last night, the diminutive little centre player bagged three goals and added an assist to his credit and was also duly assisted by Pete and Carl Morgan as the first line stood out against Napanee. Goalie Walter Gerow has a sturdy defence in the Bentley brothers, while the front line of Murphy, Cecil and Wilson carry plenty of speed and scoring ability. "Just watch their speed line of the two Jacksons and Leary; they're fast and clever," added Manager Thomas today.

When Eddie Schriner's St. Mikes "Irish" squad take to the ice versus the Lions' B.C.I. "Crusaders" on Friday night, they face their toughest opposition of the intermediate ranks. The "Irish" have only tasted defeat once this season, that being at the hands of the "Crusaders" during the first meeting when the B.C.I. shot out the St. Mikes 3 to 0. Naturally the green and white are anxious to get sweet revenge and a repeat of the first period triumph in the school league. Schriner has a powerful squad at his call in full force during this game and the league officials are expecting a record crowd to be in attendance during the last game when 700 were on hand. The curtain-raiser game brings together Albert College and O.S.D. in a twin bill. The last time these two squads met the Albert team won 2 to 1, but O.S.D. has been weak in the scoring department this season and Coach Ted Graham and Bill Hollett, other rear-guards, also contributed. Graham's goal was his third in two seasons, all scored this year, and Hollett's first.

CURRENT SPORT

never heard of a place called Stirling. For his information we might say that both Ingram and Morton reside in Stirling and have done so for many years, except in the winter, when they procured some little employment for a couple of seasons in Campbellford, but right this winter, Stirling is closer to Belleville than it is to Campbellford, so any good train (?), you see Ingram and Morton are quite eligible to play in Belleville. You are welcome.

When commenting upon the Belleville at Oshawa game the Motor City scribe has the following to say, some of which is more truth than poetry. Those are his remarks: "Belleville will, or course, advance into the Intermediate "B" playoffs even though they did finish 2nd in the grouping. The experience gained against more experienced opponents in the O.H.A. has done good stead and with a few breaks they should get most into the title. Belleville plays a typical brand of intermediate hockey which is more adapted to the small ice surfaces that the team will encounter later on. The boys rarely rely on one-man rushes and shoot from the defense. Their play was very good at all stages and the defense is slow in breaking away."

With such fine winter weather he has enjoyed it would seem that Belleville does not boast of a curling rink. Wouldn't it be fine to be able to step right on our own ice over the possibilities of the reformation of the Belleville Curling Club.

Joe Smith was named as the official referee for the return Napanee at Belleville intermediate playoff at the Arena on Thursday night. The "Redmen" are just beginning to click in championship fashion and have eager eyes cast in the general direction of Belleville first O.H.A. game. They have indeed holding scores down in order to fool the locals, but to what extent? What I tell the boys to do is to go out, play hockey and score as many goals as possible. Don't let down when a team is going to have to fight off an attack and they will be prepared. When your team is playing winning hockey I do not believe in asking them to lay down, but on the contrary encourage them to score goals. We intend to beat Napanee just as badly as we possibly can here on Thursday night, but I feel sure that Walter Gerow's team will make a much better showing on their large ice than they did at home. Napanee is a good club and no person should be surprised if they win through here tomorrow night because I'm here to tell you that we have to work our guns throughout the whole 60 minutes because they are a real good team", stated Skipper Thomas as he predicted a real game for Thursday night.

REDMEN TAKE FOUR-GOAL LEAD

Belleville Trots Out Well-Balanced Team at Napanee

Napanee, Feb. 12 (CP)—Belleville Redmen will start a two-goal lead into a return playoff as a result of a 5-1 win over Napanee Gibbards in the last night in the Lions' game of home-and-home series in the Intermediate "B" O.H.A. playdowns. The victors showed an evenly balanced team that centred their attack around a smooth working combination plays. Their starting line up included Cy Barriage, whose Barriage getting the opening counter three minutes after the start of the game and then continuing with another brace early in the third period, which practically settled the issue. Pete Morgan got his first Belleville goal of the season also in the last period. The visitors' defence held the Napanee attack to a standstill the close checking of the locals. Napanee practically hemmed in the invaders up the first half of the period, they having but one shot on goal. In the last five minutes of the first period the locals were two men short, but Belleville failed to take full advantage of the situation, even Whitey Wilson practically holding the first night handicap with a rare exhibition of puck-ragging.

Barriage secured in mid-ice in the second period and then broke down right boards, gave Curry no chance and scored his goal from twenty feet out.

Line Lineups:

Belleville: Goal, Morton; defence, Ingram and McDonald; centre, Barriage; wings, Leary and Morgan; subs, St. Louis, McGuire, Mr. Morgan and McElrath.

Napanee: Goal, Curry; defence, Reid and Gerow; centre, Lewis; wings, Murphy; wings, Card and Wilson; subs, B. Jackson, Leary, C. Jackson and Wales.

Dale Plays The Game

—BY—

Ann Forester

Dale drew a quick breath and shook her head slightly as though to free it from morbid fancies. He fairly she warned herself. Naturally Brant had been surprised. He had thought Mimi back in Italy. Of course it had been a shock to walk in and find her here. Dale recalled how he had looked—his words—There was comfort in the memory. Whatever there had been of amazement—of embarrassment even, she could recall no longing, no regret.

Oh, how silly she was! Dale thought as she shook out a dress severely. After all, she and Brant had been through too much together for her to fear Mimi now. She wasn't going to be one of those silly jealous wives!

But just the same, Mimi's living here was difficult. Still, perhaps Mimi meant to be kind. Mimi's husband had died..... Dale should be sorry for her. But it was impossible to pity Mimi. No! Dale decided with the shrewd insight which He had knocked into her, Mimi was not really friendly. There was something you felt about a person who was really kind.... Mimi was playing a part. All Mimi's friendliness, then, she would play a part too!

Her unpacking finished, Dale wrapped herself in a silk green negligee and threw herself on the day lounge. But the place kept moving like the movement of a train and after a couple of restless moments she rose and nervously paced the floor.

The short winter afternoon was drawing to a close. The room was filling with shadows. Dale, who looked out the window her heart went heavy with homesickness. Dale had all the average Californian's bewildered dislike of snow. As a novelty—yes, that was all right. But at this hour when a sad blue light seemed to settle on things, when the ladies fire held inky shadows..... and those bare trees..... God's real poems praising bare trees, calling them winter lace, but Dale preferred her trees full of leaves.

Dale was facing west. Out there—straight out there three thousand miles or so, Honey was perhaps sitting and nodding on a high porch, looking over miles of sunflooded sage under a sky unbelievably blue. Out there—the matter of some three thousand miles—a green cabin stood empty. For lack of water the vegetable patch had no doubt wilted by now. The ground squirrels and the birds which had learned to come and wait for the few crumbs which she made out of the tablecloth would be puzzled and expectant.....

The room had grown quite dark and she was lying down when Brant entered. He switched on the light and gave a little exclamation when he saw her lying there.

"Sick, dear?"

"No. Just thinking. Come here, dear....."

Brant went and sat on the edge of the lounge. It was comforting to have his arms about her. Comforting to hold his hand tight between both her own and notice how big and brown it was.

"You smell good. You smell of a pine—the way you used to twilights at home....." Dale said in a smothered voice.

"Sweetheart! You're crying—"

"I am not!" But a shrivel formed in unconvincing.

"What's the matter, dear?"

"Homesick....." Sniff.

Brant threw back his head and laughed. "Funny kid! Homesick! For a blistering shack in the desert!"

"It was home!"

Brant was suddenly serious, holding Dale close. "Yes, you're right, it was home. But, darling, you're going to have home again—a home such as you never dreamed of! Just be patient for a little while. I've been talking to Mother all this time Dale. Things went pretty much to pot after Dad's death. Mother made some pretty bad investments and it's going to be a hard pull to save the house, Dale. I'm going down to the office first thing in the morning and get the lay of the land."

"How long do you think it will take you to get the thing running smoothly again?" Dale asked.

Brant shrugged. "No way of telling. It's just a thing that will take a day—no, nor in half a year!"

"Brant!" Dale struggled upright and looked at him with tragic eyes. "You mean—we'll have to stay here—for half a year? Or longer?"

Brant stared. "Don't you like it? Aren't you comfortable with this?"

He waved an arm at the room.

"Oh—of course," Dale replied slowly. "But I suppose I'm like every other woman, I want my own home."

"I know how you feel, dear," Brant said apologetically. "And I feel just the way you do about it. But right now I don't see how we can break away. Mother made such a point of us staying here. You should have heard her just now. It made me feel like a cad for not coming home before. Honestly, I think it would kill her if we left now."

Brant drew Dale to him impulsively. "Oh, sweetheart, help me in this as you have in everything. I'm doing the best I can."

Again that warm rush of love going from Dale's heart to meet her husband's lips. Of course she would help! She wouldn't be a short sport. She would play the game!

"Buddie—dear." Brant was a little abashed at showing so much feeling. "They really have acted awfully decent to me. They want us to feel at home. Mimi, now—she was mighty nice just now."

"Oh....... yes." Dale said dully. "Mimi was....... mighty nice....."

CHAPTER XI.

MEETING THE FAMILY

Brant had told Dale that there was no special need to dress for dinner. "There's just the family," he said. Nevertheless, Dale chose her costume with care.. Better under the circumstances. Of her dress it, she decided. She looked over the supply of clothes she had bought in those two hasty days in San Francisco, and decided upon a lamp velvet with quaint collar and cuffs of ecru lace. When she looked at her reflection, Dale remembered with a gleam of cynical humor, the Beasts, great and small, paused as they heard Tarzan's weird cry. The call mean to them that a great ape was in trouble. The jackal hoped it meant the possibility of flesh and trotted through the jungle. Dango, the hyena, hoped to find easy prey.

And far away and faintly, a little monkey heard the call, recognizing the voice of the caller. Swiftly he raced through the jungle, impelled as he was upon rare occasions by a directness of thought and a tenacity of purpose that brooked no interruption.

From a distance he caught the scent of jackals and the horrid scent of Dango. The jackals fled. They circled around him, but when he raised himself to a sitting position, they ran, yelping away.

Then Dango, the hyena came. Tarzan was still sitting up, and the beast stood eying him. He growled back; and the man-thing facing him growled back; and then from above them came a great chattering, as Tarmangani, looking up saw little Nkima swinging from a limb.

times she had barnstormed as Little Lord Fauntleroy in her early childhood. Yes, there were the golden waves, the lace collar, the satin slippers of Fauntleroy finish!

Dale was glad to have Brant's comforting presence as they descended the broad staircase, still more glad to find no one in the living room when they entered.

"We seem to be the only hungry hawks," said Brant, after a glance around. "Come on—while we're waiting I'll show you the conservatory."

The man led the way to a room of potted plants. When Brant switched on the light the dome of colored glass overhead burst into last radiance, and Dale gave a little exclamation of pleasure. Brant grinned.

"I got a great kick out of that when I was a kid," he said. "Crane over the goldfish pond; I want to see if Henderson is still alive. By George—that looks like him over there under that lily pad! That big orange fellow! Yes, by thunder, that's Henderson! Named him that because he was the image of the math professor at college."

How pleasant it was here in the moist, warm air of the conservatory, leaning against Brant's arm and laughing at his casual comments! Dale was happier than she had been since she had come east. She felt her heart sink when a servant appeared to tell them dinner was served.

It was hard to retain her composure as they returned to the other room. Of what use to tell herself that Brant's mother would be friendly..... that she would take her to her heart as a daughter..... In her secret mind Dale knew better. With the very first glance she knew truly.....

Mrs. Kendall was seated on the davenport with Mimi. Slim as a girl she was, though her softly waved hair was snow-white and her face was covered with a spiderweb of fine wrinkles. And like a faint, elusive perfume, traces of girlish prettiness still clung subtly to her. No likeness of Brant here, Dale saw in her first fascinated glance; he must have resembled his father.

"Mother, this is Dale...." Brant was saying. He had flung one arm over her shoulder, as though to give her confidence.

The older woman spoke in a singularly musical voice.

"My dear, I am very happy to see you. And I hope you will be happy here with us."

Gracious words, graciously spoken, but the faded blue eyes did not lighten as they met the pleading brown ones, and the kiss which Mrs. Kendall condescended to place on Dale's cheek was the merest brush of the lips.

What she said..... if she said anything..... was afterward never clear to Dale. She was swirling in a vortex of bitter understanding. Brant's mother didn't like her..... that kiss meant nothing..... she resented her for marrying her son. And why—oh, why!—had she worn this dress? Dale raged inwardly at herself. She hated Brant for telling her not to dress for dinner! Mimi's sleeveless ivory lace made her own taupe velvet look hot and stuffy. Contrasted to Mimi's small perfection, Dale felt like a strapping village wench beside a dainty marquise! Humiliation so bitter that she could taste it rose in Dale, and she had the sudden fear that she would disgrace herself and cry.

The by-play was lost on the man. Simple — straight-forward himself, it was foreign to Brant nature to detect double-dealing in others, particularly in his own family. His mother had spoken kindly to Dale, hadn't she? She had kissed her. Mimi was smiling at them both.....That was what Brant saw.

"I will not wait longer for Nancy," said Mrs. Kendall, rising. "She must be late. Table to come in when dinner is being served. Home, to your sister, Brant, has become merely a place to change her clothes."

JUROR WISHES TO SEE RAVINE

Assize Judge Points Out Conditions Changed, But Will Consider

Toronto, Feb. 11 (CP)—Submission of evidence, against Harry O'Donnell went into the eighth day today with his trial for the ravine slaying of Beaty Taylor entering its second week.

Prosecutor Hunter, K.C., was searching the bottom of the huge roster of prosecution witnesses and indications were the defence would take over in a day or so with the accused sitting station attendant as the star witness.

Cool and unruffled as ever, the 24-year-old prisoner sat in the dock yesterday and heard his counsel, Frank Regan, K.C., grill two prosecution witnesses for the better part of the day. The veteran lawyer concentrated his fire on police testimony about a wrench found in the sand and ravine where the girl's ravished body was found last May.

Sergeant Watterworth on Monday afternoon recounted the events during which O'Donnell had been put under arrest, while in the residence of O'Donnell's parents, a search of O'Donnell's quarters on Hollywood Crescent, and a visit to the gasoline station where the accused worked.

In the latter place, O'Donnell's flat he had found certain articles of clothing. An overcoat hanging on the foot of the bed; a coat, vest and trousers nearby. They were covered with dust, damp at the shoulders and wrists. The trousers were also damp around the knees. Mud which they were clearly discernible, as if the wearer had knelt.

Brown Stains on Shoes

"Was there anything else on the shoes besides what you've told us?" "A kind of brown stain."

"Is it on them now?" "No," after examining them.

"But the stain was plain enough for the pathologist to see" "It was plain enough for me."

"And for him?" "I suppose so."

Sand had been removed from the cuffs of the trousers and placed in an envelope or envelopes. Watterworth stated. He had noticed what this went to the experts for analysis and examination.

Watterworth pointed out several things that he had been present to, at the discovery, and that he was no authority on its exact location when found. He produced corroborate exactly Mr. Regan's suggestions as to the exact pitch of the ravine hill, the type of soil and so on. He wouldn't agree that the wrench could not have been thrust into the soil, hidden to a superficial assembly by someone stepping on it.

At this point a juror rose, saying: "Pardon me, Your Lordship, but shouldn't we see this wrench and sand mark? We don't know the first thing about it."

Justice Jeffrey: "I'll consider it. You must realize that conditions are rapidly changed now and that might lead to erroneous conclusions. That would be the only reason I would be hostile to such a suggestion. The court favors such examinations where the latest weather and similar factors have no effect on the conditions. However, I will seriously consider whether such a view would not assist you."

Judge Demands Answers

Sergeant Watterworth stated that Sergeant Vernon of the divisional station had conducted the search of the ravine which had revealed the wrench. The search had been requested by Inspector Whitehead but he had given no orders to end it. He could only assume that the search had been concluded and was not still proceeding.

"Now you said there was a man with this unfortunate girl—"

Justice Jeffrey: "There was no such thing said. Mr. Regan, once again I must insist you refrain from that sort of thing. That man was seen with this unfortunate girl, as you described her. It's for you to should apologize for that statement. Do you apologize?" "Certainly, my lord."

Mr. Regan, turning to witness: "I was wrong. I should have said you stated a man was seen on the same car with this girl?" "Yes."

"And he was not found?" "No."

"Now, I am informed that you asked a man to watch for a certain type of car for which you were hunting. Is that true?" "Yes."

"Will tell me the name of the man I could tell you better."

"Certainly. Hillman, proprietor of the service station where the wrench was employed." "I asked him if a Chev. touring car, black, with side curtains, was ever parked there."

Black Auto Mentioned

"And didn't you tell him to watch for that car?" "Yes."

"Didn't you get in touch with him about it?" "He got in touch with me one day about it."

Mr. McKinnon objected, claiming that this had not been brought out earlier and was not subject to cross examination.

Mr. Regan: "What I want to know is if you didn't instruct Hillman to watch for this car in connection with the girl?" "Yes."

"I mean, in connection with this case?" "Not at any time."

Mr. Regan: "But Hillman was subpoenaed to be a witness!" "His name was given to the Crown."

"And you instructed him last week he was no longer required?" "Such were my instructions from Mr. McKinnon."

Happenings at Olympics

Garmisch - Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb 11.—(CP)—With Frank Shaughnessy of Montreal and Phil in Saint, French-Canadian of Montreal, playing outstanding roles the United States team defeated Czechoslovakia 2-0 in the first of four second round games on today's Olympic hockey program.

La Baite got his first taste of actual Olympic combat, when Manager Walter Brown sent him out to team up on the American defence with Shaughnessy. The pair completely spoiling the Czechoslovakian attack and at the same time led numerous dangerous attacks on the opposing goal. La Baite got notice on both American counters which came in the second frame, Frank Synik notching the first and Johnny Garrison the second.

Officials—Erhart, England and Loke, Belgium.

Summary:—

First period—No scoring. Penalty, Spain.

Second Period—

1—United States, Spain (La Baite) 4.50

2—United States, Garrison (La Baite) 12.43

Penalty—Stubbs.

Third Period—No scoring.

Lake Placid, New York, Feb. 11. — Garmisch - Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 11. — (CP Cable) — Sweden's Canadian coached team defeated Italy 2-1 today in the second round of the Olympic Hockey Series today by scoring out Austria 1-0 on unprotected Lake Placid Reserves several miles from the Olympic villages.

The Swedes, handled by Tin Lindquist, member of Canada's team that went out the United States in the 1932 final at Lake Placid, played the winning goal in the first period.

Garmisch Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 11.—(AP)—Ivar Ballangrud, Norwegian Ace, today won the 10,000 metre skating event of the championship.

Ballangrud, all-round champion of the speed skating world, dashed around the course in 42.4 seconds, equalling the Olympic record, to capture the title by one-tenth of a second from his team-mate, Oscar Krog.

Lei Freisinger, 19-year-old Chicagoan, was third in 46 seconds; Shozo Ishihara of Japan, fourth in 46.1 seconds and Delbert Lamb of Milwaukee, fifth.

Tommy White of Saint John, N.B., got a big hand for his polishing job here Monday. His lone other North American competitors found the hard ice, a great handicap. White had little time on it and owing to the brittle ice. He finished sixth.

On the fine showing of Freisinger and Lamb, the United States moved into the unofficial team point standings for the first time since the fourth winter Olympics games opened last Thursday. Third place was held by Japan, points only five behind. Norway picked up 18 points when Ballangrud and Krog finished one-two but the Norwegian total of 23 points still is far behind Germany's 97.

The Payoff

By E. F. O'BRYAN

Johnny Jones was riding in his last race, and he was glad of it. For nearly ten years he had been a jockey and what had he to show for it? He had dreamed of a little home and a garden and a kid or two to bring up. Myrna had wanted these things, more than Johnny did. She had wanted babies most of all. But what could have babies and a home and a garden when you had to keep moving all the time, following the horses?

After the race today Johnny would have to quit. A jockey couldn't do what Johnny was going to do and ride again. He knew he would never quit unless he had to, and this race, because he had been waiting for. It was the pay-off.

In all the years Johnny had been riding he had never done a crooked thing. His record was clear and he had been proud of that record. But what had it got him? He was no nearer to that little home in the suburbs than he had been eight, ten years ago, when he started. Myrna and the babies were in a lovely-dollar apartment out in San Diego, waiting.

But today — tonight, rather — Johnny would take the train for San Diego and he would have a lot more than a hundred dollars in his pockets. Why, he would have ten times a hundred—a grand, to be exact. That was the first of the deal. And when you dealt with Mike Callahan, you got your dough.

After today Johnny had never thought of a pay-off, but after that letter from Myrna, and the message from Black Dan, Mike's right hand man, he had done a lot of thinking. Finally he had sent back word that he'd go—play ball when he'd quit. Yes, sir; he would show them he'd quit, and he'd quit right.

"All set, Johnny? Let's go. Bet you a fin you don't even show."

"O.K." Johnny said. "It's a bet." Might as well bluff it out, he thought. What was five dollars compared to the grand he'd make ten minutes Johnny would be thru with Callahan for good. But he'd have a grand. No, nine hundred and ninety-five, to be exact. He would lose that five, that was a cinch. The way it was figured out he couldn't be sure of more than that most. That would make it look good.

Johnny was riding Dixie Lad today, a good horse he had been on before and that was why Mike Callahan didn't want him to win. It would be a clean-up for Mike. For Johnny it meant a ground. More money than he had had in his pocket for months on end.

The barrier went up and they were off!

"Take it easy boy! Easy boy!" some place.

The others thundered past, the mad rush for position.

Now! Now he could begin to ease up a bit, let Dixie Lad have his head. Johnny had held him just long enough, he figured. Ahead, better than seven lengths flashed the rumps of five horses. All fast ones. Dixie Lad could run now—given his head—if and still he wouldn't be in the money. He would finish a gallant second and a good showing at the finish.

That would be all and Johnny would have a thousand dollars.

Dixie Lad was running now, putting all he had into it. What a horse! It was a crime to deal from the bottom like that. Johnny checked himself. Rotten, that's what he was.

Suddenly Johnny came up in the saddle. Something had snapped inside him. Ten years on that saddle and he'd never been crooked, and here he was calling two strides on Dixie Lad, the best horse he had ever ridden. It wasn't right.

That something that had snapped inside Johnny was his pride—pride in himself. Crooked, by God! Was him would they? And a double-cross if his own. Well, he didn't have a chance now—hardly. Maybe. It was just a sporting chance —if Dixie Lad had the stuff in him. He'd see. He'd give 'em a ride for their money anyway, even if he was nearly seven lengths in the rear.

First, Gray Shoes slipped past, then Johnny saw Skipalong sail by, as if she were running backward. Then Sandy Lad, and Thirty-Way. Ahead, and running like mad, was Dixie Lad. Johnny's shiny-cane down again and Dixie Lad slipped into high gear. Could he make it?

Yes, he'd win the five, anyway. Dixie Lad.

The roar from the stands was terrific. That crowd was getting it's money's worth today. This was a race. Dixie Lad was even with Black Daredevil. No doubt now, he was going to win!

Crooked, did they say? A quitter! Never. He'd see Mike Callahan in Hades before he'd double-cross Dixie Lad. Good old Dixie Lad! He'd come from behind the eight ball, and he'd won!

A home and a garden? Yes, some day he'd have one. Johnny thought, when he was too old to ride race horses any more.

BRITISH EXPECT SPEEDIER TRIPS WITH NEW LINER

Queen Mary Trial Runs Set For Next Month as 4,000 Workers Complete Interior

Glasgow, Feb. 11 (AP)—Towering among cranes and derricks, with workmen scrambling pigmylike on her decks, the liner Queen Mary and Gargantuan ocean liner is structurally complete. Britain's new trans-Atlantic ship dwarfs her surroundings at Clydebank, the John Brown shipyards.

On March 24, according to present plans, she will leave the Clyde on her maiden voyage, the first of her trial runs, adding 72,000 tons of displacement to Cunarder's Atlantic passenger shipping. May 27 she will start her maiden trip to New York.

It will be Britain's challenge to new speed records, and her contribution to the comfort and luxury of ocean travel. Built to cross the Atlantic in four days, the Queen Mary will carry British hopes that the mythical blue ribbon for speed may be wrested from the French Normandie on her first crossing.

English figures say the Normandie sped across the Atlantic at an average of 29 knots and made the return journey at 30.35 knots. When the Queen Mary attempts passage Admiral Chatfield, R.N., is predicted, she will have established an average westward speed of close to 32 knots.

More than 7,000 workmen have been engaged in building the Queen Mary and 4,000 still are busy with the furnishings and interior decorations. But the engines are in place, the propellers fitted and the deck lumber laid.

There will be room for 2,200 passengers. They will be able to walk a mile by taking three turns around one of the promenade decks. There will have two acres of deck space for sports.

The forward funnel is so wide that automobiles could run abreast through it.

Snowdrifts were reported nine feet deep at some points in Thrace.

High winds continued to sweep the British Isles disrupting shipping. Low temperatures combined with the wind to bring hardship to many, but no additional drownings or severe damages have been reported since the week-end gale which took seven lives.

New York, Feb. 13.—(AP)—Fire that swept through a crowded mid-Manhattan Chinese restaurant, betraying many more than 100 persons, left five dead and 42 injured today before firemen brought the blaze under control.

Two of the injured were in such serious condition they were not expected to recover.

Running through the floor, the flames quickly spread over the hanging grapes and flimsy decorations of the (Lum's) restaurant.

RURAL SCHOLARS LAUGH AT COLD

"Country Children Don't Mind Cold" Says Edu cationist

City children versus country children.

The city children in plain parlance can't take it, it was intimated by an educationist today, answering the question of whether noticeable reduction in class room attendance in rural areas was the result registered during the continued cold weather.

"Country children don't mind the cold weather; they can stand a lot more of it. But it's different in the cities. We have noticed some reduction in classes of city schools due to cold weather, but there has also been a lot of colds and sickness among the children and the marked depreciation in attendance. We haven't been troubled so much in the country."

SKATE TO MUSIC

Crowd Madly Protest, When Canadian Pair Given Low Rating

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 13.—(CP)—Ernst Baier and Maxie Herber, European and German champions, today won the figure skating pairs figure skating title before one of the largest crowds of the winter games.

Skating to music, composed by Baier, the German couple won the event on five ballots which included Reichsfuehrer Hitler, as they swung through their graceful and fast curves, difficult spins and daring jumps.

Britt and Ilse Pausin of Austria placed second.

Unofficial Performance

Canada was represented by Audrey Ostland and Fraser Sweatman of Winnipeg and Louise Bertram and Stewart Reyburn of Montreal, who put on a somewhat great enthusiasm with their sweeping loops, spirals and spins. Their performance drew rounds of applause as they skated in a pleasant range. The applause changed to derision, however, when the judges announced they had given the pair a rating for the Canadian pair.

A somewhat similar situation appeared yesterday in yesterday's hockey match between Canada and Germany occurred, while Miss Garland and Sweatman were performing. Several broke through the gate officials and grabbed any seat available. The crowd booed and hissed the Canadian somewhat.

There were 10,000 people in the stadium when the bright sunshine lent lustre to the colored costumes of the feminine competitors. It created one of the most colorful scenes of the Olympic winter games.

HOCKEY TITLE TO BE AWARDED BY PRESENT SYSTEM

Proposal to Revise System Defeated at Special Meeting

VOTE IS FIVE TO TWO

Under Present System, Canada Will Not Play England Again

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 13—(CP Cable)—A proposal for revising the present complicated system of deciding the Olympic hockey championship was defeated this evening at a special meeting of Olympic hockey authorities, by the vote was 5-2 and carry chance. Canada and Germany were the only countries favoring revision.

As matters stand now Canada by defeating Germany in the final game on tonight's program will enter the final group with England, Czechoslovakia and probably the United States. However, should the Americans win sgn 'ast Sweden tonight the American and English will enter the final with the advantage of undefeated records, while Canada will meet the surprise defeat inflicted upon her by England in the second round.

No Chance to Avenge Defeat

Making matters more complicated is the fact Canada will not have a chance to avenge her defeat by the English as under the present system a team defeating another in the first round does not meet that team in the second round. Canada's chance to play that outfit in the final.

Canada's chances in the title scramble also has won at every Olympic games therefore depends on the United States defeating England. Canada then must defeat the Americans. Should the latter defeat the Czechoslovakia not upset things, then would be a tie with the goal average deciding the winner.

AIR FORCE ARM CALLED BEST AID

Honorary Air-Marshal Bishop Tells Club of Needs

Toronto, Feb. 13.—(CP)—In the event of Another war Canada could best support and help to defend Great Britain by specialized equipment and a quota of highly efficient trained air personnel because transportation of troops and ship would be well-nigh impossible, honorary Air-Marshal William A. Bishop, V.C., and the Empire Club of Canada here today.

No alarmist, Air-Marshal Bishop felt, nevertheless, that "it is a decided one eye to the possibilities of war in the near future." He said the situation in the Mediterranean was fraught with danger.

Air-Marshal Bishop reviewed the Dominion's position with regard to making the country safe from air equipment our air force has, I prefer not to discuss at all, in the interests of the Canadian on complain that we maintain too many forces and not enough both permanent and militia. We are, I think, in a position to cope with it is the smallest in the world.

"But small as it is the air program is well balanced from the point of view of actual numbers and the proportion of the different figures of this all-important branch of our forces are staggering.

"We have only one naval permanent force, militia and Royal Canadian Air Force, a total of 5,000 air officers and men of the Royal Canadian Air Force, permanent and non-permanent. From the air point of view, I think it is a good one. I do sincerely plead that our government, both federal and provincial, and to our position in the empire, more adequate funds for the development of the Royal Canadian Air Force."

Referring to commercial aviation Air-Marshal Bishop said this was one industry which owed nothing to Canada. Every cent the government spent on it was returned many times over, he said. The most successful aviation he said "we are in a position to lead the world" was in the country of our size and population.

Furthermore, he said, the development of commercial aviation in this way so slow that compared with that of any other country—it is a disgrace."

Defence Counsel Regan Asks, Answers Queries In His Appeal to Jury

Last Stage of Trial Reached as Argument For Accused is Begun

CROWN VIEW ASSAILED

Regan Pleads All Morning And Resumes This Afternoon

Toronto, Feb 13—(CP)—Attacking the reliability of Crown evidence, Defence Counsel Frank R. Regan, K.C., pleaded before a jury today for the life of Harry O'Donnell as his trial for the ravine murder of Ruth Taylor drew near its end.

Launching into his address at the opening of Court, Mr. Regan spoke more than 2 1/2 hours up to the lunch adjournment and will finish this afternoon. The veteran counsel will be followed by Crown Counsel Hartt Boland, K.C., and Mr. Justice Nicol Jeffrey will charge and deliver his charge to the jury.

Counsel spoke on Friday.

The address of Mr. McIlraer was expected to consume the balance of the afternoon and it appeared unlikely the case would be given to the jury until tomorrow, the fifth day of the trial.

Harry O'Donnell listened with his usual calm, Mr. Regan assailed the prosecution testimony. Evidence of Coroner M. M. Crawford, M.D., he said, was "meant to insult the intelligence of the jury" and the medical doctor claimed O'Donnell could not have killed the girl on a couch in the sitting station where he worked. Dr. Crawford was the first witness.

"And may I ask you," he said to the jury, "if there is a particle in the reliability of a lot of other Crown witnesses."

Statement to Police

Explaining why the accused himself had not taken the stand, Regan declare his innocence of the 20-year-old tpist's killing, Mr. Regan said he was "perfectly satisfied on evidence a statement of O'Donnell's to reconstruct the manner night which he had given police.

"I suggest that statement," he declared, "the Crown asks you to believe it."

"I do not so." His Lordship interrupted. Mr. Regan's reply was that the statement "has already been asked to believe it."

"It was an honest statement," he exclaimed, "and it does not lie within the mouth of the Crown counsel to say that it is a deliberate statement."

Question of Blue Hairs

Blue hairs on O'Donnell's clothes, he declared, had not been proven as being those of Ruth Taylor. Even if Miss Taylor the November night she was killed, "it is not the question of the hairs, he claimed the question is the manner in which they were found."

That the blue hairs might have come from a "fur jacket" worn by Mrs. O'Donnell when her husband carried her in a makeshift hospital the day before the killing was suggested by Regan. Former Premier Hepburn, counsel for the Crown, and Minister Margaret had told of seeing the embrace while the wife wore the fur jacket.

"Utterly unreliable" evidence to the effect that O'Donnell had been given a blue bay sweater which was at the hospital at the time should be viewed with "serious misgiving."

Prisoner Absent from Court

Of a wrench with the initials "OO" found at the murder scene two days after the murder, on the girl's body, Mr. Regan declared it "has been made today by Frank Regan, K.C., veteran counsel for the 32-year-old filling station attendant on trial for murdering pretty Ruth Taylor in a ravine last May.

Opening of argument in behalf of the clean-cut young prisoner after closing stages of a 10-day trial. O'Donnell sat with his head bowed

20-year-old stenographer, found ravished and with her skull crushed in the day after she had set out from her home from work in a ravinewph, monsbee night.

Apparently unmoved by the strain of the long hearing, the slender prisoner conferred in a low voice with Mr. Regan for a moment and then he moved over to his usual corner of the dock dpd settled down with one foot propped up against the railing.

Regan Begins Address

O'Donnell's counsel, opening his address, declared the defense "of a man charged like O'Donnell is charged is not an easy task." There were menial and physical strains, he said.

The prisoner, he declared, was innocent until proven guilty. "Suspicion is not evidence," he said, "and a man cannot be found guilty on suspicion."

Evidence against O'Donnell, he said, was "wholly circumstantial, circumstantial." There was no direct evidence, he said, to show Mr. Regan said, "and never he saw O'Donnell kill this girl."

Dr. Crawford Witness With.

Six points had been produced by the crown, Mr. Regan said. First was the condition of O'Donnell's clothes, divided in turn into four points.

Blood on the clothes was first mentioned. Dr. Crawford stepped to prove cause from the girl's sweater, and on the clothing, and burns on them.

The other points were the finding of a key which had on it a certain "OO" near the spot where the girl was killed, and O'Donnell's injured hand, which the police took note of after the finding of the body.

Reconstruction of Movements

As he proceeded, Mr. Regan told the jury that O'Donnell had been taken the witness stand. "You may wonder," he said, "why O'Donnell did not take the stand. Well, the crown produced and filed a statement of his movements given to police the night of the girl's death. In presenting that statement the crown asked you to believe it.

"That is not so." Mr. Justice Nicol Jeffrey interrupted.

Mr. Regan replied "in effect", the jurist said, and told the jury to believe that statement. Indeed, he asserted, the prosecution had gone to some pains to corroborate certain parts of the story.

Turning to the injured hand, the lawyer asserted the testimony of Coroner M. M. Crawford, M.D., that O'Donnell could not have hurt it on the filling station pump was "an insult to the intelligence of the jury." "And may I ask you," he continued, "is there a particle in the reliability of a lot of other Crown witnesses."

Reconstruction of Movements

On the other hand, Mr. Regan requested the jurymen to believe Dr. H. E. Hahn, a bellhop who said he had cut for the crown and who said O'Donnell had injured on the pump.

Could Were Clothes Left Mouldy?

Turning to the condition of O'Donnell's clothes, he said it was suggested that the accused might had be committed the crime, would have left the clothes stored in them "for the world to see".

Mr. Regan declared it was that O'Donnell had muddied his pants working around the gas station, handling tires and changing automotive tires. "Could anything be more natural?" he asked.

That's a link in the crown's chain of evidence, he said, "I refuse it alone to find this man guilty? And always remember a chain is no stronger than its weakest link."

Struggle and Condition of Clothes.

Dr. Hahn's story "Hero" strongly which witnesses had said preceded the girl's death, in a struggle that

In every banker in which to detect the bogus coins is by the irregular bright lustre, reports say.

TAX RESOLUTION BRINGS DIVISION IN LEGISLATURE

Vote is 56-16, As Conservatives Attack Measure

ASK STATEMENT

Financial Condition Will be Given Budget Day Says Nixon

Toronto, Feb. 13 (CP)—Consideration of the Throne speech stirred the Ontario Legislature today with a St. Clair Gordon Cleaver-Kent Wentworth debate in reply and J. H. Mareous (L.D. Nipissing) moving C. H. H. Ilsley's seconder final after the speeches, the House will turn to the Provincial Income Tax Act.

The bill provided the subject of a two-hour opposition assault on the administration yesterday and the attack culminated in the first division of the session. Conservatives demanded the government show the necessity for the bill by a disclosure of the Province's financial condition.

A resolution, paving the way for the bill, was introduced by committee by Hon. Paul Leduc, Minister of Mines. When the resolution was approved 56-16 after the opposition onslaught, the Conservatives, introduced a motion to refer it back to the committee of the whole House "for the government to lay before the committee such data and information as will provide reasons why the government finds it necessary to increase taxation instead of decreasing it as they had promised." The vote was 56-16 against the resolution.

Asks For Statement

Opposition Leader George S. Henry hurled the first Conservative challenge for a revelation of the condition of the Province's finances. He was followed by Arthur Hill, (Lib., Wellington), Earl Beatty, Toronto High Park, and Leopold Macaulay, North Bruce.

The people of Ontario asked why the increased taxation was imposed by a government which had promised there would be no increase in taxation but rather a cut in taxation, Mr. Henry declared.

He read from Premier Hepburn's election speeches promising reduced governmental costs and this brought from Premier Harry Nixon the declaration the government had made a four per cent. reduction in publishing the objective.

"Give us figures to prove it, not merely words, give us something from the records," Mr. Henry demanded.

Since the government had been in power, he said, there had increased $60,000,000, declared Arthur Hill. Every ballot cast, every bit of whiskey, every share of the $15,000,000 revenue to be obtained by the income tax and succession taxation would boost prices and professional fees.

Greatest Ever Levied Claimed

He declared the tax bill was the greatest one ever levied in the Province and asserted the government's wealth by taxation it would be increasing municipal taxes in every municipality.

Every member of the cabinet, said Mr. Macaulay, had a statement on file showing the gross debt on Jan. 4, but he demanded that Hon. Nixon be disclosed but Mr. Nixon replied this would come on budget day. Mr. Macaulay declared the government was not prepared to give the financial statement of the Province's finances.

ADJOURNMENT IN SENATE TILL 25TH.

Liberal Members Praise Articles in Throne Speech

Ottawa, Feb. 13 (CP)—The Senate will likely adjourn today until Feb. 25, Senator Hodge was given yesterday by Sen. Raoul Dandurand of a motion to take a recess until that date when the Chamber adjourned, either today or tomorrow.

Yesterday the Upper House concluded its debate on the address in reply to the speech from the Throne, adopted it, paid tribute to the memory of the late Senator Charles Marcil and heard Senator J. J. Hughes of Prince Edward Island ask for more vigorous enforcement of the anti-smuggling laws.

Senator Dandurand's remarks were in the nature of a reply to Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, who Tuesday night delivered an attack against the address. Citing each paragraph in turn, Mr. Dandurand voiced approval of them.

He praised the proposal to establish an unemployment commission, endorsed the Canada-United States trade agreement and hotly supported the government's expressed policy to restore to parliament authority over taxation and money matters.

The government leader applauded Senator Meighen's sentiments regarding functions of the Senate. While there were differences of opinion in the Upper House, these were not as a rule so forcibly expressed as in the Commons, he said. He believed it was the Senate's duty to review legislation judicially and without partisan prejudice.

HAUPTMANN GETS NEW COUNSEL

S. S. Leibowitz Agrees "If Hauptmann Will Tell Truth"

New York, Feb. 13 (AP)—Samuel S. Leibowitz, New York criminal lawyer, said today he had agreed to enter the Hauptmann case after a conference with Mrs. Richard Bruno Hauptmann, "if Hauptmann would tell the truth."

At the conclusion of an hour and a half conference with the attorney in his office, Mrs. Hauptmann left for Trenton State Prison where her husband is confined in the death house, awaiting execution for the slaying of the Lindbergh baby. Leibowitz indicated he would visit Hauptmann there tomorrow.

The attorney said he was convinced the entire story of the crime had not been told and termed speculation" the assumption only one man was involved.

He criticized both the defence and prosecution in Hauptmann's trial at Flemington, N.Y., and added only one man could save Hauptmann from the electric chair and that is Hauptmann himself.

A debate, "Resolved that Home Missions present a greater challenge than Foreign Missions" was the major feature of the program for the Young People's Union, in the United Church on Monday evening. The affirmative was upheld by Miss Martha Treverton and Mrs. Fred Smith, who assisted for her daughter, Miss Olive, who was ill, and the negative was supported by Miss Olive Smith and Miss Mary Clark. Beatty, The judges were Mrs. Eric Downes, Mrs. J. F. Everson and Mr. Percy Ray. Mrs. Harry Harrison acted as time keeper. The judges decided in favor of the negative.

Some of the points produced by the affirmative were that there is ample opportunity for work in Canada; it can be done more effectively and with smaller cost; we must Christianize our own people for we have little influence with foreigners; foreigners won for Christ in this land do but little work, and some sixty-five different countries are represented here with them, while missionary work is being carried on in only a few countries abroad; brotherly love must be established and race prejudice broken down; as home work is the work at home employs more people.

Home points were met by the negative were: Christianize the foreigner in the midst of us and stop Communism and Fascism from ever reaching Canada; Christianity cannot be judged by numbers alone, unless it is applied everywhere; the need is greater in foreign lands on account of the disease and wretchedness found; the example of Toyohiko Kagawa is reached a whole nation is affected;-foreign missions make a greater demand for faith and present greater sacrifices from the missionary; the foreign is representative of the worldwide and if he is Christian he will be a strong leader. Judges decided in favor of the negative.

The meeting was closed by the Mizpah Benediction. A delicious lunch was served by the Plainfield Young People.

OLD HIGHWAYS RECONSTRUCTED

Modern traffic does demand a heavy heavy highway be constructed near what might be termed a permanent road. In the Speech from the Throne in the Ontario Legislature this week, it was pointed out that the time for superseding when some of the older highways will have to be reconstructed. Some of these roads are well known for their condition which cannot now be described as permanent. One of the factors which is calling attention to the road condition is the tourist traffic, for tourists have rushed many a complaint about the condition of some of the highway in the western part of the province.

The great weight of traffic which some of these western provincial roads have had to bear naturally has caused their disintegration.

Eastern Ontario is fortunately in a better condition at the present time, but in the course of time they will begin to show the strain of the unceasing traffic, day and night, summer and winter, of private car and heavy transport.

What will hold up against this tremendous weight in motion? Is there a permanent road?

RIGHT-THINKING

Right-thinking is a key to health and success, claimed Rev. Dr. M. J. MacLeod of the Collegiate Reformed Church of St. Nicholas in New York. He held that the fabric of thought is immortal and is part of us and we feel as we think. "You can and should be the master of your thoughts. Then you can rout the evil temptations. Try to think fine thoughts and you will have nothing to fear. The sun is brighter when a man is good. Every wrong we do makes the world meaner. Every good we do makes the world happier."

Although Lincoln had been a success and riches of affection had become to him, he believed beyond his days. The First Twentieth Baptist Church, New York. "He was a man who could say, "I care not, who stands with me, for I stand with God". Mr. Twomey also pointed to the case of Ann Hutchinson who did not seek the crowd, but stood firm for her convictions, for when the church banished her from the colony, she migrated to Rhode Island. She stood for the Living God and cared little what others thought of her."

Rabbi Wise in the Free Synagogue speaking of the arming of the nations said, "In one respect we have gained immensely. Today we face facts. We now know that war, political autocracy, miseries of human conditions and injustice are not to be overcome and dissipated by slogans. We must face the facts, war against them, fight them until they are overcome."

ALTERNATIVE TO DEMOCRACY

"A few years ago it was fashionable in certain Canadian circles to assert that what this country needed was a Mussolini," says London Advertiser. "As the implications of fascism in Italy became more obvious, enthusiasm for Il Duce and his methods gradually waned in the breasts of his admirers in this country. The Mussolinis have been superseded by a more modern cult, whose devotees say that our economic difficulties are the result of unnecessary interference by politicians with the natural processes of business. The revised slogan is, "What we need is a real business man to run this country."

Principal Hamilton Fyfe of Queen's University, speaking at Kingston, dealt with this attitude. He admitted that there are a great many people ready to brand democracy as a fraud and a failure, but warned them to remember the alternatives and see how they like them. He told of the move for the establishment of a 'business government controlled by business experts.' He felt that he was not convinced of the need for such measures and doubted their effectiveness.

Finally, Principal Fyfe pointed out, is the instinctive desire of humanity upon which democracy is based. Democracy implies as much freedom as is consistent with the independence necessary in a community. In order for all to have the maximum possible freedom, they must accept certain restrictions, which prevent some from dominating others. No other system has shown the ability to carry this into practice in a manner to compare with democracy.

"Principal Fyfe might have gone on to say that various self-styled experts have demanded that their countrymen sacrifice the freedom guaranteed by democracy for a measure of economic security which only the superior efficiency of a government of experts, implicity obeyed, could provide. In every instance the people of Europe have found that they have lost their freedom without advancing a single step toward the goal of economic security.

"It is easy enough to deride the futility of politics and the muddle-headedness of politicians, but, as Principal Fyfe points out, it is well to consider the alternative."

"MUTINY OF THE BOUNTY", "MEN AGAINST THE SEA", "PITCAIRN ISLAND," three intensely interesting stories, based on fact, have pleased many thousand people, in books and on the screen.. Nordhoff and Hall, those two young adventurers, who went to the South Seas for adventure and elected to stay there certainly caught the local color both human and otherwise with which to tint their stories of the survivors of His Majesty's good ship Bounty and reveal the joys and sorrows of interesting folk far out of the beaten path. Now these young men have brought forth another volume in the South Seas, "The Hurricane" which tells the story of the simple native folk, of the grand old missionary, Father Paul, who had no wish to return to the world of men and women. There were too many simple souls to save and wounds to heal in his widesweept parish which encompassed many leagues of land and sea. Then in all its glory, awful majesty and terrifying strength of a hurricane which wiped out many communities on the low-lying coral atolls and islands—and even swept away Father Paul, with his devoted flock gathered about him as he prayed for protection from the storm god—and their God saw fit to gather their souls to his eternal bosom while the gods of the storm chanted a requiem of ruin and destruction which could not touch their living souls. Read "The Hurricane" its worth while.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 12, 1916.

Belleville Juniors look like champs. They beat St. Andrew's of Toronto here 10 to 0. Dave Arnott's youngsters put another nick in their gun when they hung the scalp of the Tech boys of St. Andrew's College team to their belt to repose alongside of the appiece of the late lamented Lindsay aggregation. If the like of the game they are going at now the afore-mentioned belt will be pretty well decorated before the season is over. The game was one of the fastest that ever were staged on local ice and gives promise of some snappy games ever to be made to extend themselves to their fullest. They had the game in hand from the middle of the second period and there was nothing to it from then to the end of the game. In the first half our lads secured somewhat the best of the ends from the big town and let them run in three. Once we're thinking that in this one was somewhere in the offing and tailed to the last like a Dutch uncle in the dressing room. When they came on for the second period it was a different team and before the period was half over they had the Saints tied up in a knot. It was worth the price of admission to watch the change of expression on the people's faces as our boys commenced to pile up the lead. Everyone loves a winner and the kids could tuck themselves away in the stalls with the feeling that Belleville was satisfied with the night's work. The band was there working overtime and played "Hail, Hail The Gang's All Here" when Lawson Whitehead of Toronto, Belleville's old comrade sang the bell for the teams to line up. It did look as if we were well at one stage of the game for our lads so to brighten things up Dick put on a couple of vaudeville acts by wrestling bouts by members of the broom gang—this to the amusement of the fans, and Bill Bimm left the ice in the second section to give the lads a bit of fatherly advice in the dressing room. The ninth goal was a humdinger of a shot and it came so fast it knocked the goal tender down as he was he was floundering on the ice. Gunner sneaked up and took the puck from behind the net, scooped it around and in. You would have thought that Gunner had the puck glued to his stick. Gunner is sure there around the net. A cleaner game has never been pulled off on local ice. Referee Whitehead, who is an old Belleville boy, did himself credit in handling the game. A very good time was had on the part of the visitors who looked after the comfort of the game. As the bell rang at the close of the third period one of the Toronto boys extended his hand to one of the nearby Belleville victors and cordially congratulated him and all the team. The following composed the teams: Belleville—Nurse, Lynn, Holway, Whalin, Arnott, Armstrong. Green. St. Andrew's College — Willoughby, Whittaker, Tould, Wallace, Watson, Cameron, Bole.

Another Belleville boy advances to the front in the New City. On the year 1880 one of Belleville's youngest boys, about eleven years of age, left for Chicago to make a start in the cabinet world and obtained a position at simple service with the Royal Baking Powder Company. Now he is Mr. F. J. Bowlby, boss of New York City, and who pays a visitor, accompanied by his wife, at the last Old Boys' Reunion here. Mr. Bowlby has been appointed recently to the position of president of this twenty-million-dollar concern at a salary of $20,000.00 a year, having grown from a small boy in the office to fill the president's chair. Mr. Bowlby has been elected also recently as a member of the board of directors of the Greenwich Bank, one of the oldest banks in New York. Mr. Bowlby is a son of Mrs. William Bowlby of this city, who is leaving today to take up her residence with her son who resides at Brooklyn, N.Y.

JURY ADDRESSED BY JUDGE, COUNSEL

Expec O'Donnell Case Will Be in Hands of Jury Before Nightfall

Toronto, Feb. 13 (CP)—The jury trying Harry O'Donnell on a charge of murdering Lawrence Ruth Tadd in a gloomy eastend ravine listened to addresses of opposing counsel yesterday preparatory to the summing up of evidence by Mr. Justice Nicol Jeffery.

Lawyers defending the 23-year-old gasoline station attendant against the charge of killing the stenographer into the ravine near midnight last Boxing Day and later ravished her dramatically completed the addresses of evidence yesterday by resting their cases.

Today Frank Regan and R. H. Saunders, defence counsel, argued the case of the slim, quiet, curly-haired prisoner. They were to be followed by J. C. McRuer for the Crown.

As argument started is was expected the case might go to the jury by nightfall.

Closing stages of evidence emphasized the importance of the prosecution's claim 234 tiny fibres allegedly found on accused's clothing came from the blue rabbit hair sweater the 20-year-old victim wore the night she was born by a blow on the head.

Margaret O'Donnell, sister of accused, was called to the stand by the defence to testify O'Donnell's wife wore a blue bed-jacket when he visited her in hospital and embraced her the day before the murder.

Mrs. Beadle Back, matron at the private maternity hospital, was recalled to the stand by crown counsel, however, and denied Mrs. O'Donnell wore a bed-jacket that day or at any time while she was in the hospital.

DESPONDENCY IS GIVEN AS CAUSE OF TWO DEATHS

Aged Woman Foisons 13 Year Old Niece And Then Herself

BROTHER FINDS BODIES

Note is Left as to Arrangements For Funerals

London, Ont., Feb. 13 (CP)—Despondency over the death of her aged mother was believed by police today to have caused Miss Myrtle Terry, 42, to poison her niece, 16-year-old Helen Toser, and then take her own life in the same manner.

All three deaths occurred within a few hours last night. George Terry of Windsor, brother of Myrtle, discovered the double tragedy when he broke into his sister's apartment. He had come to the city in response to his sister's phone-call advising him of the death of his mother, Mrs. Jemima Terry, 84, whose body had been removed to the undertakers.

Entering the apartment by forcing a trap-door, George came upon the girl's body on the floor near the stairway. She apparently was attempting to flee the apartment when the poison took effect.

On a single bed in the apartment lay his sister, fully dressed and covered with blood. A bottle containing what was believed poisonous powder and notes directing disposal of the bodies were on the floor beside the bed.

Attempted To Run Away.

In reconstructing events leading up to the death of the woman and her niece, police declared after Miss Terry had given the girl the fatal dose that she had attempted to run from the apartment.

In attempting to restrain the girl, a scuffle ensued in which the older woman cut about the face when her head was pushed through a window.

The notes, signed "M. Terry" were addressed to two executors. They contained exact instructions as to the arrangements for the services and burial of both aunt and niece, the clothing to be worn and time of burial.

Coroner J. C. Wilson who examined the bodies said the girl appeared to have been dead about two hours and the older woman slightly more than an hour when their bodies were discovered.

Miss Toser's mother had died when she was quite young and her aunt had raised her since then.

It was the second piece of tragic news for the father, John Toser. Earlier in the day he had been informed his brother, Chester, had dropped dead at Flint, Mich.

Advice to the Lovelorn
By Beatrice Fairfax

Has Never Spoken to the One He Loves.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For the past year she has been coming to see her girl friend who lives across the street from us. I never paid any particular attention to her until about seven months ago when I fell desperately in love. I have never bolted another girl since then.

She is about four or five years younger than I am, and I feel that we were really made for each other and that true love will bring us together in the future. Of course, I could talk to her without an introduction, but that would be unworthy of the way I feel and the way I imagine she feels toward me.

Must I continue to sit by the window and wait?

Patient Lover.

It should not be so difficult for you to get an introduction to this girl since she visits regularly in your neighborhood. Your feeling that you do not wish to "crash" an acquaintance does you credit.

My advice is to look less and act more. Get some mutual friend or acquaintance to introduce you properly. Here's wishing you good luck.

Bad Temper and Many Divorces in His Family Make Her Hesitate.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My two brothers and one sister are all happily married, while his brother and sister have been married but are now divorced. His mother and father are also divorced. These divorces are the reason my family will me to quit him.

His only fault, as far as I am concerned, is a terrible temper which he tries to correct. I've been the victim of his temper on several occasions, but he is always heartbroken after such outbursts and tries hard to make up for it. Are these divorces in his family an indication of trouble ahead? I'm 22 years of age.

Worried.

Perhaps the young man's temper, which may be an inheritance, is the cause of so many divorces in his immediate family. You should take this matter, if the case is very seriously into consideration. Outbursts of temper are pretty hard things to live with, and at 22 you have time to consider this question seriously.

Your family, who knows him, is opposed to your marriage.

Fear He'd Be a Bad Risk as a Husband.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

He has told me more than once that he is good, and I shouldn't be bothered with him. I never took that seriously until lately, when I discovered he runs about with other women.

Naturally, I told him. He didn't deny it, and only said: "I told you I'm no angel." He declares he loves me and it not happy with anyone else. He has talked of marriage but as a husband I'm afraid he'd be a bad risk.

Do you think I should marry him?

Loretta.

I agree with you, my dear Loretta, that as a husband he would be a bad risk. He runs around with other women but claims he is happy only with you. Then why the running about? He can't have your cake and eat it too. Don't waste much time in the way of a character, or he wouldn't confess to the thing that makes him unhappy.

SERVICE PLATES

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

May service plates be used on the informal dinner tables? If so, do they remain in place until the table is served.

2. May the very small individual salt and pepper shakers be used on the informal dinner table?

3. Would two of those little china figures or statues be all right to use on the informal dinner table instead of the usual centrepiece filled with fruit or flowers?

M.

1. Service plates are usually not used on an informal table unless there is service in the household. This is sensible, since the removing of the service plates means another service gesture, usually by the hostess without) service tries to limit the motions of the maid. If service plates are used on an informal table, they must not be decorative plates, for that is obviously, would not be appropriate. If you do use service plates, they should remain in place until dinner plates that are placed for the main course.

2. Yes.

3. Yes. Figures often are charmingly effective and artistically placed as decorative details on the centre of an informal dinner table. They may be used alone, or with the centrepiece, instead, say, of comports.

INTRODUCTIONS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a girl takes a man with her to call on a friend and her family whom he has never met, the girl would, of course, present Mr. R. to Miss S, the hostess. Then should the girl, or the hostess, present the young man to the mother and the other members of the family as they enter the room later?

Subscriber.

Either may make this introduction. Of course it always seems much more hospitable for the hostess to make this introduction or guests in her room, but very often the girl, or the hostess, finds she has not "caught" the name correctly, and so there is an awkward second or two. The girl then steps into the breach and makes the introduction, as she should.

SIGNED PHOTOGRAPH

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please advise me as to a suitable line or so to write on my picture? I am graduating and would like to give my picture to a few intimate friends.

G.

The message that you write on your photographs depends so much, naturally, on the degree of friendship that you have with the person to whom you are giving the photograph that it is difficult to suggest an exact wording. But there are certain words and phrases that you could always use, for instance, the well known word "greeting"—there is a changing and warm-hearted word that is appropriate for many kinds of messages. "Friendly" too is another warm-hearted and happy word. And combined they carry pleasant connotations: "friendly greetings". This can be made more special by "raising" the "friendly" to "friendliest".

I'd closer friends you might write "With dearest love" or "With devotion and deep friendship."

But I like best of all either the un-autographed photograph, which delightfully indicates that the person to whom you give the photograph will take the message for granted, or, second best, the message "To Florence, from Betty," which has also a taking-for-granted-from-me-to-you quality.

ANOTHER WAY OF SIGNING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I received a Christmas card from an acquaintance. This card was not signed. Enclosed in the envelope was a personal card. Does this entirely eliminate the necessity of an acquaintance wishes me to call on her?

T.

No. Some people, instead of signing their names, prefer to enclose a visiting card with the greeting card. The visiting card is only a substitute for signing the card, a more formal way.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The February meeting of the W. M. S. of Hammond United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Knight on Thursday, Feb. 6 with seventeen ladies present. Mrs. (Rev.) Clarke, president, took charge of the meeting and Mrs. H. Foster acted as pianist. After the opening hymn all repeated the Lord's Prayer. Mrs. Robert McDonald read the devotional leaflet entitled "The spirit of Jesus at work" and Mrs. Clarke led in prayer.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. Mrs. Robertson read a letter sent to Mrs. Everett Stanton, supply secretary, regarding allocation in this work, asking for children's clothing. After some discussion it was decided to ask each member to contribute not less than ten cents at the May meeting to buy material to be made into children's clothing, or grown clothing also will be acceptable. Mrs. Allen MacDonald expressed thanks for the card of sympathy sent at the time of the death of her son-in-law. Mrs. Arthur Houston thanked the ladies for the card of sympathy sent to her at the time of the death of her sister.

Mrs. Clark read a paper entitled "How may we make 1936 a profitable year?" Roll call was "Items of interest, secretary, members responding by naming a woman of the Bible or a memory verse for our last Study, George V. The temperance reading was given by Mrs. W. Robertson and the second chapter of the study book on Africa was taken by Mrs. W. S. Dee.

Collection was then taken amounting to $2.90 and the meeting closed by 96 cents. After the closing hymn all repeated the Mizpah Benediction. The hostess served a delicious lunch and a social time was enjoyed together.

HEALTH and PSYCHOLOGY
By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.

Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

There is such a thing as being over-ambitious. I have no brief against the desire to strive for the very highest, to want to achieve Grade A excellence; to possess the impulse to achieve greatly.

The trouble is that the individual often wants to arrive at the goal of his ambition too quickly. Small wonder, really, that so many slipshod, hasty, careless methods have crept into business and manufacture. The professions also have their many men and women who are poorly prepared.

In the rush and rush to compete with and outrun the other fellow, solid foundations for genuinely great and lasting achievements are not laid down, with the result that the superstructure, overweighted as it is, sooner or later crashes.

Often a business progresses too rapidly for its own good. A restaurant, let us say, which gains a reputation for good food and exemption-al service, becomes so popular that both food and service detect rate. Although a few patrons desert in disgust, a crowd swamps the kitchen and everything goes down.

Often a young man becomes a lawyer, or a doctor, or engineer without the proper background and the mental training so necessary for acceptance in his chosen profession. He starts making a living sooner than those of his age who first master the preliminaries. These cut-and-dried rooms catch up and surpass him later on, even though he got an early start.

It is not wise to take short cuts in life. We must not expect to obtain the best too easily.

Epictetus wrote: "No great thing is created suddenly." It is unfortunate that American can point to many men who "arrived" overnight. Youth, bearing of such cases, is fired with enthusiasm to repeat the performance.

As a result, men and women become restless and impatient. They are not willing to wait. They are not willing to pay the price necessary for the shouldering of big things.

Although it is perfectly true that people occasionally have good luck, it does not always follow that they could win their way to fame and gained.

A man may happen to become the head of controlling interest in a big business because of a turn in the stock market. But will such a man be able to hold his new power? Will he be able to make good?

It is always wisest to push forward your goal only a little at a time—it is best to advance gradually and surely, always making sure that what has been gained.

Always prepare yourself for the next rung of the ladder before you try to step on it. Don't be overconfi dent in your experiences.

Don't hitch your chariot to the star of that man whom you are not willing to learn the business from the ground up until the date when the grand achievement to take place.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Milk is a food not a beverage and should not be used as a thirst quencher. It should only be gulped but sipped slowly and thoroughly "mouthed." In other words, the advice which child specialists give their young patients—to "chew their milk"—is also excellent for adults. In this way, the coagulated lumps which form in the stomach are small and are readily acted upon by digestive secretions.

Phoebe's Oil Stock
By LOUISE RAYMOND

"There!" exclaimed John Chambers turning the key in the old lock, "that's over!" He swung down the trim, box-bordered path, out through the garden gate, and along the elm-shaded dirt road that led to the railroad station.

So intent was he on calching the afternoon train to the city that he failed to notice the slim girl coming up just behind him. She halted because it was, in all probability, the last she would ever see of John Chambers.

Nor did she need the "For Sale" sign which John had just tacked up to know what for sale had been town gossip—namely, that the last of the Chambers had reached the mastery of living of his fathers and was going to the city to seek his fortune.

There had never been a love affair between them. Oh, on the interchanges of looks of hair in very high school days, numerous church sociables and picnics shared together—trivial enough bonds, to be sure, but—well, there was an ache in Phoebe Holmes' heart which told her that there was something to beat.

As the days passed, the sight of the shuttered old Chambers house, fast showing signs of unoccupancy, filled her with loneliness.

The farm, unsold and untenanted, was overrun with weeds. This condition with reports which drifted back to Phoebe's ears—well, things were not fortune was proving elusive and that he was shifting from one job to another. Phoebe smiled at the thought of the waste of good material and of her own longing to be the reclaimer.

On a sunny day in late March Phoebe stood on the doorstep of the one aunt with whom she lived.

"Aunt Sara," she gave out calmly over her cup of tea, "I'm going to spend next week-end in the city."

Aunt Sara's tea-cup rattled startled. "Of all things, Phoebe!"

"I've got a little shopping I want to do," returned Phoebe unperturbed. "And furthermore—do you remember Bertha Stock—she's the girl that Cousin Jenny left me? Well, I'm going to see them also. Mrs. Stock knows perhaps they're not as wealthy as they were before—I suppose—" and her blue eyes grew dreamy, "perhaps they will bring me luck."

Now it happened that several days after Phoebe's announcement Mrs. Stock into the outer office of Camby and Cambly, brokers, a shabby looking fourth with tired lines about his eyes and mouth. A sound of voices from the inner office caused him that his employer was occupied, and he sank into a chair. Many days rested his head on his hand while his thoughts took him backward over the discouraging months. Where was he headed? This all but question-ing in an inner office employer was at present held out no future for him. John, who had taught by bitter experiences, he was learning the lesson that he was to compete with men trained for their jobs.

Into his meditations crept memories of days of green fields ripened by his father and his grandfather before him—prosperous days. The substantial barns, of the cheery, homely dwelling. And with these memories arose persistently the picture of a certain slim, blue-eyed person in the midst of the fields, whom, in his feverish pursuit of fortune, he had all but forgotten.

John Chambers sat suddenly upright.

Who in thunder was in the inner office talking with old Cambly?

—Is it bad luck to bring on a plaintive voice that awoke in him a sudden, tremendous response, to realize something on this stock. You see I've had a chance to confide in a did investment. I can buy the old Chambers place back home. It is a farm, farmed by a prosperous young man who knew how to husband the resources of the soil. But the bond certificates are worthless, as you say—"

"—why, why, Phoebe!" was all he managed. Then: "Wait—let me walk a mile with you."

For several blocks, through the streaming late afternoon traffic of which neither was aware, they walked silently. Phoebe was the first to speak. "John," she said gently, "the—the bluets are up in the swamp pasture. And Dutchman's breeches. Remember how we used to go after them?"

"Do I!" exclaimed John fervently. Then he turned impulsively. "Phoebe!" he cried. "I'm sick of it all—the hurry, the noise, the crowds. —oh, Phoebe, I'm going back home!"

But not until their very wedding day did John tell her the real secret of Phoebe's trip to the city. "I can't bear to think," he had chanced to say as they stood for a moment side by side on the porch that draped porch of the old homestead after a simple ceremony at Phoebe's home, "oh you, my darling, travelling about the city trying to get rid of worthless old stock. You need a husband to keep you from such things."

But Phoebe drew back her pretty head with a merry laugh. "Why, John Chambers!" she cried gayly, "of course I knew they were no good. Only—well, those certificates furnished me with the proper excuse for going to the place I had heard you speak about. You see, the first time I saw you, I thought—I hoped—"

"You did!" said her husband and kissed her tenderly.

Little Benny's Note Book

Today in school Miss Kitty was telling us about prose and poetry, saying, Poetry is often necessary to express our finer and more delicate feelings. This is a very appropriate time to mention the subject because tomorrow is Valentine's day. Valentines and verses will speed through the mails during the day. Valentines must not be expressed merely so well in everyday language or prose. Now I'm sure you can all write a little original vaseline in simple verse. Can you think so? she said.

With everybody raised their hand meaning they could and Miss Kitty gave out paper and Shorty bought a big slice of the first and waved his hand and read it, being

You remind me of a violet
With a golden dish,
You're as pritty as a picture
And as sweet as a rose.

Well, I cant deny that a fish is graceful, but the comparison is unusual to say the least, Miss Kitty said. I had hoped for a more delicate violet on a golden dish is quite imaginative. I suppose Horace was thinking of beautiful blue eyes and golden hair, instead you, Howard? she said.

I guess so, Shorty said, and Frank Stokes waved his hand and read his valentine being

I been all around the world 6 times
And I been all around decive
I've never saw anyone elss like you
Or it would have been more than I could do

A lady mite possibly take that in an unflattering sense whose next? Miss Kitty said.

Which I was, mine being

Flowers smell lovely to the smell
And food to the sight is fine,
But you beet them both put together
So be my Valentine.

Now, suppose we go on to arithmetic, Miss Kitty said.

Which we did feeling against it.

WING OF CONVENT PREY TO FLAMES

Damage is Estimated at $100,000 Following Four Hour Fire

Montreal, Feb. 13 (CP)—Built in 1863 by the Sis. Cecilia wing of the Villa Maria Convent was a mass of frozen debris today following a four-hour fire last night, which swept through the three-storey building, damage estimated at $100,000 in its wake.

In rescuing six boarders temporarily located in the wing, Mother Ste. Alphonse was severely burned about the face and wrists. She was reported in fair condition. She wished to stay at the convent and give what help she could to her frightened sister-nuns, but was taken to hospital.

Firemen under the veteran Chief Canaon, concentrated on preventing the fire from spreading to the historic main buildings erected in 1941. The colonial style building was the residence of Lord Elgin until 1854, when the property was bought by the congregation of Notre Dame.

Precious relics of the early British occupancy in Lower Canada, paintings, chime clocks, panelled woodwork and highboy mahogany bedsteads were saved. Considerably damaged, however, were the inlaid floors of the main building.

The Barrier

By IRNE MORTON

When Janet got off the night train at the quiet little town of Hinsville she went directly to her home. Had her neighbors known that she planned to return, there would have been many invitations extended to the lonely girl who was coming back alone after her trip abroad with her invalid mother.

She had told no one of her coming, for she had been too heartsick to write. She had the faintest of a spasmodic attempt to return to the places she knew; and as she drew in long breaths of the sweet country air, she felt she had done the right thing.

The Scott home was at the very outskirts of the village and near only one house, the Smith house, which was next door, with large grounds and many trees about it. Therefore, when Janet set all her doors and windows wide open the next morning there was no one near enough to observe. "I suppose the neighbors can tell my smoke," thought the girl as she lighted the fire.

She bustled about, hoping to set the place in spotless order before the advent of the neighbors she longed to see, and it was nearly 10 o'clock before she heard a knock at the door.

Why, Janet Scott, why didn't you let us know you were coming home?" A pair of arms was thrown warmly about the slim, blue-gingham waist aroused her.

"Just came last night," she said. "I knew how good you would be, but I just thought I'd creep in and surprise you all."

Amy patted her arm gently. "Well, you've done it, child. And last night here alone. I'll be over again to get you for dinner."

"I was planning all morning and I can't bear to think of going out," Janet said. "I'll be at home and I'm going to open a bottle of grape juice. It's full blocks of the plant"

"There are several people I know of now," the hotel has shown closed all winter and the teacher from the village school is looking about out for a place to board next fall — and—" Amy's voice trailed off. The old friend suddenly halted with twinkling eyes and stood as though thinking. "And what?" asked the girl.

"Nothing," was the evasive reply. "Didn't you feel afraid so far away from people, to be here last night?" Janet shook her head.

"For now the Smith house has the name of being haunted. Did your hear anything?"

"No," she answered, why they don't rent it? Seems a shame for such a fine place to fall into decay." Amy turned Janet, a delicate pink staining her pearl smooth cheek as she called the quarrel between the two families. The feud had grown out of a mere trifle. It had been over by Janet's little brother had broken down a part of the Smith fence, and touchy old Mrs. Smith had threatened suit until the two families were on terms of bitter enmity.

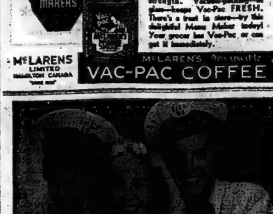
For a time the girl had a jumble thoughts, hurried over her dusting. She wanted to get out into the open. Presently she could see the flowers that she had longed for on the Smith lawn. The yellow jonquils sadly in need of pruning, warmed against the dark bush of lowering pine and trailed in long, thorny sprays along the fence. Lilac bushes dotted with blossoms of pink and white clover. To the east the orchard was in bloom and from the thick row of lilacs that divide the Smith property from the family estate. "There, no one has touched those bushes for years," Janet thought, recalling the old happy times when Frank squeezed through the fence to meet her for hikes and calling lilac trees. "Those branches are a disgrace, and that hedge, my hedge. I guess I'll just start right there with my trimming shears."

She worked steadily and there was a growing pile of branches at the fence line. Suddenly she was startled by a voice behind her, a masculine and touched with a crisp annoyance.



"Say, that was a crashing sound and gray tweed arm made an opening in the hedge, and presently a pair of brown eyes peered through. "Oh, Janet Scott, I might have known it! I happen to be the—why, Janet, hello! I didn't know you were home. Why didn't you let us know?" In his voice that brought a rush of boyish pleasure that had gone white.

"And I," returned Janet, "understood that your home was empty except for ghosts, so I thought I'd come home. Like you, I'm crowding my budge," she added a bit hysterically as the dark eyes dwelt disconcertingly on her.

"There's room in the house," he said seriously, "ghosts of our memories—ghosts of an old love affair and a lost friendship. I was just about to close up the old house and offer it for sale, but now it seemed to know where you were and—" he paused, then added, "Suppose Janet, the dark eyes glowed and he bent closer, "suppose you come through the hedge and help me keep the ghosts away in the Smith house?"

"Perhaps I will," returned the girl, eyes starry with joy. "You certainly need help with your lilac trees."

Accomplices in Death of King Alexander Sentenced to "Life"

Aix-en-Provence, Feb. 13—(CP-Havas)—The three Croat accomplices of Peter Kalemen, assassin of King Alexander of Jugoslavia and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou at Marseilles on October 10, 1934, were sentenced last night to life imprisonment as hard labor in the French Ordana prison colony.

Zvonimir Pospechil, Ivan Rajlich and Mio Kral, members of the Ustachi Terrorists' band charged with complicity in the Jugoslav monarch's death, were all convicted, with extenuating circumstances.

The court passed death sentences in absentia upon the three alleged masterminds in the plot—Dr. Ante Pavelitch, Ustachi chief, Egon Kvaternik and Col. Ivan Perevrich. Pavelich is in jail in Italy. His extradition to France was refused.

Is This a System

By HAL G. VERMES

McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WUN Service

The craziest system ever figured out by a lunatic would look very good indeed to a dumb cluck like Monkey Mickson. For many years now his old standby for a lucky bet is to crack down a chunk on the hides whose names has the same initial as the dame he is rooting with.

If Mudder is trying to leam up with Daisy Dilly the same day Mary, he favors all the bangtails whose names begin with M, and if this dame's handle is Helen he bets on the nags whose name starts with H.

But I worried out a serious system recently which will work for common sense. A blind man could see it even with both eyes shut. When I tried to explain it to the mlaiss, and we been hitched long enough that I ought to know better, it happened this way.

"Well, charlie," I says, seeing me sitting at the desk and wetting my hair plenty "I suppose you are now going to give birth to another practically infallible system."

"Yes," I admits with pride, "This world beating system is based on the fact that hot dames don't run often enough and when they do the odds ain't long enough to make it pay. That is why the slip scalpers find it easy to stay in business. But dark horses are the rool frequent, and besides at very licky prices. Now I've got to do to win us plenty dinero is to bet on the dark horses."

"How can ye tell," asks the mlaiss, "when the idea is difficult, "which is the dark horse?"

But my idea is so simple that I know even a sap like you can get it is the sweet part of it," I says, "We don't have to guess like sleepers do, we do is eliminate the favorites and the stake horses which have closed recent; and then we spread out our cherries on the rest of the field. We don't have to bet on many, seeing that we can stand to lose on five or six ladders and still make ourselves a very excellent profit, indeed."

Then am I terrible surprised when the mlaiss does not start rooting me home with his usual sweet and says the system looks perfect and that is going to help me with it.

"You will have to do a lot of fast figuring," she says, "so you can work on it at-minute odds. But as this is such a swell system I know you will let the gang in on it and they can all get rich, too, and live off publishing. Therefore, I will take Harry Hitchcock's system and Mudder Mcafork's latest rave, and we grits will rush the bets in the ring and leave the rest to the boys say."

Well, when I explains the system to the dopes and dames that night, they all say it is great and they are raring to go. They turn over their bankrolls to me and I guess you my total which I don't have to give to the mlaiss as she has got it all the time.

Then Harry, the Pinhead, Beezer Bertie, Mudder Mcafork and me stays up all night laying out the figuring so we are raring to go at the next day when we will crack down our cherries on every bet on the entire field except the several barrels of cherries pinois.

And right at it we prove that this is a special super system without a doubt because in the whole first day we have only lost a little over four grand. Of course, we know that it takes a little time to get going on high-class consistency system like we got and we is not discouraged nohow. Even after the third day when we have dropped nearly fifteen grand, I know that our figuring is okay and we will soon clean up plenty.

However, seeing as how the dames are in the driving seat with setting as our runners and placing our bets, I tells them that if they want to quit we will not be sore but they insist even though we have at last got a perfect system. "But it is very strange they do not find out and my mlaiss and that the ladies are in with us to the finish.

Then we gets the breaks like we expected and we starts to win now and then. The dames brings us the dinero and we are all very happy indeed. This goes on for a week or every day, which, of course, our system takes care of, and every thing works perfect like we figured. The only trouble is that we lose more than we win and we are soon out a total of eight grand, which is pretty near all of it. Before I has time to correct the error in the system, the mlaiss tells me that we are down to our shirts and they need their dinero.

"We hope," the fillies says, "that you boys have learned a lesson. And we want you to promise that you will stick to your own regular handicapping and lay off all crazy systems, at least, for the rest of the season."

Well, we swear to do like they say, as we've cleaned anybody and got nothing to lose. We get home every day, which, of course, our boys say it is to show it's plenty easier tothey hadn't bet a dime!

"The Little Colonel"

Shirley Temple Captures 'All Hearts' in Southern Film

Wee Shirley Temple has ideal role co-stars with Lionel Barrymore in popular romance of "The Little Colonel".

That bundle of screen magic, five year old Shirley Temple, will soon be delighting delighted another army of local movie fans in a new picture. Reports from other cities indicate that in "The Little Colonel," Fox Film has given her an ideal vehicle for her winning smile, ing, and dancing talents. It will come to the Capitol Theatre on Friday.

She co-stars with Lionel Barrymore in this popular story of Southern prejudices, adapted from Annie Fellows Johnston's series of Little Colonel' stories, which were the favorite reading of millions a generation back, and whose appeal is perennial.

"The Little Colonel" is the story of a Kentucky belle who marries a Yankee, against her father's wishes. The bridegroom's father is a proud old aristocrat, who is still living in the days of the Civil War. Barrymore is the obdurate Southern aristocrat. Shirley plays the cameo role of Rose Bowen, whose dancing eyes, and honey-colored curls make a brilliantly attach on the heart of the stern rebel.

Critics in other cities where "The Little Colonel" is playing, hail it as Shirley's most superb vehicle. There is blended drama and comedy in the plantation, frontier, and army scenes. Attention is being called everywhere to Shirley's dancing with Bill Robinson in his original stair dance, elaborately staged in the appearance of the picture.

Last time today will be seen "Rubber's Financial Syndicate" also on the stage "The Five Rackteers."

AT THE BELLE

"Millions in The Air"

Bill Barty and His Talented Company on the Stage

Billy Barty and his talented company arrived in Belleville this morning to fulfill a two day's engagement at the Belle, appearing on the stage tonight, and Friday, matinee and evening.

Billy who comes direct from Hollywood as head man of his own stage revue, is Billy who is a real bundle of pep, and is a favorite with local audiences, through his appearance in the "Mickey McGuire" and "Our Gang" comedies, and such screen successes as Stowaway," "Footlight Parade", "Gold Diggers", "Woman Branded" and "Midsummer Night Dream" is creating a sensation on his tour from the Coast on the Famous Players Canadian Circuit.

Supporting Billy in his smart stage revue are his two sisters Evelyn and Jackie Barty, "Patsy" Layton and Audrey Dennison. This special stage attraction coming to Belleville carrying the personal guarantee of Manager Forman.

"Millions in the Air", Harry Conover's screaming of the year. The mechanics as well as the spirit of the radio amateurs' gangs comes in for some good-natured spoofing in the new Paramount screen farce, "Millions in the Air", the feature attraction to be presented on condensed bill with the above stage offering today, and Friday, matinee daily.

Most of the action takes place in the radio studios, amateurs of Radio City's largest broadcasting theatre, and the villain, of the story is Ol' Debil Ocean.

The clinging of this sinister object, or its absence, holds together a series of entertaining events that Harry Conover has worked up and serves as background for an appealing romance with Wendy Barrie and John Howard as the principals. Villain Gong . . . or should we say him Ding Gong' . . . is capable of immense cruelty whenever he comes into contact with the hero. Let it also be said that he can, when occasion demands, be of a most hilarious nature.

Among the individual performances that of Eleanore Whitney, a new screen star, deserves special notice. Miss Whitney is a protege of Bill Robinson, who says she is the fastest tap dancer in the business. Her first big part in a big picture. A clever novelette will be exhibited on the screen the program. Performances daily at 2.15, 7.10 and 9.15.

The Billy Barty stage revue will commence daily at 3.45, 7.20 and 9.30 p.m.

DEFENCE COUNSEL REGAN PLEADS

that," he said, "the assailant must have been literally covered with blood as he came from the bank. Yet there was scarcely any on O'Donnell's clothing and not on his trousers."

It was significant also, the lawyer held, there was no mud on the girl's shoes, which there was on those of O'Donnell. "If the same mud won't stick on one pair of shoes, it won't stick on another. It must be two different mud.

Crown witness had said the prisoner's shoes were washed. "If he washed them," the lawyer continued, "why did he need to mud on them."

Leaf On Shoe.

Of a leaf found on O'Donnell's shoe, and similar to trees in the prisoner's yard, the lawyer asked the jury to "use your common sense". It had been shown similar leaves were found a vacant lot next to the filling station where O'Donnell worked.

"Such innocence!" Mr. Regan exclaimed as he declared the leaf could not be used to prove O'Donnell was in the ravine.

Referring to O'Donnell's statement, Mr. Regan declared it was "an honest statement." "And it does not lie within the province of the crown counsel to say it was not an honest statement."

The statement said O'Donnell had picked up burrs on his clothes when he stepped into a vacant lot the night of the murder. His lawyer said there were "burrs and burrs" in places on that lot according to the crown's own evidence.

Some thirty burr bushes, Mr. Regan said, lined the north side of O'Donnell's clothes. "But the man who struggled down that steep ravine with the girl in a death struggle must have been literally covered with burrs."

Regan Feels Ill.

Mr. Regan told the court's indulgence in his memory on the burrs was faulty. "I was sick yesterday and last night and I couldn't go over the evidence properly," he explained. "As a matter of fact I'm sick now."

Edsel O'Donnell stepped through his kitchen with muddy boots, Mr. Regan said it would have left tracks on freshly-laid linoleum on the floor. "But where are the newspapers?" he asked. "They were not produced here."

"Would you hang him because of what this little girl said about the burrs on the floor" the counsel asked the jurors.

Blood On Clothing.

Blood on O'Donnell's clothes — a crucial point, for coal and mud could be explained by Mr. Regan. One of the stains, on the pants, was "an indistinct mixture of age" that it was not discovered for days after the killing, counsel declared. Two days after the slaying.

"It had been there for weeks or even months" Mr. Regan claimed. "Would you find the accused guilty on such evidence?"

Blood on O'Donnell's pants pocket could not have come from the victim, Mr. Regan declared. "Did he have his hands in his pockets when he was struggling with her?"

In all the defence counsel declared, there were only "10 or 12 drops" of blood on the clothes. "And not one drop on O'Donnell's shoes, hair or head; fairly dripped blood. Where is the Trail of Blood?"

"The murderer's hands must have been covered with blood," Mr. Regan said Mr. Regan, "and we find only a few drops on O'Donnell's clothes."

Had the test for the age of the blood been made a few days after the killing, continued the lawyer, the age might have proven O'Donnell innocent. "But it wasn't done, he cried.

"Would you send an innocent man to his death?" he cried. "It has been done before. But it must not be done now for lack of evidence."

Regan said, "How then could it be determined from single hairs?

"Where is the baby's blue sweater?" he asked with irony. "Invisible the hairs came from it? There is no evidence to have that they did not."

The tests had not been carried out before preliminary hearing, he continued, but they had been presented at the trial. "Was I taking a prisoner by surprise in a murder case was a serious matter, the lawyer held.

Claims Last Minute Test.

The tests had been undertaken at the last minute to "build up the crown's case", he declared. "Like Regan, the prosecution had no confidence whatever in the tests.

The crown, he assumed will not prove definitely the hairs on O'Donnell's clothing were from the girl's sweater. If there had been mud and blood and hair on O'Donnell's clothes when he was arrested, why was not O'Donnell shown them and asked for an explanation?

Police might have handled Ruth Taylor's jewelry and unwittingly transferred hairs to O'Donnell's clothes, Mr. Regan indicated. He asked the jurymen if they wanted to believe the story of the two chief officers in the case, that they had not touched the sweater at any time.

Hairs Not Linkable.

Before going to O'Donnell's home, police had been to the ravine, Mr. Regan declared, and unscientifically tracked into the home some of the mud found there. Was it not likely tracked into the trial?

Discussing in the ravine of a wrench installed "Off" was determined by the lawyer who believed it was the murder weapon of the girl.

Not until January had the initials been found though it had turned up early in November, he said.

"Could anything be more important in this case than that wrench?" the counsel asked. "It is the only article of nothing, except a confession written in O'Donnell's handwriting and left in the dead hands of the girl."

Yet for some days it had lain "within a few feet" of where the body of Ruth Taylor lay.

O'Donnell could not have carried the wrench all day of the killing with murder in his mind, the lawyer claimed, because he could have gone to the hospital and kissed his wife with this wrench in his hip pocket?

"Can you believe," Mr. Regan asked, "that his hands were red with bloodied murder, rather than one committed in a moment of blood lust?"

Defence counsel questioned the way the wrench was found.

"Was it a coincidence," he asked, "that the police found the ravine to a depth of two inches where the wrench was found? Does it mean or not say definitely about other parts of the ravine?"

Regrets Link Was Needed.

"Were they lacking an instrument with which the crime could have been committed? Or for the bloodstained piece of concrete was found there. But the wrench was not lacked; they lacked something link-O'Donnell with the murder.

"I am not accusing the police of planting the wrench," he continued. "But I am accusing that somebody crank or someone else, knowing O'Donnell was in the city in connection with this crime, could have planted the instrument where the police. How easy this would have been."

"And how easy it would have been to have forgotten about their information. Just as they forgot about the wrench for months."

If the police were the murder instrument, Mr. Regan asked, why was there not blood on it?

Coroner Dr. M. M. Crawford

Coroner Dr. M. M. Crawford had said the wrench might have caused wounds on the girl's head. "But you won't find Dr. Brown saying so," Mr. Regan said. Dr. Brown, Dr. Orr and the chief expert in this case.

"And the fact that he was not asked about this point was deliberate," Mr. Regan declared.

Interrupting, His Lordship said the statement might be interpreted that way but the jury would be instructed to disregard it. Justice Mr. Regan said this was "very satisfactory" and proceeded to declare he wished to convey the idea Dr. Orr had no evidence that the wrench caused the wounds in the murdered and the Crown knew this. "There's no evidence connecting about this wrench," the lawyer shouted. "Up to the time initials were found, it was not connected with the subject, or at least the utmost indifference."

"Was it because he thought the story would be too preposterous for anyone to believe if it was not substantiated? Did he need somebody else to find it as corroboration of credibility?"

"There is something funny about this wrench," the lawyer continued, adding that the initials did not establish beyond doubt that the wrench was O'Donnell's. They could have been put on just before "in being thrown into the ravine." Police must have had "some serious doubt of the integrity of the wrench." Otherwise, why had they kept it for months without acting upon it.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Feb. 12.—(CP)—Profit-taking developed in the mining group on Toronto exchange mining board today and some of the gains posted in the last few sessions were reduced. The early session saw good action in the base metals group also as strong prices put part of the gains were dropped in the early afternoon. Trading was fairly active and moved quietly and without feature. Mackenzie, Hollinger, Lamaque, Sylvanite, Kirkland Lake and Wright-Hargreaves were moderately heavy.

Gold Eagle 4.50, a new high, Teme-Oscadian Oil flopped to 4.25 against a former price yesterday of 4.48. The cheap oils remained quiet.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, Feb. 13.—(CP) — Aside from a strong market in Brazilian Traction, the Toronto industrial market was merely steady in the early trading today. International Nickel dipped to 46 and recovered to 46 1-2 for a net loss of 1-8 point. Steel of Canada and the oil group registered more losses than gains.

Brazilian Traction common 24½
Massey, Fanny Farmer and Dominion Steel 6½. Farmer sold at a new high. Interest in the Liquor group was chiefly apparent in Canada Malting, which was off 1-8 this afternoon. Bank issues were firm. Bank of Nova Scotia and C.P.R. were off slightly in the afternoon. Golds showed more firmness in the afternoon.

WALL STREET CLOSE

NEW YORK, Feb. 13. (CP)—Scattered selling which overtook an active stock market today failed to diminish the gains in the face of forward movement in most sections. Transactions totalled 2,500,000 shares.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Feb. 13— Wholesale prices of eggs at Montreal were again stronger yesterday, the recent upward movement continuing. Weather conditions have been a chief factor in strengthening the market, dealers said, pointing to widespread and protracted cold, blocked roads, and a lack of receipts. Prices paid in the city commanded prices generally 2 cents higher than on Tuesday. No change was made in wholesale prices to the retail trade for small lots, but it was stated an advance of one cent per dozen may be put into effect today. The butter market was generally steady, with trading quiet, and a somewhat firmer tone later in the day. The general asking price being 32c. Cheese, potatoes and poultry continued unchanged. Receipts for the day were plotted at the Board of Trade as 741 cases of eggs, 3,075 boxes of butter and no cheese.

On the egg market graded shipments were: Extras in L.C.L. lots were selling at 29c for A-large, 27c for A-medium, and 24-26c for A-pullets.

These large payments benefited thousands of individuals and have been a strong supporting influence to the communities in which they live. They represent the return of savings to large numbers of thrifty people, citizens who have worked hard and exercised self-denial to provide something for their old age, and for their dependents; benefits to widows and orphans made possible by previous self-denial on the part of others.

Canada has felt the steadying effect of such payments from Life Insurance Companies throughout the years of depression.

FIRST PLACE IN SCHOOL GROUP CINCHED BY B.C.I.

Defeat St. Mikes 7-0 in Fastest Game Played so Far

ALBERT SECOND

Continuing to be the class of their loop, the B.C.I.V.S. "Collegians" clinched first place in the local senior intermediate hockey group when they blanked the St. Michael's squad 7 to 0 at the arena last night as Albert College sextette pounded out a 5 to 3 victory over the battling O.S.D. outfit to elevate the "yellow-jackets" into second place, one point in front of the third place "Irish". Both games of the twin bill were heartily contested and thoroughly enjoyed by over 500 students and adult fans who showed by their presence by continued interest and vocal encouragement to their respective favorites.

Showing a superior style of play around their scoring goal, the Albert College squad took an early lead in the opening game over the O.S.D., but the lads from the "dear school" stepped it up a notch and forced the play in the early stages of the third period to make the score 3 to 2 for Albert, but a minute concerted effort by the "yellow-jackets" soon netted them three counters and they emerged winners and in possession of second place in the group standings by a 5 to 2 victory over the O.S.D. The game was filled with thrills and fast play and admitted numerous infractions of the rules by either squad, but heavy body-checking and high sticks, that resulted in an even dozen penalties being meted out by Referee St. Louis.

Albert led 1 to 0 at the end of the initial frame as McDonald scored on Clouse's pass, the puck coming in off Lavelle's stick. McDowall and Burgess scored for Albert in the middle stanza, but Bostnari and Hoags elevated the hopes of the O.S.D. by quick goals in the last period opened, but their splurge was quickly squashed by an attack by Albert forwards that resulted in goals being scored by Burgess and Fox, finality to shoot when in a scoring position cost the O.S.D. the victory that would have well earned, as they continually carried the play into Albert territory. Melnyk, on the defence for O.S.D., was a standout with Graham, Watson, Hoags and Major playing good steady hockey. Burton and Lyle were headliners for defence for Albert with McDowall, Lapalm, Burgess and Grigg also playing fine accounts of their night's endeavors.

The line-ups:

O.S.D.—Goals: Lavelle; defence, Melnyk and Hawthorne; centre, Graham; wings, Major and Bostnari; subs, Walton, Green, Major, Hemphill and Ryan.

Albert College — Goal, Hollingworth; defence, Fox and Burton; centre, McDowall; wings, Burgess and Lapalm; subs, R. Clouse, Grigg, G. Clouse and McDonald.

Referee—St. Louis.

Collegiate Undefeated.

Les Shiels' B.C.I. "Collegians" continued their string of undefeated games to five, one being a tie, as they downed the St. Mikes "Irish" 8 to 0 in a game that saw fast keen hockey played throughout. The "Collegians" showed superior ability and better condition to outplay Eddie Schrieder's St. Mikes in almost every department as the B.C.I. lads barred goalie Tom Hughes from every attack with the St. Mikes' goalie being called upon to make sensational saves to keep the score below the double column figure. The "Irish" played the puck-carrier in a determined style while the Collegians played the rubber and were naturally rewarded for their efforts with well-earned goals. The B.C.I. led by period scores of 3 to 0, 5 to 0, and the final 8 to 0 score. The sturdy defence of the B.C.I., Derry and Logie, proved a big support for the losers, while the winners' front line started slightly too much speed for the fast tiring St. Mikes. The score in no way indicates the play, however, as the teams battled fervidly until the final bell, both squads continually carrying the puck on the offensive. Two small flare-ups that might have resulted in fatal encounters were nipped in the bud by Referee St. Louis, as the players agreed to be more careful.

Ronsky, with three goals, led the B.C.I. on the attack with Mc-Logie, Morgan, Green and Rowbotham each flashing for red light once for the winners. Dimmie, Doran, Preis and O'Neill looked the best for the losers, as goalie Tom Hughes starred for his team.

The line-ups:

B.C.I.V.S.—Goal, Mouck; defence, Logie and Derry; centre, Morgan; wings, Mair and Ronsky; subs, Rowbotham, Green, Morris, Liddle and Sullivan.

St. Michael's—Goal, Hughes; defence, O'Neill and J. Feetz; centre, Dimmie; wings, Doran and Preis; subs, Amo, T. Feetz, Haslip, A. Doran and Marcel.

Referee—"Speedy" St. Louis.

How to Bowl—No. 2

YOU MUSTN'T TRY TOO HARD

By MRS. FLORETTA D. McCUTCHEON

WORLD CHAMPION WOMAN BOWLER

Miss Jane Davis bowls in correct form while Mrs. Floretta D. McCutcheon, women's champion, watches to see that she relaxes, doesn't "throw" the ball, and follows through just as a golfer lets his club go "through"

Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of ten lessons on bowling, written especially for Central Press Canadian by Mrs. Floretta D. McCutcheon, woman champion bowler and instructor of famous bowling instructor.

If I were to give the beginner just one rule about bowling, it would be not to work too hard. Many people lose their averages by trying too strenuously. The harder they try, the worse they get. Just as in golf, when you try too hard, your muscles tighten up and don't obey the orders you give them.

We play games for the purpose of relaxation, both of body and mind; the more we relax, the better the results.

It Must Be Rolled!

One of the best reasons why you should not try too hard in bowling is that the ball is big and heavy, and the pins are a long way off—60 feet from the foul line to the centre spot of the head pin. Often the bowler's handicap is not an attempt to throw the ball at the pins. All wrong. That big ball, weighing up to 16 pounds, was never intended to throw. If it was it would be like an indoor baseball.

Bowling means rolling the ball. So just keep in mind that all you are going to do is: Swing the ball in time to your steps as you approach the foul line, lay it down beyond the foul line and let it roll into the pins. As is a golf.

Just as a good golfer tries to let the clubhead hit the ball, in bowling try to let your ball roll.

If you follow this fundamental, you'll not only have much fun, but plenty of healthful exercise.

And it's a game for all ages. One of my pupils in a class in Philadelphia was a fine old lady of 83. She had bowled for 35 years, she told me, as a member of a German Turn Verein. Despite her 83 years, she didn't look more than 65.

"I grew interested last winter," she told me, "but I'll never do it again. I missed by bowling too much."

KINGSTON JRS. DEFEAT TWEED IN PLAYDOWNS

WINNERS SMART

Tweed Team Lacked The Experience of Winning Squad

Tweed, February 12.—(Special)—Tweed Junior "B" O.H.A. team lost to their more experienced Kingston opponents by a score of 8 to 4 in the first game of the play-offs at the local arena on Wednesday night. The locals had drawn a bye for the season and were playing their first game as a team. Kingston by defeating Cananoque, had won their group.

Kingston Superior.

The visitors placed on the ice as smart an aggregation as had been seen here in a long time. The work of their number Partis and Goldup are slated for a brymful of praise. Tweed's new York Rangers according to reports, have not displayed stood out. Bridgen in goal had an easy time in the first period but throughout the game was the mainstay of the locals, turned on by his mates great crowd of the season went all out and fought like fiends.

The first period was disastrous as Kingston scored five goals without a response from the locals. Jackson scored the first counter after three minutes of play. This was followed by Partis' goal at the end of the half way through the period by a smart goal. Tweed added its counter after further scoring until the last three minutes of the period, when Partis scored his second goal. Goldup added his counter in the last minute of the period by Dickson and Goldup. The locals showed the effect of the long exhibition during the season. Early in the second period Goldup scored after his second goal to make the score 6 to 0. For the remaining thirty-five minutes the locals battled the visitors right off their feet, matching speed with speed and outscoring them four goals to two. Cournoyea and Rocheleau were the goal-getters in the second period. Goldup and Partis also were the ones to place on a sparkling piece of combination play to conclude the period with Partis' goal. Cain and Baldy" Leal and his brother Jack" Leal, were outstanding marksmen in the final frame for the homesters.

Fast Pace of Work

The latter's goal was a smart piece of work. Cain and Gourley might do worse than give this boy the "once over" for doing everything that makes a hockey player.

Penalties Numerous.

Partis scored the final goal shortly before the game ended on a clever piece of work by Goldup in front.

Penalties were numerous, all for minor offences, each team getting five.

The locals were augmented by Keller and Alexander of Madoc, and Rocheleau of Tweed. The game was clever and fast and although Tweed's new York Rangers line gave a smart exhibition and should have had a goal or two on their own account, Kingston's new-born line combination was the class of the night. Individually this season's hockey. The score does not indicate the closeness of the play at either side of the ice for at times nine minutes and during the last five minutes of the game Tweed's line was the class of the ice. AFRICAN MOON WAKES REPORTER

(Written pole: Mark Barron, Associated Press Staff writer and the only American correspondent with the Southern Italian forces in Ethiopia, makes the 12th of a war correspondent difficult, but nonetheless in the following dispatch he pictures a typical day with the army.)

(By Mark Barron)

(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Lugh Ferrandi, Italian Somaliland Jan. 13.—(By Courier and Airmail)—(AP)—There is a melancholy beauty about African nights but the war correspondents, who must keep an their duty of writing of their admiring of the full moon and jungle shadows in the morning hours.

On a typical day I was awakened at 3 a.m., with the moon shining in brightly like lamps, and there was no need to light a lantern.

My native boy cannot quite understand the profession of newspaperman, as my pounding on my typewriter for some time he finally gave me the title of "Signor, the Professor of Scribbling."

Death, sudden and unexpected, is practically stepping on your heels every second in war. I discovered a few minutes later while resting in a hospital chair beneath the fringes or a grass hut.

There came the roar of an airplane motor close overhead. Its engine faltering with spasmodic bursts of speed that quickly died. The plan seemed to be desperately trying for altitude.

There came two, not spurts from the engine then a quiet "t-t-t-t-t" sharp as the brief cry of a breaking harp string. Silence then a sound and weakness appeared instantly, but they were not enough to fill the instant and merciful death for the pilot. The crash was about 300 yards from my tent.

Deeper and deeper into Ethiopia we plunged as we made the last outpost of the Italians. The Italian Colonel in command of the native garrison and his officers offered us lunch in his grass hut and over our returned the favor of entertaining by contributing the luxuries or bottled mineral water and cigarettes.

Just as lunch was finished the camp broke into an uproar. Two native scouts were bringing in an Ethiopian prisoner they had captured only a few minutes before. They also reported sharpshooters on a hill further up had seen numerous natives moving in the valley ahead of them.

The Colonel invited us to come along to the sharpshooters' post and for the next half hour we sped over roads that to the eye seemed barely to exist. But the Ethiopians had retired into the jungle and there was no fighting that day.

Back we started, returning to our camp at 10 p.m., dead tired and covered with dirt, sand and sunburn. I longed to think I would be able to return home.

CARRYING PLACE, GUNTERS WIN IN TRENTON LEAGUE

Canal Boys Easily Defeat Smithfield by Closing Rally

BOTH GAMES CLEAN

Overtime Necessary For Gunters to Overcome Project

Trenton, Feb. 12. —(Special)— In the first game of the Trenton and District Hockey League matches played at the Arena here last night Carrying Place overcame a one-goal lead in the second period to decisively beat Smithfield 6-1. The Smithfield boys started off at a rapid pace in the first period and had not Cotral in the Carrying Place nets been on his toes, Smithfield would have had several more goals to their credit by the end of the period.

About half way through the period Dunn of Smithfield made a nice rush and went in there to give all they had to get that win, but the best wasn't enough, for the boys in blue and white, dashing wrong and turned in one of their best games of the season. The odds were with Glen Ross because of the absence of Barker, regular goalie, of West Huntingdon. Walter Rodger substituted for him in an excellent manner and turned in a fine game.

The first period was fast, clean hockey with some fine displays of good combination and individual rushes by both teams, there were no penalties in the first period, which ended in a scoreless tie with both goalies turning in an outstanding performance. In the second period play speeded up and Mott finally tallied on a pass from Wright. Glen Ross pressed hard to overcome the lead and Kerby broke away, fanned by Mott and the latter scored again on a pretty play to pile West Huntingdon two up. Glen Ross threw caution aside in a last desperate effort to get in there and they hopes sank as Mott and Wright again cut loose on a speedy rush with Mott getting his third counter on a pass from Wright. In the last period Glen Ross made a brave attempt and literally showered Rodgers from every angle but he was unbeatable, until Hagerman got right in close to bat in a rebound from the stick of G. Fraser. The goal was a stimulant to the boys, who were fast hitting from the rush with Mott getting his third counter on a pass from Wright. In the last period Glen Ross made a brave attempt and literally showered Rodgers from every angle but he was unbeatable, until Hagerman got right in close to bat in a rebound from the stick of G. Fraser. The goal was a stimulant to the boys, who were fast hitting from the terrific pace and they fought with all they had. Near the end of the game Mott and Rodgers went through and Mott scored on a pass from Rodgers to make it 4-1 and the game ended with Glen Ross howling for a penalty the West Huntingdon nets and the boys in black shooting it down the ice. Final score, 4-1. It was a great team, the champions of last year, fell by the way side.

Line-ups:

Glen Ross—Hagerman, goal; G. Fraser and Rowen, defence; centre, Mott; wings, H. Hagerman and H. Brooks; alternates, Scott; MacDonald, Fraser and Armstrong.

Referees—Wallace and Ackers.

Second Game

In the second game Bethel were completely overshadowed by the Project Boys second squad, who handed them a lasing to the tune of 11 to 6 in a game that was not as fast as the performance of either team. The game was wide open all the way and both teams piled up the goal scores. Miller, Simms, Dickey and Cranston were the goal getters for the Project, and Johnston and Lee were the sharp shooters for Foxboro, getting 19 between them and Kotcheff-son got the other one to make it 11-6. This was the last of the regular schedule. Foxboro play off with Bethel for the right to meet the leaders. The first game of the series finals is scheduled for Friday night and judging from the way the teams have been getting throughout the season it should pack 'em in. As they now stand, Bethel and Foxboro are tied with eight points which indicates how well they are matched. The line-ups for the last game were as follows:

Foxboro—Seeley, goal; Caverley and Ketcheson, defence; Lee, centre; wings, Johnston and Chapelle; alternates, Hall and Gay.

Bethel—Dickey, goal; Culhane and Cranston, defence; Miller, centre; R. Dickey and Lupinette, wings; subs, Calvert, Simms and E. Dickey.

Referees—Wallace and Ackers.

TORONTO RELAY TEAM DETHRONED

Loso 400 Metre Run to St. Louis in Near Record Time

St. Louis Mo., Feb. 13 (CP)—A relay team from the Supreme Athletic Club of Toronto stood shorn today of its 400-meter United States championship while Helen Stephens, the versatile Missouri farm girl, was crowned with new athletic glory.

While the Toronto girls were running their three speed of a St. Louis A. C. four in the U. S. women's national track and field meet last night, the lanky Missouri Negress was equalling the world record for 50 meters and scoring triumphs in the standing board jump and eight pound shot-put.

The Toronto relay team that placed second to the St. Louisans was composed of Hilda Cameron, Thelma Norton, Olive Hilmer and Eula Porter. Their vanquishers, in the good time of 53.3 seconds, were May Brady, Harriette Bland, Jess Crain and Edna Hurley.

Toronto girls took two other seconds, Hilda Cameron finishing 10 yards behind Annette Rogers of Chicago, who won the 200 meter run in 27.9 seconds, and Roxy Attkins placing second in the 50 yard hurdles. Phyllis Pickett, Chicago negress, was the winner in 7.3 seconds. The favorite, Chicago Olympian, Evelyne Hall, was third.

Miss Stephens sparkling time of 6.4 seconds in the 50 meter dash tied the world record, of which she great Stella Walsh is co-holder, and set a new national indoor mark. Hortense Bland of St. Louis was second in this event.

The peerless Helen then establish ed another record—a new United States mark of 41 feet 7 inches for the eight pound shot put.

Helen's third championship came in the standing broad jump, in which she beat out Non Ghodek, Chicago, with a jump of eight feet 4½ inches.

HOCKEY SIDELIGHTS

By RAY COLLETT

When "Abe" Halley of Toronto was injured, Maple Leafs needed a right-winger to fill his place, but had none available. So Conn. Smythe converted Hurricane Hector Kilrea, whom he had obtained from Ottawa Senators, into a right-wing winger, though Hec's regular berth was on the other side. It seemed to be work, too, but before this season opened, the blonde Ottawan was traded to Detroit Red Wings.

Hec, has been playing for more than ten seasons in the N.H.L. starting with Senators in 1923. He is one of the league's fastest skaters in a straight race—hence his moniker. In going to Detroit, he was not exactly a stranger as he played with the Motor City crew in 1931-32, only to return to Ottawa next season, when the club resumed operations after a one-season hiatus.

With Herb Lewis ill for the city series between Redwings and their International League team, Olympics, prior to the season opener, Hector had to do duty on two forward lines as Manager Adams had no reserve forward to fill Lewis' shoes.

Hec's best season from a scoring standpoint was 1928-29, when, with Ottawa, he topped the N.H.L. with 26 added 23 assists for a total of 58 points. That year he played the only nine defunct Ottawa crew a real boost up the league ladder.

Feminine Hockey Fans Say Pilots Have Gone Sissy

New York, Feb. 13 (CP)—A query, rather poignant in tone, reached The Canadian Press office the other day from a feminine hockey fan on Long Island.

Its substance was "On what has become of those boisterous National League managers of yesteryear, who were in the habit of raising the very devil whenever their teams came to Madison Square Garden? Don't tell me they've gone sissy on us!"

Disappearance of the joyful jousts throughout the eastlines directing various Major League Clubs truly makes sad reading.

Take Conny Smythe of the peppery Toronto Maple Leafs for instance. His appearance in town was the signal for a banner crowd to attract wending way gardenward, practically guaranteed an extra thousand fans with a roaring hockey battle.

Then alas Conny has become so mellow he is actually tossing bouquets at Lester Patrick, the boy-wonder of New York Rangers, who got the job of guiding the blushfirts after Smythe had gone to all the trouble of getting players and organizing the club. The Torontonian has expressed any great fondness for "Lestarey," after that same Lester Patrick, with characteristic graciousness on the distaff side.

Then is Rangers' coal fray was always a good, old-fashioned bumping affair, with plenty of goals thrown in, and it was seldom that Smythe sometime during combat, would not call a session for promoting something or other so vehemently it brought Referee Mr. "Hank" out on the ice or give a tap-dancing performance on the dieter rink.

But those days seemed to have vanished, for not once this season has Smythe raged in furore on the Leaf bench. As a matter of fact, Conny is actually so happy about his team go down to defeat from an ordinary 5-3 score.

Art Ross Growing Mellow

On his last visit here Smythe had displayed such a good neighbor spirit he conflicted his belief that International League team, Olympics, prior to the season opener, Hector had to do duty on two forward lines as Manager Adams had no reserve forward to fill Lewis' shoes.

Hec's best season from a scoring standpoint was 1928-29, when, with Ottawa, he topped the N.H.L. with 26 added 23 assists for a total of 58 points. That year he played the only nine defunct Ottawa crew a real boost up the league ladder.

VETERAN TIME SUPPLY BEATS DISCOVERY—Slumming to the 5-ling fraternity was the decisive beating that Vanderbilt's high rated handicap horse, Discovery took in the San Antonio handicap preliminary/warm-up for the right-priced Santa Anita late in February. Time supply, the old veteran, reeled off a new track record for the mile to win easily and is now called by many to lead the field in the Santa Anita, Discovery, weighed down with 126 pounds, finished fourth, while Cavalcade was scratched. Here is Time Supply with Jockey Tom Luther up, after he had loped in to win by six easy lengths.

MONTREALER CAPTURES SKI-JUMPING TITLE AT OTTAWA—Montrealers dominated the Ontario ski championships held at Ottawa with "French" Boit of the Montreal Ski Club taking the jumping title. The youthful Boit, a Montreal high school student, gave a good demonstration on the Rockcliffe Park slide, where many gathered to watch the skiing events. Among the spectators were Lord and Lady Tweedsmuir seeing their first skiing championship meet. His excellency is seen at the right as he watched the events. At the left is "Punch" Boit and centre shows a general view of the crowd with one competitor just taking the jump.

EYES OF THE SPORT WORLD ON GERMANY—Eyes of the sport world rest on Germany as the 11th Olympic games get under way with the winter sports at Garmisch-Partenkirchen and the summer games scheduled for next summer at Berlin. The Third Reich is enthusiastically welcoming the world amateur sport meet. Two Olympic scenes are shown above. At the top, German sports leader Hans von Tschammer-Osten (arrow) greeted with hearty Nazi cheers, receives the huge Olympic bell which tolls to announce the games open. Below shows the gates at the entrance to the ice stadium in the Bavarian hills. Through this gate all athletes must pass as they participate in the various sports. The sign over the gate reads "We Greet The Youth of The World."

Piles Go Quick

With Dr. Leonhardt's Prescription

Many sufferers from itching, bleeding or protruding piles have found out that quick relief can be had with an internal medicine.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, well known in his home town as a physician specializing in the treatment of piles, has perfected a prescription which he has named HEM-ROID. It is said to relieve pain, shrink the piles and stop bleeding in a very short time.

HEM-ROID is the prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, who spent several years of his professional life in finding the cause of piles and the medicine that would remove them. His medicine succeeds because it tends to correct the cause.

No matter what kind of piles you have or how long you have had them, if you want to try HEM-ROID, you have our promise to give you back your money if you do not find quick and satisfying relief, after using just one bottle.

J. S. Leonhardt or any druggist can supply you.

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR NATURAL "BULK"

Needed to Correct Constipation*

Most people recognize the serious consequences of constipation. But too often they dose themselves with strong cathartics that often actually lead to chronic constipation.

The natural way to check common constipation is to correct the condition which causes irregularity, insufficient "bulk" in meals.

How can you get "bulk"? Fruits and vegetables have more than has ever been. The most popular product of this kind is Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle in action. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron.

This delicious cereal is a wholesome food. Serve ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity, with milk or cream, in cooking.

*Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily will usually correct constipation due to insufficient "bulk." If not relieved, see your doctor.

ALL-BRAN gives you gentle internal exercise. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

Interest in Goodwill Campaign Aroused by the Intermediate Tweed has reached fever heat and the contestants are working hard to land the major prize of $20. Mrs. Alex. Gerald still has her eye on the money and called the aid of her many friends, and at the end of the second week makes a substantial lead by no means insurmountable, but enough over her fellow contestants. The prizes, in addition to the cash award, include a DeForest-Crosley radio, an electric washing machine, a cook stove, five 98-piece dinner sets, a set of silver, a fine coal, and several other prizes. Two Tweed young men appeared before Magistrate Lloyd on Friday charged with theft. They were remanded until Friday when they will again appear for sentence. A number of other cases will also come up for trial at the same time.

The high flying local puck chasers ran into a snag on Monday night when Belleville gave them a lesson in how Canada's national game should be played. When the smoke of battle had cleared away the visitors had the decided big score of 7 to 4. The loss was a bitter pill as Tweed had previously scored eight wins, two ties and no losses. As each game with Belleville counts as two in the league the entry in the loss column is now two games. The visitors, fresh from a victory over Gordon, proved themselves masters of the situation from start to finish and in the last two frames Tweed bombed two goals in the first period and Belleville battled to the goalie's rebound and Kingsley drilled Homer Arm her first counter. Belleville added with the score 2 to 0 and looked to be just a question of fulfilling another engagement as far as the homsters were concerned. The visitors however, launched a quick counter in the second period when Sandy Gordon took a pass and rounded on Harvey's pass. Tummon drove the puck into his own net when trying to clear to knot the score 2-2. Maguire got the goal back in the third period but Belleville netted the end the locals were outplayed and Belleville deserved the victory.

Four goals in the final frame from the sticks of Day, Rigby and Ridley, the former getting two, completed the rout of the locals. Manager Beatty sent five forwards into the fray in the closing minutes and Cournoyea banged in the fourth goal for the locals. Belleville's win was strenuous but clean. Rigby was outstanding for the visitors, Gregg Tweedl refereed to the satisfaction of all.

Belleville—Goal, Sinfield; defence, Rigby and Townsend; centre, Ridley; wings, Thompson and Harrypulsipe, Pepper, Leatherdale, Hamment and Day.

Dale Plays The Game

—BY—

Ann Forester

There was still Nance to be raced; and, thought Dale defiantly, what did she care? What did it matter if Nance—it all of them—disliked her? They had tried and controlled her before ever they had laid eyes on her! Resentment welled in her heart, but she crushed it back. For Brant's sake, she'd play the game. Dear Brant.... her friend, sitting across from her at the gleaming table as he had sat at the little wooden table in the cabin! Dear Brant, who had fought Steve Kenyon..... he was hers, and after all those other people didn't matter....

Dale's composure returned. She was able to answer the polite questions Mrs. Kendall put to her about her journey, the excitement, and no further than their trip. It were as though Mrs. Kendall tacitly refused to recognize any antagonism Dale which had gone before. And the girl saw with glad relief that she need not keep her mind to be above reproach in manner in her dealings with Brant's mother. She was able to find no fear in her treatment of his wife, but condescend to like her at first she would not. The haughty old aristocrat had subdued in the latter, but not in the spirit.

Dale watched her as she sat at the head of the table, dressed in grey chiffon. When she spoke to Brant—to Mimi—that was the real woman talking, but when she addressed the girl it were as though a window shade were slipped down between the two. Behind that glass Dale could see her, she could hear her, but she could not reach her. She could never reach her.....

Apparently the girl felt the same silence. The conversation was carried by the other three, and—given my impetus by Mimi—took on more of a personal tinge.

Mimi's friends—mutual places—whimsical hints at old, esoteric jokes which caused Brant to roar with laughter, that made Mimi show her neat, glistening teeth, and wrung an indulgent smile from Mrs. Kendall. Jokes that proved fast and bewildering when Brant, with wonderful tact, explained his wife, turned to her and painstakingly explained them.

Listening earnestly, Dale tried to laugh. But the effort was forced, and was too wearying and involved. Brant unconsciously gave up the attempt and Dale sat for the most part staring at her plate or smiling politely and nervously when she thought they observed her. Her heart was leaden when a diversion occurred as the last two were being brought on.

The heavy double hangings at the door were suddenly jerked aside and a girl appeared, a girl dressed in a dishevelled riding habit, who whipped her soft velvet hat from her head and sent it spinning at a chair as she came into the room.

CHAPTER 24.

NANCE

Nance's appearance had the effect of a sudden wind blowing through the room. Conversation was shattered, everyone turned to the new comer.

Thin and brown, oddly boyish she looked in the heavy riding breeches and white silk shirt against the sombre red of the hangings.

"Hello, good people. I'm hideously late, I know, but I'm hungry as a bear, so forgive my original taste in dinner lovers!" Her voice was childishly thin and crisp sounding after Mimi's husky drawl.

"Nance, dear! Really this is inexcusable!" Mrs. Kendall turned in a sort of gentle exasperation. "You might have made an effort to get here sooner. The first night your brother is home——"

"Ah, yes, the return of the prodigal!" replied Nance, unabashed. "I trust they gave you fatted calf for dinner."

"Same impudent kid, aren't you?" grinned Brant. He rose and held out his arms. "Come on, Nats, and get hugged!"

They were much alike, these two, thought Dale as she watched them. Brant had the good looks of the family apparently, Nance was too mean, too brown for beauty. But there was the same suggestion of restlessness about her, and there was the same striking grey eyes shining in the olive face. And for all that Nance had carried the thing off with dashing nonchalance, the slight of her brother had truly moved her. As she drew out of his arms Dale could see the gleam of tears on her face.

"The prodigal son—in person—returned to the fold. And did you bring none of the husks back with you?" Her glance suddenly followed his own, and she looked at Dale. "Ah, yes—I see you did! And a remarkably good looking husk, if you should ask me!"

"Nance!" sounded Mrs. Kendall's voice. But Brant grinned and led his sister to Dale.

"Dale, dear, this is—as you're no doubt guessed to your consternation—my sister Nancy; your sister-in-law, now, the Lord protect you from your new relative!"

Nance swooped upon the other girl and hugged her as she had just hugged her brother. Then she straightened to regard Dale critically.

"A, yes——" She pursed her lips and nodded. "We Kendalls always did have good taste! Dale—that's the name you have, my dear! Why couldn't my parents have contented themselves with the same good, plebeian names? Nance! Sounds like somebody's cook!"

"Perhaps if you sat down and ate your dinner, Nance, we could get on with our own," said Mimi's smooth drawl.

"Hold your shirt on, Margie!" returned the other comfortably. "I'm in conference. Dale, angel, I should hate you for having that hair. Ah my life I've wanted just such a mop! And it's not real either! It's the lovely yellow gold of the principesse I pretended when I was a child!"

"Since when did you cease to be a child?" asked Brant.

"That'll be about all for you, Prodigal!" said Nance as she slid beside a chair and took out her napkin. "Now, tell me about the west. Ranches and cowboys and Indians!"

"Deserts and dust storms and ground squirrels that'll run over you unless you get an awful bump on the nose. You've been going to the movies too much, child!"

"Poof, don't try to 'rib me!' Nance spoke over a mouthful of bread and butter. "I know the west isn't all Tom Mix and Zane Grey, but just the same I bet I could dig up some romance."

Dale was silent as they talked, but it was not the desolate silence of a few minutes before. This tousle headed girl in the riding habit had changed all that. The clean wind of this girl's friendliness had blown away the miasma of Mrs. Kendall and Mimi. It cleared Dale's brain of the fogs and resentment. Perhaps, though, Dale doubtfully, she was acting like a cat about Mimi. After all, that languid sweetness of manner was only an outer characteristic. Dale felt a prick of shame. Perhaps she was jealous of Mimi.... Certainly Mimi acted friendly.

Mimi was saying: "We must plan to keep Dale from being lonely while you're immersed in the office, Brant. She'll miss all her western friends.....

Brant shot an amused look across at his wife. "All her western friends! You make me long to take you out to Colt City, Mimi!"

Mimi's delicate brows went up. "But surely, Brant, even in a small place like that there must be some sort of society——"

"Oh, most exclusive! You've no idea how ritzy the ground squirrels are!"

"We had the Waitles!" Dale said, trying to be loyally. They shouldn't patronize her!

Nance dropped a biscuit and frowned. "The Waitlas! Dale, darling! Is it a disease—like the strawberry rash?"

Honey's hearty friendship.....Pa's gentle worship..... Dale felt her eyes filling with lonely tears and she blinked them back, filled with the horrible conviction that she was about to cry and disgrace herself.

To her relief, the conversation turned from her. Dale recovered her composure, but inwardly she ragged at herself for being so vulnerable. Nance had meant nothing by the remark. She must have more pride!

Dale jumped nervously as she heard her name. Mimi was saying: "I shall put up Dale's name for the Town and Country Club. I'm on the membership committee. I'm sure I can get her in——"

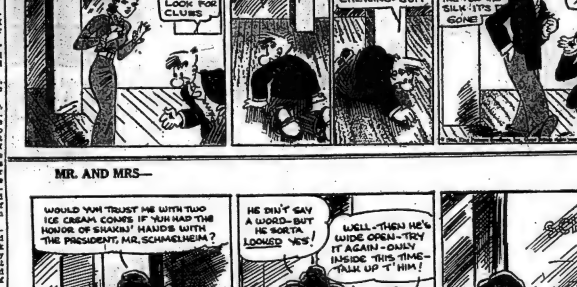
Dale smarted under the patronage. She told herself bitterly that they were patronizing her and they secretly hated her. That was it —under their suavity they hated her. Mrs. Kendall obviously had decided there was nothing to do but make the best of a bad bargain. To keep her son she had to accept his wife. And Mimi—Mimi with her false sweetness, was trusting to the adage if you give one rope enough one will hang oneself. The Town and Country Club—a club full of snobs. A scared wren perched by knowing sparrows. But..it was untrue to call Mimi, exquisite Mimi, a languid, lovely bird—a little jewelled humming bird, darting brightly at one and gone before you knew it.....

Mimi was watching her with long eyes. "Tomorrow I'll send out invitations for a bridge tea to introduce Dale."

Dale spoke in panic. "But—I'm afraid.....you see, I don't play bridge."

Those years of struggle for bread and butter! When had she ever had time to play bridge!

Dale felt their eyes upon her. Mrs. Kendall said disbelievingly: "You don't play bridge?" And Mimi said softly, "Fancy!"



Nance spoke with suddenly reddened cheeks. "After all, Margie, some people don't and still manage to exist! Personally I always prefer to shoot craps!"

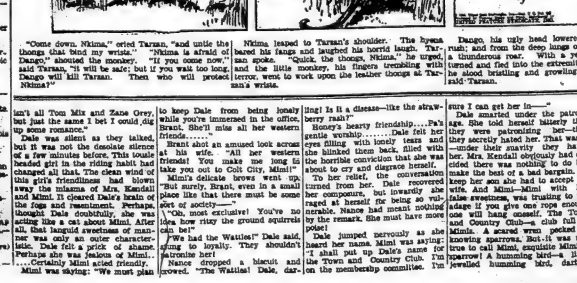
CHAPTER 25.



"Dear Honey——" wrote Dale, sitting at the ivory and silver writing desk in her room two weeks later—"If I haven't written before this, it isn't because I haven't been thinking of you. I don't believe a day goes by that I don't think of you and Pa many times. And I never look out of the windows of my room, which faces west, without thinking that the lonely wizard you and the old crossroads store and my own little shack and the depot.....

PROBE OF WHEAT BOARD GRANTED BY GOVERNMENT

Liberals Accede to Request of Former Premier of Canada

STEVENS APPEALS

Says Gov't. Can Do Much in Battle For Economic Liberty

Ottawa, Feb. 13 (CP)—Parliament's one-man party yesterday joined friendly hands in the Government party of 178 members. Rt. H. H. Stevens, leader and sole member of the Reconstruction Party, challenged the dominant Liberal party to be true to its ancient principles and declared Liberalism had an opportunity for service unsurpassed in its history, in Canada.

"If Liberalism, now triumphant, set out to enforce respect for the sanctity of human life as well as the sanctity of contract, he said, it could make an immense contribution to the solution of the economic problems of Canada. The Liberal party in the past had rendered great service in the fields for political liberty. It could now do as much in the battle for economic liberty.

Yesterday's discussion brought from Hon. C. P. Blair, Minister of Trade and Commerce and Chairman of the Wheat Committee of the Cabinet, a reply to Conservative Leader Bennett's criticism of the new Wheat Board.

Mr. Euler announced a Parliamentary investigation would be made into Mr. Bennett's suggestion the new Board had protected short traders.

The new Board, he said, had made a temporary arrangement to encourage the sale of wheat by protecting overnight sales. Finance Minister Dunning said the old Board had made a similar arrangement. Mr. Bennett interrupted the old Board had not done it in the same way.

Chose Hon Mack Yaar

The policy of the present Government is to offer wheat for sale at competitive prices continuously and to endeavor to clear the bins each year before the new crop came on the market. This, he was convinced, was the right method although the Government was far from being "out of the woods."

Mr. Euler referred to Mr. Bennett's allegations the new Wheat Board was the tool of the Grain Exchange and was out to discredit co-operative marketing. It would be just as fair to refer to the Conservative leader as "C.P.R. Bennett" as to call the new chairman of the Wheat Board, "Grain Exchange Murray," he said.

The reason the former Wheat Board, headed by John I. McFarland, was dismissed was antagonism towards it which had developed among buyers of wheat abroad. Mr. Euler had extracts from English milling and grain trade journals to substantiate this statement.

"In pulling forward this reason the Government was making no reflection on the honor of Mr. McFarland as Mr. Bennett had suggested. No one had ever questioned Mr. McFarland's honor or his motives although some had disagreed with his methods.

Mr. Stevens in his address said the only comfort he could obtain from the legislation was in a study of the average vote. As the sole member elected from the Reconstruction party he represented 265,000 votes while on the average the Liberal members represented only some 11,000 votes.

Advocates Fair Prices

The Government should enact legislation to make sure farmers were paid fair prices for their products and the workers were paid fair wages. If this were accomplished a measure of economic liberty for the masses of the people would be assured.

The farmers of Canada had no economic freedom, Mr. Stevens said. The farmer was told what the price of butter fat was and he had nothing to do with fixing it. The Minister, Mr. Stevens said, was sat in Montreal.

"The farmer had no more to do with fixing cattle and hog prices than the man in the moon", Mr. Stevens said. "Each morning there goes out a wire from the city of Toronto indicating what the price of cattle will be."

Some influence ought to stand between the farmer and those who set the prices of his products, he said.

Only one theory was left to the workman—the ordinary person on wage or salary—and that was the "liberty to go hungry". They had no security in their employments or in their homes.

Every session Parliament heard a lot about the "constitutionality" of various measures. If parliament would speak firmly for the people of Canada there would not be much law needed. The Price Spreads Commission showed that the dividend abuses by the Imperial Tobacco Company in its treatment of tobacco growers and employees. No law was passed but the next year the Company changed the methods for the better.

Credit Control Close

Public opinion would soon correct many abuses if Parliament would give public opinion a chance, Mr. Stevens said.

He was not prepared to accept the doctrines of Social Credit, Mr. Stevens said, but the control of credit rested very close to the solution of the troubles. He appealed to parliament to concentrate on finding solutions no matter whether they were policies of Liberals, Conservatives, Social Crediters, or any other group.

Other speakers in the debate were Eric Bertram (Lib., Prescott), who dealt with farm problems, Gordon Graydon, (Cons., Peel), who feared the United States Trade Treaty would injure the florists and vegetable growers in his county.

There will be no revision of the Voters' Lists this year if a bill introduced yesterday by Hon. Fernand Rinfret, Secretary of State, becomes law. The measure provides for postponing the revision for one year.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King told J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F. leader, Canada had entered no understanding regarding Imperial Defence. He said the matter had been discussed at various Imperial Conference but it had always been agreed no commitments should be made which were not approved by the Parliaments of the different Dominions.

COMMON COLD VIRUS ISOLATED

Cause of Human Colds Bottled up 20 Months in Columbia Univ.

New York, Feb. 13 (AP)—The cause of the common cold has been bottled up successfully for twenty months in a test tube at Columbia University.

Dr. Raymond Dochez, Professor of Medicine at Columbia University School of Medicine, announced last night that this long period of scientific cultivation, completely away from the human body, makes it certain that the cause is an invisible virus.

In the Columbia tube here are no bacteria or other forms of infection visible. But in all the twenty months its liquid contents have retained the power to give a human being or a chimpanzee a violent cold. In that time the invisible cause has lived and reproduced itself on chicken embryo for food.

This work of Dr. Dochez is in line with other medical experiments pointing to the same common cold cause, Andrew J. Rosko "complex" as the mechanism of human colds.

"Recent studies," said Dr. Dochez, "seem to prove that colds are caused by what is known as a filterable virus, an indefinitely small body which passes through the pores of the finest porcelain filters and is somewhere in the borderland between living and non-living matter It has been known that atmospheric apes, particularly chimpanzees, suffer in this climate from colds exactly similar to human beings. When chimpanzees were quarantined with extreme care to prevent accidental infection and were then inoculated with the throat washings of a human being with an acute cold after the washings had been freed of all visible bacteria by being passed through a porcelain filter of exceedingly fine pore size, the animals contracted colds exactly similar to those of the humans.

"The difficulty of growing the virus outside of the human body has met by using living, ten-day chick embryo, cut up in small pieces. Dr. Dochez explained. By this method it is now possible to grow in the test tube large amounts of the cold virus, and the virus has been maintained alive outside the animal body for at least twenty months."

U.S.S.R. AND JAPAN MOBILIZE TROOPS ALONG SIBERIAN BORDER—Japan's march into north China may go unchallenged by the Chinese government, but when Nippon sets a foot in Mongolia, or crosses the border into Soviet Russia, they take on a big mouthful. Tension has been increased between Japan and the U.S.S.R. by numerous reported border clashes along the Siberian frontier; warnings have been issued in both Moscow and Tokio, and it is reported that both Red Army and Japanese-Manchukuo troops are being mobilized close to border points. Observers see in the action of Japan and the re-armament of Germany, which nation recently signed a pact with Japan, a serious threat to world peace and a possible attack on the Soviet. The layout above shows map of the area with arrows indicating Japan's threats into northern China and Mongolia. TOP picture shows Red army cavalry on the Siberian frontier. MULTIPLE TRAGEDY ON THE HOLIDAY

Victims in Lakewood, N. J. Hotel Fire Numbers Fifteen

LAKEWOOD, N.J., Feb. 13.—(AP)—The death toll of the Victoria Mansion hotel fire was fixed officially at 15 today as city and county authorities began an inquiry into the holiday multiple tragedy.

Search into the blackened ruins was resumed for the bodies of the eight persons still missing.

Many dove from windows of the 3-storey hotel to street, receiving fractures which in three cases proved fatal. Others perished in the flames.

A score were injured, eight seriously, as they strove to escape the inferno.

Police Chief Walter Curtis said a check of other hotels and private homes convinced him the eight missing died in the fire.

Three of the dead, all from New York City, were identified as Mrs. Ruth Sherman, 28, Mildred Fischer, 22, a bookkeeper, and Harry Smith 29, a furrier.

Four children's bodies were found in the smouldering ruins. One was identified by the father as Sunya Feldman, 5, of Rockaway Beach, New York.

Two others were tentatively identified as Charnes Abramowitz, 5, Brooklyn, and Robert Eller 5, New York.

POISONING LAID TO CAN OF SALMON

Mother And Child Dies, While Father is Seriously Ill

St. Boswells, Sask., Feb. 13.—(CP)—With an inquest pending into the death of his wife and 10-months-old daughter, Cornelius Gelabrecht today was recovering from poisoning and chills and his two-year-old son was recovering from chills.

Gelabrecht, a farmer near St. Boswells, 175 miles southwest of Regina, lay helpless in sub-zero weather in his unheated home 40 hours with his dead wife and daughter nearby. The son lay for the same period in his cot.

Gelabrecht said he purchased a can of salmon at Edgeville on Monday. His wife, the baby daughter and Gelabrecht ate some of the salmon, but the boy, Abraham, refused to take any.

Feeling ill shortly afterward, Gelabrecht fell from a chair while cleaning the stovepipes. He bruised himself badly.

Mrs. Gelabrecht also complained of being ill and the family went to bed. The baby moaned in her crib later but the parents were too ill to do anything for her. She died about midnight Monday.

Below Zero

With the weather close to 50 below zero, the house became very cold as Gelabrecht was unable to move.

Recovering his strength partially yesterday, he got out of bed, dressed his son, Abraham and then walked slowly to his father's home, 700 yards away to summon aid.

Dr. J. W. Clark, of Hodgeville, was called and after giving Gelabrecht and his son medical attention went to Gelabrecht home, where the bodies of the mother and baby lay.

Capt. Dr. Van Steenburg Gives Address on World Politics

Opening "jolly good" cheese, crackers and jam, the soldiers' provocative supper, featured the menu and highly interesting program of events which may in the future happen in war-dazed Europe. More Than 100 Couples Present at Annual "At Home"

Each year the Kiwanis Club of Belleville entertain their friends at an "At Home" and in the annual way repay the community for the interest taken in their work by donations and other means and last night at Johnstone's Academy the party was held and to say it was a success would be putting it mildly. Although the weather was anything but favorable more than 100 couples were present and tripped the light fantastic till three o'clock when the strains of the National Anthem sent a tired but happy assembly to their several homes. The auditorium was tastefully decorated for the occasion the emblems of the Club being neatly placed, while paper streamers in pink colored the ceiling in picturesque touch.

The Grand March Interval was the floor show arranged by the committee under the direction of Bill Garrett of Trenton, and Ted Rush, Belleville acrobatic and ball room dancers who gave a splendid exhibition of their number "Chinese Apache" simply brought down the house and an encore number was demanded, but the dancers were unable to reappear owing to their exhaustion from executing the difficult figures. It was one of the finest acts ever presented in this city. "Buddy" Roberts, blues singer accompanied by Jamie Charles, gave numbers and created a most favorable impression. Bill Garden kept the dance moving at a rapid pace and there was never a dull moment during the evening.

Favors were distributed to both ladies and gentlemen during the evening and were much appreciated Toiletries consisting of candy, Kleenex and other goodies were given out, they being selected through Harold Selden, one of the club members. The men received leather bound diaries, donated by a well known firm. Spot dances, birthday dances, and other prize dances were held during the evening receiving beautiful favors donated by the firms.

The Commodores consisting of eight pieces under the direction of Jack Hazlett with Jack Hall as vidcon acting as singer rendered a most pleasing program of dance music. All the popular numbers were given and at any time, the leader would announce that he'd be bonoring a favorite piece as they played over the wishes of the crowd. The gowns of the women were strikingly beautiful and displayed the latest creations in the evening gown of today. At the midnight hour a delicious buffet luncheon was served by the members of the ladies' auxiliary being prepared by an energetic committee of Mrs. Kenneth Queens, George A. Lee, chairman, Mrs. Ted Rush, Mrs. Johnstone, Eddie Shapiro, chairman of entertainments, who saw to it that things ran smoothly, while the whole club acted as a reception committee. They were indeed grateful for the patronage the public showed and hopes that they enjoyed themselves at the annual "At Home."

'CITY'S GROWING' SAYS STOUGHTON

Former Bellevillian Calls This Only Middling Fair Winter

Wm. Stoughton, fur-hatted and moccasined, with a step as light as a boy in spite of his admitted age of sixty odd, strode into Belleville today and after a cursory inspection of the city's main business section declared himself well satisfied with the progress Belleville has made since his last visit here over thirty years ago.

"The town's big and comin'. There's been big changes made here since I last agreed Brady."

Rearing the scene of the north woods still with him, the woodsman in his picturesque garb, started his trek to the city on snowshoes from his home in the vicinity of Lake Fort Stewart, North Hastings, and by hitch hiking and walking finally completed the trip without incident.

Brief pen jacket flung open to the cold air, his fur hat pushed back to open to the fresh air, the bawdy revelling Stoughton is a striking figure section called a cold winter.

"Not pretty, maybe much. Man and boy I've been in some of the coldest weather this country has ever been blessed with, but this ain't no cold weather. Shucks!" snorted the lumber baron. "It's only a middlin' fair winter."

Declaring that his intention of visiting Belleville was for the purpose of "lookin' up a little law-e" with his friend, Judge Brady, Stoughton will stop over a few days to lay in supplies for the journey home.

A professional steel man and bridge worker by trade, his profession has taken him to almost the more remote parts of the country, Stoughton has been in the construction work. Alaska, he found was just what he was told it was anywhere.

Unemployed, the natives of the north come to his cabin for letter city periods where he communes with nature by activities about it, and so hurried and the animals one finds his trips clean cut for the winter. His cabin he hikes regularly a distance of five miles to and five miles back to Coolbelt his mail and lay in supplies.

MRS. JAS. GAILEY CELEBRATES 94TH BIRTHDAY TODAY

Aged Resident of City Still Reads Without Aid of Glass

IN GOOD HEALTH

Born in Hastings County in which she has lived all her life, and a contemporary of Belleville for nearly fifty years, Mrs. James Gailey, one of the city's oldest citizens, today at her home, 222 William street, is observing in quiet fashion the 94th anniversary of her birth.

Good health with which she has always been blessed, a calm outlook and philosophy on life, and the fact that even continued activity of the day hold the same interest for her as ever, has enabled this gracious lady to attain the significant milestone with a vigor and animation of one many years her junior. Clearness, and a natural serenity, reading apparently has been responsible.

Yesterday with a bright smile of welcome to a representative of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer called personally to pay his respects, Mrs. Gailey reviewed briefly, events of this section of the county in the early days. They were events with a memory that is even yet undimmed by the passing of time.

Born In Tyendinaga.

Born in the northern part of Tyendinaga Township, Mrs. Mary Gailey was a daughter of Thomas and Ann Hayworth, original pioneers of the country who came to Canada in 1818, near what was then called "The Old Stone Mill", Mrs. Gailey's father and parents entered the new section of Tyendinaga where they cleared the land, built their log cabin and set up other settlers had before them. Left carried on in the rugged fashion of pioneer days. Two daughters are still living here in a family of six, the present Mrs. Gailey, and a younger sister, five years her junior, Mrs. Richardson, who now resides at Portsmouth, near Kingston.

"Our family," smiled Mrs. Gailey, "has been noted for its longevity."

Lived Near Napanee

Her early schooling obtained in the same township in which she was born, Miss Hayworth later married James Gailey and for several years resided near Napanee where her husband was engaged in the operation of farming. Seven children, all daughters, graced the union. Three are still alive, Miss Addy Gailey, with whom she resides on Williams street; Mrs. Maynard Allen, Detroit; and Mrs. Maude Moore, wife of the Rev. S. C. Moore, a former pastor of Tabernacle Church of this city, now resident in Toronto.

Forty-eight years ago upon the death of her husband, Mrs. Gailey gave up the homestead and came to Belleville where she has since resided with her daughter. Life has been pleasant here. Through her gentility and understanding has large circle of friends has grown and expanded; neighborly visits are only part of the expressions of regard in which she is held by local residents. Her sight assisted during these visits has been soothing and welcome.

Reads Without Glasses

Through the medium of the daily papers which she reads without the aid of glasses, Mrs. Gailey keeps well posted and the close contact with the current events of the day. She has marked sensibly the changes that have occurred in the Belleville district since the day, ninety-four years ago when she was born.

Today, with her daughters, Miss Gailey and Mrs. Moore who is visiting from Toronto, the anniversary of their event is being quietly observed. But in their true sincerity her circle of friends of the city will assist her ceaselessly in receipt of message and personal visits their best regards and true wishes for extended years of happy life.

RHEUMATISM DRIVEN OUT!

It should be realized Rheumatism is not inevitable if the poisonous acid flecks of the system are kept on the move, thus preventing the formation and deposit of painful crystals in the joints.

The solvent stimulating action of Phosferine has a masterly effect in speedily and safely expelling the harmful acid crystals, and it recharges the nerves and restores nerve centres with the energy to restore every muscle and the stiffened joints and supplenses to pain rigid muscles.

This exclusive property of Phosferine is illustrated by the recent experience of Mrs. R. Hall, of Leeds, who writes: "For months my husband was in terrible pain with Rheumatism in his feet, walking with agony, until he tried Phosferine, and now all his Rheumatic pain has gone, and he says it is wonderful to walk without any pain." 6, Greek Street, Hull.

The speedy expulsion of Rheumatism is something to be thankful for—apart from the saving in time and money, for it means that Phosferine has revitalised the body cells, regulated the blood pressure, strengthened the stomach and circulation, and maintained perfect health and "many happy returns of Activity!

THE 1936 FORD V-8 TUDOR TOURING SEDAN

There's no extra charge for the extra quality that makes the 1936 Ford V-8 unequaled in value. Ford roominess is a good example. The short, compact design of the V-8 engine allows more of the car's length to be used for passenger space. There is shoulder room, elbow room and leg room for six adults. That is one way in which this engine from the luxury class contributes to comfort in the new Ford . . . the only car under $2500 with a V-8 engine.

The V-8 engine operates smoothly and quietly, and the welded steel body is thoroughly insulated for quietness . . . making the car more comfortable to ride in. Ford Centre-

Poise design cradles all passengers between long, flexible springs. It affords relaxed riding comfort on both rear and front seats.

Parcels and luggage store conveniently away in the large rear trunk of the Touring Sedans, and in large compartments behind the rear deck of other models. A security feature that complements Ford V-8 comfort is Safety Glass throughout in all models at no extra cost. Accept your Ford dealer's invitation to take his car and drive it with your family in the back seat.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY

Good morrow, 'tis St. Valentine's Day,
All in the morning betime,
And I, a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine.

So wrote the poet of Avon three and a third centuries ago.

Oft have I heard both youth and virgins say,
Birds choose their mates and couple
Up to this day;
—Robert Herrick.

Hail to thy returning festival, old Bishop-Valentine! Great is they name in the rubric, thou venerable arch flamen of Hymen . . . Like unto thee, sauredly, there is no other mitred father in the calendar.
—Charles Lamb.

The breath of the morning is flinging
A magic on blossom and spray,
And cookneys and sparrows are singing
In chorus on Valentine's Day.
—Praed.

So run some of the poems written in memory of this day of valentines, letters, cards, parties, games and decorations. Far away from the original form of the occasion in the modern world the observance goes on with the spirit of St. Valentine dominating, not as once believed as a priest but as an inspirer. For the day of Valentine sets thoughts and emotions stirring.

Saint Valentine, a bishop and martyr of Rome suffered death under Claudius II in 270, as far as known no church has ever been dedicated to him and why his name is associated with the practice of sending valentines is not known. Some claim is made that it is an accident and that the custom is due to the persistence of an old heathen practice concerning the worship of the Roman goddess Juno.

Many Valentines are comic, but few today run to the vulgar and satiric type of a generation ago. The comics are good-natured in their play upon human motives and, indeed, the artistic valentines are works of merit and deserve to be kept for years to come.

FARADAY'S CANDLE

A tiny candle flame on a desk in London, the very desk at which Michael Faraday, a hundred years ago, worked out the fundamental relationship between electricity and magnetism, was transformed into a "spirit flame" which crossed the Atlantic the other night to flood with light the New York Museum of Science and Industry in Rockfeller Centre. A Nobel prize winner, Sir William Bragg, struck the match which lighted the candle as he sat in Faraday's chair.

The metamorphosis of the candle flame into the lights which lit up the museum at its dedication was symbolic of the progress of man in one hundred years.

The sound of the flame of Faraday's candle (for it was Faraday's candle and "came down from his time) was "heard" by a modern sound-recording apparatus which carried the signal to the United States over the short-wave radio that also carried Sir William's voice. On reval in New York the sound of the candle flame was filtered out from the voice of Dr. Bragg and relayed to the museum in Radio City. Here it first turned on an original Stopper lamp, such as George Westinghouse used to illuminate the Columbus Exposition in Chicago in 1893. The light of this Stopper lamp, a relic in the Westinghouse museum, was picked up by an electric eye, which actuated electric switches that turned on two banks of high intensity mercury vapour lamps which produced light by sending electricity through metallic or gaseous vapor, radically differing from the incandescent lamp in which light is produced by sending electricity through a filament wire.

IN WILDEST MOOD

Stories of the sufferings which men have endured on ice floes have been prominent in the news of this week. A number of young workers walking on the ice near Toronto found themselves adrift when the ice broke from the shore and slowly but steadily made its way out into the sea. They spent a night on the ice but were rescued in the morning. They owe their lives to the fact that they were wearing the warm clothing provided to the camp workers by the U.S. Government.

On Lake Michigan a tragedy was enacted when three men were marooned by ice floes. The tragic story is that only one escaped, and that only after a night of suffering, of discovery that his companions were dead. He had to crawl on ice for nearly twelve miles to an Indian's cabin. Only the first aid given by the Indian saved his life. It is likely the man will lose his feet.

So runs the story of man and nature. Nature in her worst aspects is a bitter enemy of man's life. Those who come into her grip often tell a story of supreme human courage as well as the awful suffering when nature in her wild moods seizes man.

MINNOWS

The little minnows in a pool,
Spend life in darting to and fro;
The weeds, and waters, rocks and sand,
Is all the universe they know.

Some sluggish are, and some more swift
Usurp what none to them denies;
The choicest nook, the yielded way,
The largest share of grubs and flies.

This world of theirs they think is all;
That is, if minnows ever think;
Life means a round of little things
Mainly desires and food and drink.

Far off, where mighty waves surge high,
They sometimes flood a river wide;
And tributaries quite remote
Feel the insurgence of the tide.

The ruthless wash of heaving spate,
O'erwhelms the minnows' pool and flings
The sluggish and the virile ones
In stranded groups of gasping things.

What else are we but minnows small
Plodding their little daily ways?
While from afar a gathering storm
May sweep all we hold dear, away.

The tides of economic needs;
The secret fights for coal or oil;
The strife for markets, tarriff wars,
Our common destiny embroil,

Montreal. —W. J. King.

THE 127TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF Abraham Lincoln, martyred President of the United States was celebrated as a public holiday in this country on Wednesday.

"I DO THE VERY BEST I KNOW HOW—the very best I can; and I mean to keep doing so until the end. If the end brings me out all right, what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong, ten thousand angels swearing I was right would make no difference."—Abraham Lincoln.

x x x x

THE GREAT TRAGEDY OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S LIFE was that he was not appreciated at his true worth until after he was dead, and the fact that he knew he was right most of the time when people derided him and called him an uncouth and ignorant countryman did not soften the feeling of sadness reflected in his features, that he was misunderstood and ridiculed by not only his foes but by those whom he befriended and who should have been his friends. Abraham Lincoln had a tough job and very little help with it from those who should have helped—and the Great Emancipator could not see the "glory" of war through the mist of tears and suffering which beclouded the quarrel between neighbors—yes, between brothers, almost.

YANKEE IS A FAVORITE NAME FOR ANY RESIDENTS OF THE United States who happen to stray over into Canada, but it wouldn't be safe to call anyone from south of the Mason and Dixon line a Yankee. Southerners, natives of the original Confederate states, called the Northerners Yankees and a Yankee down south war times and a long time after was certainly a hateful object, hardly human. We call the word Yankee because it is easier and because we feel that their exclusive claim to the word "American" is faulty although they seem to think they have exclusive rights on the word. Colloquially the belligerents during the Civil War of the sixties were Yanks and Johnny Rebs.

BORN IN A TEPEE ON AN INDIAN RESERVATION battling upward with all the fortitude of the happy warrior despite the handicap of being blood relation of the First Inhabitants, Lords of the Land, Charles Curtis, rose to be Vice President of the United States under President Hoover (but Curtis don't permit his Indian blood to keep him from the Seats of the Mighty, and very early in life he put aside the free life of the Indian and invaded the preserves of the white man. He became a talented lawyer and a leader in public affairs, so much so that his nomination as Vice President on the Republican ticket was a very popular one. His social life in Washington was a somewhat turbulent one, as without a wife, the head of his social establishment was his sister. Washington social leaders tried to teach the sister of Vice President Charle Curtis social customs and the rules of precedence as they saw it, and were amazed when she refused to occupy the place that the wife of a Vice President is entitled to. She listened, then proceeded to show them her ideas of social precedence. It was a pretty fight while it lasted and even shook the walls of White House officialdom, where certain well-read and pompous officials were asked to rule whether Charlie's sister was right or wrong. They tried to be diplomatic and not offend either side with the usual result, they failed to satisfy anybody and Dolly Gann went along showing the society matrons how it was done, her style, and making them like it.

SNATCH SEVEN BOYS FROM DEATH AS ICE FLOES DRIFT TO SEA —After hops had been abandoned that seven young relief camp workers could be rescued from an ice floe in Cape Cod Bay near Brewster, Mass., aeroplanes finally located the marooned men and dropped blankets and food. These dramatic pictures were taken from the rescue plane and show the boys picking up the welcome supplies. Later, four were picked up by the coast-guard cutter, shown struggling through the ice, BELOW. In a thrilling rescue, a pilot risked his life to set his aeroplane down on the ice to rescue the other three.

8 Year Boy Movie Star Began Career at Eleven Months

REVUE IS A HIT

"I like your country. Canadians are swell, but gee, gosh it's cold here," stated little Billy Barty, eight year old movie star of the famous "Mickey Mcguire Comedies", who is appearing in person and with his own musical revue at the Belle Theatre, when interviewed today. Billy is a chubby little fellow and quite congenial, his success in the flickering celluloids is no way has interfered with his likeable manners and genial appearance. Billy, his two sisters, Dolores, 9, and Evelyn, 15, along with his parents appeared at the Belle Theatre yesterday and delighted three audiences with their revue and appear again this evening in personal appearances. It is the first appearance of a genuine juvenile movie star before a Belleville audience.

Prefers Keller and Powell

Billy has his own ideas as to the movies, but personally favours Dick Powell and Ruby Keller, but likes to work with Joe E. Brown better than any other movie celebrity. "Gee, I got a great kick out of appearing in "Footlight Parade," where I was the big 'can opener guy', and right in with the best stars, too," added the eight year old veteran of the movies.

Billy started his movie career at the age of 11 months and has appeared in exactly 200 movies and two different pictures, ranging from full length features down to one reelers. His parents and two sisters are touring the continent with Billy's personal revue and carry along as well a school teacher. Their duty it is to teach the Barty kiddies the primary subjects of education. Special hours are set aside each day in which only studies are entered upon and all other activities give way in order that their elementary learning may be properly laid.

Misses Will Rogers

When asked his opinion of the late Will Rogers, Billie hurriedly replied, "I think Will was the swellest guy I ever knew, and it was tough on us kids, when he was no longer around the movie lot. You won't believe it, but Will Rogers was our best friend, that is I mean, a genuine pal of the kids on the lot," soberly answered Billy.

Little Billy Barty has a wonderful sense of amateur drawing, his mother revealed today. "He takes a great interest in cartoons and we let him draw whenever possible, but he sometimes neglects other studies while attempting youthful cartoons. He thinks he would like to be a cartoonist when he grows up, so we encourage him as much as possible, because he has shown considerable talent along these lines," his mother modestly admitted.

Football Mascot

Billy, like all other kiddies, is an ardent lover of sports and was only recently made mascot to the University of Southern California rowing team and appeared in uniform with them during the recent Rose Bowl game, and was Billy proud when the U.S.C. won the Rose Bowl game on New Years'. He also takes a personal interest in other make sports and will always enjoy

Katherine Cornell Triumphs as 'Maid'

DETROIT, Feb. 13.—(CP)— A first night audience that was unwilling to leave the theatre after last night after the final scene accorded Katherine Cornell individual curtain calls as she created on the stage Shelley Duval, the vital and dynamic Maid of Orleans whimsy in the title role of Shaw's "Saint Joan."

Miss Cornell appeared, younger than ever in her "arching steel of armour and male attire and gained her greatest triumph with her impassioned plea for the support of the Dauphin.

Brian Aherne as Warwick and Maurice Evans as the Dauphin were outstanding in a cast that lived up to its reputation. Frank Conroy, Scott-Whidden speeches. From three years of every performance, Arthur Byron as the Inquisitor, was shaky in delivering the lines. One or six speeches, however, was 15 minutes.

Costumes were striking and settings by Jo Mielziner. In two instances drew applause as the curtain rose.

Nazis' New Campaign Against Alleged Enemies of the State To be Prosecuted With Vigor

Hinted That Jews in Germany to Serve as Hostages For Safety of Nazis Abroad

MANY ARRESTED

Governors in Future to Take Orders From The Gestapo, Secret State Police

(By Wade Werner)
(Associated Press Foreign Staff)
Berlin, Feb. 13.—(AP)—The grim, silent struggle by the Nazi Regime to exterminate all vestiges of anti-government tendencies in social, religious, athletic, commercial and political organizations of the Third Reich persisted today with renewed vigor.

Informed sources said perhaps the most significant among the recent disclosures was yesterday's announcement that all governors in future would take orders from the Gestapo, the Secret State police.

This was interpreted as an indication of an immediate carrying out of promises by Nazi leaders for more ruthless, more drastic measures against enemies within the Reich.

Ribbiland points were systematically silent after the recent raids against churches.

Prison Sentences for Comedian

The campaign went on, nevertheless, with prison sentences for a number of Communists, allegedly camouflaging their organization as an Athletic Association, dissolution of many minor organizations as women's coffee clubs and a warning to students at Hanover attempts to resume their old fraternity affiliations would be punished by a closing of avenues of post-graduate employment.

Informed sources said the Gestapo, behind this campaign, was more than an organization of salaried detectives. It was described as a secret order of picked men, devoted to the Nazi cause, who were referred to Wednesday's funeral for William Gustloff, shot at Davis by a Junior student.

The radical anti-Jewish weekly Judenkrasse even hinted Jews in Germany might serve as hostages for the safety of Nazis abroad.

"The shots fired at Davos place on us a responsibility for considering whether we should not openly declare to world Jewry and its hostmasters that for every German life on earth, Jew in Germany must answer with their lives," this newspaper said.

WASHING MACHINE REJUVENATES GOLD FISH BY EXERCISE

Aged Fish Become Frisky After Bucking Strong Current in Machine

ALL IN FUN

Oakland, Cal., Feb 14.— The rejuvenation of goldfish by means of the family washing machine will be one of the permanent contributions to modern science of the research workers of the Federal Writers' Project of this city.

The Federal writers, in search of material for the great American Guide Book, which they are to compile, visited a manufacturer of washing machines It developed the latter had sold ten machines to the proprietor of a goldfish hatchery. This incongruity sounded like real material for the guide book.

They visited the goldfish hatchery, and this is what they learned: It had been in operation when anyone wanted to buy a goldfish to provide the prospective purchaser with a long-handled net and let him catch the particular ones that struck his fancy. The idea also proved great sport for the customers.

But after a time, the proprietor noticed that his ponds were rapidly being depleted of all the young lively fish. While the old sluggish ones who hadn't enough pep left in them to give his customers a thrill in trying to catch them, remained.

He decided that perhaps the fault lay in the nets; that they needed cleaning to stimulate life in the fish.

So he put several of them into the family washing machine, using only plain water and turning on the current at a lively rate When he was about to take out the nets, he happened to notice that one of the oldest goldfish was cavorting about with the freshness of youth.

He immediately transferred it back to the pond and there it showed even more life than when in the washing machine.

The hatchery proprietor began to study this strange situation. He reasoned that the goldfish, accidentally put into the washing machine, had been obliged to buck the current of the water. He had jumped miniature water falls. He had breasted small waves and strove strenuously and, getting back into the currents of life again, had become his old self.

The old fish in the pond were put through the same rejuvenating process; the goldfish industry regained its youth.

Picton and District

Picton, Feb. 14.—Under the auspices of the Picton Tennis Club, two very successful amateur nights were staged at the Regent Theatre here. The large theatre was filled to overflowing the first night and also filled the second night, when new amateurs appeared. In all some 1,200 persons attended the two shows.

Gregory Carver of Wellington, was "Major Blows", Pat Hodgson was "Graham Packmaster" and Phillip Dodds was the manager of the show which was carried out in a splendid manner and kept the huge audience highly amused.

In all, over fifty amateurs were heard, offering every conceivable kind of entertainment.

The first night Mrs. Howard Hogle of Picton Route No. 2 won the Chest of Silver, as first prize. Her lovely mezzo-soprano voice proved very pleasing. Murray and Melba Smith of Bloomfield, who sang accompanied by a guitar, were second. They also went to Muriel Mitchell and Martha Mouck, Colleglate girls, who tap danced; fourth to Albert Case, Picton, who played the piano accordion; fifth to Betty Alice Wiggins of Cherry Valley who sang and sixth to little Betty Tuttle who sang.

Allan Nunley, yodeller with A. Maycock on guitar, were seventh, followed by Melba and Norma Rosebrugh, tiny young misses of Hillier who sang as Sisters. Donna Bartt's vocal number gave her ninth place and a black-faced skit by Bernard Hogan and David Campbell tenth. A special prize was awarded Gena Fenwick, Bloomfield, for singing.

Each person attending was given a ballot and these were cast for their favourite candidate.

The second night, Tuesday, saw an equally enjoyable program. The winners were as follows:

1—Jean Wood, Picton.
2—Ross Hagerman, Belleville.
3—Wm. Beasley, Picton.
4—Gordon Knapp, Picton.
5—Frances Pearce, Picton.
6—Alice Lowery, Woodcross.
7—Mr. McConnell, Consort Petre.
8—Oean Grearbix, Salmon Point.
9—Peter Mischuk, Picton.
10—Mrs. W. H. Vanwhart, Picton, R. 3.

Special—Ruth Kelson, Picton.

Special—Joseph Harvey, Wellington.

Jean Wood, aged 7, captivated the audience with a song and guitar, Ruth Hagerman did acrobatics and W. Beasley gave a humorous song with the ukulele. Doris Knapp gave a piano solo; Frances Pearce sang and Alice Lowery whistled.

A special feature of the first night was the singing of "God Save the King George V", words by A. E. Calnan, editor of the Picton Gazette; music by Mrs. Ritty Williamson Hooper of Picton; Mrs. (Dr.) Currie at the piano, Miss Florence Hanna, violin and Mr. Bruce Sills, violin obligato. Following the performances the ladies were presented with lovely flowers.

Mr. Sills gave a special number, which proved popular as well as the amateurs there was a program of movies headed by "Collegiate".

The Picton Club realized a large sum to carry on the work of the club.

Speaking not as a minister, or as a principal, but as an advocate for the boys and girls that they have grow up "strong, steel true, and blade straight," the Rev. Bert Howard, principal of Albert College, Belleville, delivered a stirring address before the Home and School Club at their February meeting, in the S. S. room of the United Church on Tuesday evening.

The speaker was introduced by Dr. C. E. Stothers, as a minister and schoolmaster who came to Albert College from the west, where he had worked as a minister and among young people for Twenty-four years.

Mr. Howard set the "boy's side of the case" before club members, fathers, and friends, in explaining some of the reasons boys get into trouble and find themselves in juvenile court. He gave illustrations cases that had come to his attention, as a teacher stressed the need of every boy to (1) a sound body, (2) a home where his parents are his chums, (3) a helpful, inspiring clean environment, (4) schools that he feels really want to help him. Mr. Howard drew attention to the realm of sport where boys are taught to "win the game" rather than to "play the game". He pleaded with the parents to know what was happening in the schools, and to use their influence that only teachers would be hired, whom the parents could get up per each boy.

Representing the school board Mr. Harry Blakely moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Howard for the fine address which was seconded by Mr. John Blakely. Mr. Vanwhart was chairman for the evening, and following routine business Mrs. Case gave a much enjoyed accordion solo, to which encores for which she responded. Mrs. Woodrow Blakely gave a fine piano solo. In a pleasant social half hour, refreshments were served.

Mrs. Gilla Hall of Picton, who has been seriously ill at his home, Yerseyville.

The Sacrifice

By MAUDE M. WELCH

"I can't give my baby up, Doctor! I can't!" Ellen held the child tight against her breast.

Doctor Jenkins looked at the frail young mother compassionately. Not even when you know it's best for the baby? he argued gently. "Think friends of mine who have taken such a fancy to your baby. They wouldn't. They can give little Dorothy everything".

Ellen's blue eyes gazed at him unhappily. "Maybe I'm selfish. I don't know. But I'm going to keep my baby. If it weren't for Dorothy, I—I wouldn't want to live. You see" It is only natural that you should feel that way," the doctor told her.

His knew what a hard struggle Ellen Curtis had had since the accidental death of her young husband, which had left her penniless and with a fifteen-month-old baby to support.

If there had been a day nursery in town Ellen's troubles would have been partially solved. She could go to work in a laundry, learning to handle the heavy mangles with skill, ignoring the fact that work was too hard for her. She could have placed a cheap room on the third floor of a dingy rooming house where she had once lived before she got married and come for the baby in her spare time.

But Ellen wasn't able to pay enough to attract the right sort of woman for nurse. There had been a quick succession of "temporary" incompetents. Then Mrs. Jones had been sent from the employment agency. She was just what the doctor looked kind and motherly. Ellen decided on a sigh of relief.

But Mrs. Jones was possessed of a stubborn streak. A couple of days after her husband left the baby must be fed only at certain hours, a short fifteen minutes, announced by the doctor, she had outstripped him. The child his own coarse diet.

Ellen's aid had been another trip to Doctor Jenkins.

The next nurse from the agency looked intelligent, but was a sullen person. Ellen had hope that the baby would be given proper care and attention.

She came home unexpectedly early one afternoon; when the entire laundry force had been discharged for the day because of the installation of new machinery, and found Mrs. Hughes, the new nurse, playing cards with some of her cronies, and the baby fast asleep.

One glance at Dorothy convinced Ellen that her sleep was not a natural one. In sudden alarm, she lifted the child to find her in a stupor from which she could not be aroused. She gave a terrified scream and ran quickly down the stairs. One of the lodgers met her at the door and went hurriedly for the doctor.

When Ellen returned, she flew the frightened woman with tears streaming down her pale, young face. "What did you give her? Answer me!" she shouted in a voice unmanded fiercely.

"Just a little of old-fashioned soothing syrup, Honey," the woman answered. "It wouldn't hurt a baby."

When Ellen had been reassured by Doctor Jenkins that her baby would live she sank white and exhausted into a chair.

"Tell your friends, Doctor," she whispered hoarsely, "that they can't have Dorothy. Tell them to come and get her at once, so I—won't have time to change my mind."

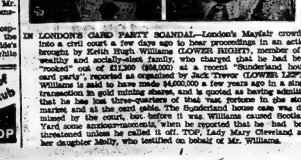
The doctor left Ellen alone in the chair, the child clasped in her arms sobbing bitterly. Then she dried her red-eyed face. She dared not think tomorrow when Dorothy would be gone. The long, long tomorrows that would come when she could hold the baby in her arms no more.

She dropped her head lower, lower, until her lips touched the child's flaxen curls. "Darling," she whispered, "you'll be safe. That's so important, you see."

When the knock for which she waited so bravely came, she bent deep into her lip. She must hold up until they were gone.

The door opened and a dirth-clothed looking woman followed by a sweet faced woman walked into the room.

For a moment there was an awkward silence. Then Allen moved toward Ellen. "She is a darling baby," she said through stiff lips. "And I know you—you will love her."



The woman did not take the baby. Instead she said softly, "I know you're hardly more than a child yourself." She turned to her husband and a quick flash of understanding passed between them. "My dear" the woman smiled at Allen, "We've decided to adopt both of you!"

LONDONS GREAT PARTY SCANDAL—London's Mayfair crowded into a civil court case days ago to hear proceedings in an action brought by Keith Hugh Williams (LOWER RIGHT), member of a wealthy social set-playboy family, who claimed that he had "hooked" out of £12,300 ($64,000) at a recent "Sunderland house card party", reported as equaling or beating a few years ago in a single transaction in gold mining shares, and is quoted as having admitted that he had lost thirty-two-quarters of that "sum, proceeds to the gold miners and at the card table. The Sunderland house case was dismissed by the court, but Williams caused Scotland Yard to start anti-corruption inquiry when he reported that he had been threatened unless he called it off. Do Beauty Chores!

Don't Let Up, Advises Writer, or Old Pop Time Will Begin to Show Self

By HELEN FOLLETT

Many a busy woman feels that her beauty chores are too many for her. She is up on current what happens? She loses morale, comes to the conclusion that trying will soon get the better of her. She'll soon be dragging out a little bundle and be off.

When a woman doesn't care how she looks any longer cares about anything. Beautifying certainly is a chore, a duty, but they stimulate the spirits. When it seems as if every hour is taken by a chore—of course, there aren't, you just think you are—take twenty minutes, put on a pretty frock, scamper to the beauty shop for a shampoo, finger wave, facial and manicure. All the clouds will be dispelled.

After that what do beauty tasks amount to? An hour or two at the week-end—bathing, hair washing, creaming the complexion, tinkering with the hands, freckening and lotion. Every night, a rite that consumes not more than fifteen minutes. It is well invested, for it brings dividends that are grand.

How about your hands? Are you one of those who have the habit of out of water that is extremely hot or extremely cold? Both are bad for the color and texture of the skin.

Every day cream the hands with lotion. Put on gutter with honeydew cosmetics soak sixty grains of gum tragacanth in a pint of water, add stronger rosewater, let stand for three days, add one ounce of alcohol and one ounce of rosewater. A few drops of the favorite perfume helps. Cucumber juice is also good. Look for the chillun when their little hands are cracked and sore.

Always some new stunt in the beauty marts. A famous beautician has a new face mask. A client cast I made of the patron's face, an electrician goes to his expert with the cast. The customer has a complexion anointed with fragrant cream. The mask is placed on the head, the current turned on. The oil is driven deep into the skin, and that the results are glorious. Pore deposits are softened, circulation stimulated, etc.

Muscle strapping is still popular.

HEALTH and PSYCHOLOGY
By Lovis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology
Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Ask a common people what they think would be the worst thing that could happen to them and you will get a dozen different answers.

Everyone thinks, in fact, that the trouble he has is the worst in all time is the worst. "It couldn't be worse!" is the usual cry.

When you are in trouble you can't get around it or outside of it. You've got to experience it, then looks black. We listen with sympathy to hear the troubles of our neighbors. "They think they have a burden to bear. They complain if they had my worries. Then they would have something to complain about! This about sums up the average attitude.

Well—what is the greatest sorrow anyone? To him the end of the world has come.

The death of any beloved one is sorrow to the deepest level. Any parent who loses a child, especially the mother, has an almost overwhelming grief to bear.

Sorrow is the bankrupt. is often distressing. It involves financial obligations, a new start sometimes. The complexity may even involve one's honor.

Illness a cause for genuine worry, especially when it is chronic. Here are but a few common examples of great sorrow! I'm sure others have already come to your mind which are just as or worse than any I have listed! And that is exactly what I was trying to bring out. I want to prove there is no such thing as a greatest sorrow.

What constitutes great, greater or greatest sorrow is entirely up to the individual who must bear it!

"It pays" is said to be a popular saying and it might sadly be multiplied by manifold ways.

Sometimes, "cheer up," as another old saw put it. It ought to help you to get over your sorrows when others are not the heaviest, that others have even a more slight. It doesn't mean that you should feel satisfaction because of others' difficulties. But you should realize that you are no exceptional case, that this is the way you go out for misfortune, but that you are merely dealing with all the rest of a certain proportion of sorrow, which is the lot of every human being.

A third saying comes to mind in this connection. It's this: "Every cloud has a silver lining!" Nobody really knows what the worst sorrow is. We do not know how sorrows usually end.

Assume your trouble is not the worst anyway. It helps a lot!

A SPARKLING NOTE is added to many white frocks. For wear north or south, there is an effective frock of white taffeta, the skirt marked by deep tucks, the bodice chemisette type bodice has circlets of rhinestones, these being repeated on the belt.

LACEY VALENTINE DISH SMART PARTY TOUCH
Sparkling Red Jelly Makes Finest Token For Table
By Katharine Baker
Modern realists don't appreciate the lace and gold Valentines that thrilled grandmother's heart, but they acknowledge with gusto the lacey Valentine plate that graces the table on this day of love tokens. Frills and fancies for Valentine parties should be simple and edible, the modern party-goer does not desire to be served the decorations. With that in mind, the smart hostess must give every guest an appetizing Valentine.
Sparkling red jelly is used in the form of cubes, the new gelatine flavored jelly powder that dissolves in warm water sets so quickly that there's no hours of waiting. Serve in strawberry or cherry flavor is best in molded individual Valentine parties. A piping of whipped cream around the edge of a red paper doily gives a suggestion of the old-fashioned cards with doves and roses with a small heart-shaped cookie cutter and these hearts placed on individual cakes. Very attractive and new is the riced or shaved jelly folded into whipped cream and used on desserts and cakes. The jelly is simply broken up with a fork or spoon and bits sparkle through the cream.
Small heart-shaped cakes covered with white frosting and outlined with red cinnamon candies are very gay and if a candy motto heart is placed in the center they'll be out of the hits of the evening. Little cup cakes covered with the long shredded sweetened coconut and the candy heart in the centre will bring old-fashioned giggles from the crowd when they read "roses red, violets, honey is sweet, so are you" for that silly verse still has a kick in it for the young and sophisticated and for the oldsters who remember pasting the candies along the aisles in school.

Beauty tasks, she has learned, have beneficial results

It is not merely a surface measure to cleanse and stimulate the complexion, it tones the lower layers of muscle that have gone sagging. It is claimed, too, that sebaceous glands are put in condition, that the texture of the skin is improved.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Little Colonel"

Shirley Temple Captures Hearts; Gene Autry in "Tumbling Tumbleweeds"

An absorbing story, and the presence of the one and only Shirley Temple, make "The Little Colonel," which opens today at the Capitol Theatre, an extraordinary screen event.

Once again, America's golden-haired sweetheart captures with her unpretentious art, her honest acting, the hearts of old and young.

She is co-starred with Lionel Barrymore in this heart-tugging superb story of a bitter Kentucky family feud dating back to the days of the Civil War, when prejudices still rankled, and a woman who carried her heart to a failed "lost cause" was ostracized by friends and relations.

The five-year-old screen sensation has the role of a tiny tot whose childish love and laughter calms the bitterness and false pride that make wretched a stern old Kentucky aristocrat who has turned his back on his daughter.

Shirley's charm shines in this story which is as tender as her baby heart. Not only is her work extraordinary as an actress, but she quite captivates the most blase with her singing, quite surprises one with her dancing talents when she appears with Bill Robinson and accompanies him in his famous stair-dance.

As if this wealth of surprises were not enough, this Fox Film picture is produced by D. O. Selznick and is a blaze of Technicolor. For the first time in her meteoric career, Shirley Temple is presented in color.

Barrymore's presentation of the choleric colonel is masterly. Commendable, also, is the fine work of the supporting cast composed of Evelyn Venable, Hale Hamilton, Sidney Blackmer, Alden Chase, Willard Robertson, Frank Darien, Hattie McDaniel, and the already mentioned Bill Robinson.

"The Little Colonel" is heartily recommended to all picture lovers.

Starting on the Capitol stage Wednesday, one day only, "Follies Parisienne," a cast of twenty-five girls and twelve principals in attraction extraordinary. Make a date for it now.

AT THE BELLE

"Professional Soldier"

A Rollicking Yarn, Kane Grey Western added Feature

Motion picture fans who thrills to the memory of Victor McLaglen in the role he played in the famous "The Lost Patrol", have an even greater story of bristling excitement in store for them in "Professional Soldier," the 20th Century picture coming tomorrow (Saturday) and Monday to the Belle Theatre.

This is the picture, adapted from the Damon Runyon story, that brought McLaglen into still higher Barthdonwer star of "David Copperfield." It is a stirring adventure drama, teeming with action, and telling the story of a great friendship between a little boy and a gruff soldier of fortune.

The climax is reached in showing how McLaglen defeats the enemies of his little friend and incidentally in one of the most nerve-scraping fights ever filmed.

Prominent in the supporting cast of "Professional Soldier" are Gloria Stuart and Michael Whalen. Both are the romantic interest of the story.

Kane Grey's Best Western

Kane Grey, who is without a peer as a story-teller of the West in his unbridled days, wrote "Drift Fence" which Paramount has produced and is announced as the second feature attraction on the same program.

Packed with thrills and bristling with danger, this action drama provides exciting entertainment for young and old.

Featured roles are played by Larry "Buster" Crabbe, Tom Keene, Katherine DeMille, Benny Baker, Clarence Erickson and Stanley Andrews.

"Drift Fence" dramatizes the conflict between the big cow and small ranch-owners, when all land was considered common property for grazing purposes Taking advantage of the situation, a group of cattle rustlers enlists the aid of a young rancher to keep the vast lands of his neighbor from the encroachment with a fence. At the last moment, the young rancher is framed by means of a tool of cattle thieves, he changes identity and helps a Texas Ranger bring the outlaws to justice.

A fine romance is interwoven through "Drift Fence," and the entertaining sequences of bronchobusting stampedes, dance and pistol fights.

The Belle latest news flashes will be exhibited on the same program, and the matinee on Saturday the closing chapter of the popular "Mystery Squadron" will be exhibited.

Mickey Mouse Magazines

The first five hundred boys and girls attending the Belle on Saturday matinee will be presented with a ten cent Mickey Mouse magazine absolutely free, containing fifty pages of cartoons, stories and novelties.

Billy Barty, Lovable

Hollywood's ace juvenile screen star, little 8 year old Billy Barty and his smart stage revue, delighted four large audiences at the Belle yesterday. Here is a genuine wholesome stage entertainment that will appeal to every member of the family.

Paramount's song-and-dance comedy was the amusing hour "Millions in the Air" featuring Wendy Barrie, John Howard, Stanley Fields, Whitney Bourne, Isabel Jewell, George Barbier, Willie Howard and Broadway's favorite hunster, and Benny Baker is one of the funniest comedy hits of the year. By all means do not miss this outstanding combination stage and screen show to be presented at the Belle tonight for the last time. It's grand entertainment!

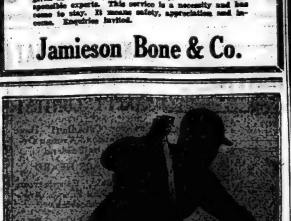
INDIAN POTLATCH MAY BE OUSTED

Vanishing Custom Likely to Be Legislated Against

Ottawa, Feb. 14 (CP)—The "potlatch" that vanishing custom of certain Indian tribes in Canada, will disappear altogether if amendments to the Indian Act introduced in the House of Commons yesterday by Hon. T. A. Crerar become effective.

The potlatch, according to officials of the Indian Department, is a "give-away party." An Indian gathers about him all the goods and property he can get hold of. He then invites other members of the tribe to a big feast and dance. And while the festivities are in progress, he gives away the goods he has accumulated.



Sometimes this giving away goes pretty far. He may even give away his canoe, Firewater at times flows, and dancers work themselves up into quite a frenzy. There is also a religious side to the affair which is not clearly understood.

The potlatch has been frowned upon by the authorities. Even without the amendments it is an infraction of the Indian Act. It has been found the Indian who gives away all his property on the occasion of a potlatch is liable to claim property from the beneficiaries later on. Also he frequently hopes to obtain prestige in the tribe which will stand him in good stead. It is altogether a beneficial entertainment.

IVAR BALLANGRUD SKATING CHAMP

Wins 10,000 Metres Event in New Olympic Record Time

Garmisch - Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 14.—(CP)— Norway completed a clean sweep of the speed skating championships of the fourth winter Olympics today as Ivar Ballangrud captured the 10,000 metres event in new Olympic record time.

Ballangrud, who previously had equalled one Olympic standard and broken another in annexing the 500 metre and 5,000 metre, titles was clocked in the sensational time of 17 minutes, 24.3 seconds.

This compared with the Olympic record of 17.56.3 turned up by Alex Hurt of Sudbury, Ont., in one of the trial heats of the 1932 games at Lake Placid, N.Y.

Clean Sweep

With Ballangrud's latest victory, Norway completed a speed skating sweep. Charles Mathiesen won the 1,500 metre title for Norway yesterday with Ballangrud undisputed king of world speed skaters, a close second.

Second to Ballangrud today was Birger Vassfjord of Oslo, who was clocked at 17.52.3. Max Stiepl of Austria was third in 17.56.

Tommy Wells, a game little fellow from Saint John, N.B., got a big hand from the crowd of 8,000 when he finished in 18.35.3. He consistently kept in the van of Jackson of Sweden, who was clocked in 18.36.3.

Edda Schroeder of Chicago, also shattered Olympic record turning in a consistent 11-flat performance but failed to land a place among the leaders.

by service trucks, Restaurants and hotels enjoyed a sudden popularity with customers made up of city office workers and travellers. Passage between this city and Toronto was possible, but average time made by the heavier transports for the distance was between eight and nine hours.

First Break

The storm held off only one relief for winter-weary residents. Late last night thermometers commenced their steady rise until at noon today little more than freezing temperatures were registered. It was the first break in below zero temperatures in nearly one month.

An impasse was created in several instances when cars, breaking their way through single track furrows on less travelled roads met. Wise drivers who carried shovels managed to clear paths for both cars to pass. One instance was reported where a driver was forced to back his machine for nearly half a mile before opportunity was found for both to proceed opposite directions.

Firemen of the local department added snow shovels again as part of their extra equipment.

Shortly after midnight tonight an extra force of snow shovelers numbering between thirty and forty will again tackle the business section of the city, assisted by fifteen or more trucks and the city plow.

LEAFS' ATTACK STRANGLED BY MONTREAL TEAM

Canadiens Defeated 2-1 Giving Maroons a One Game Lead

WINGS INCREASE LEAD

Beat Boston, While Hawks Hold to Tie By Americans

(By Eamar Dolmage)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

An expert in the proper method strangling the luxuriant attack of Toronto Maple Leafs, that the hockey has become routine, Montreal's world-champion Maroons turned down the home-stretch on the National Hockey League race with a one-game advantage over the Leafs.

The old rivals of the Canadian championship a feud that has been bitter but one-sided since the Stanley Cup finals last spring, when the Leafs last night in Montreal the Maroons won 2-1. They had won four dead-on shots in the first period and one of them found the mark.

Methodically and confidently Maroons checked the dashing Leafs, content to concede all the scoring this they had only occasional opportunities to shoot, but when they did get around to shooting, however, they fired accurately (as was the same old story, black-haired Lorne Chabot, Toronto goalie, found out. The forgotten man of the N.H.L., Chabot, made his debut in the Montreal goal. The Leafs couldn't get much with the forged Chabot and their ball training injury Wilf McKaskas all the chance they needed. Young Mike confiscated Chabot's job.

Chabot Plays Star Part

Chabot played a star part as his mates bowled only 14 shots at Georges Hainsworth. Baldy Northcott made one of these good in the first period, racing away from a Toronto gang attack with Jimmy Ward to send Marcel Desjardins' backer connected with another late in the third after Lionel Conacher and Bob Gracie had carried the puck down.

Toronto's only 'goal' came in the second period, Frank Finnigan shooting for a rebound off the end of the rink after King Clancy had lost The smashing bling about it was that Maroons had only six shots on Hainsworth in the last two periods.

Tommy Gorman's Redmen, incidentally, have been accustoming of sort all season. After winning Stanley Cup last spring, Coach Gorman shuffled to the effect-but-bowlegging system that has won in five starts against the Leaf this season.

Wings Increase Lead

Detroit Red Wings, No. 1 bet all season for a berth in the N.H.L. finals, increased their lead in the standings over Chicago Black Hawks by blanking Boston Bruins 2-0 at Detroit, while Chicago was in a similar matter with the Red Wing defense machinery, and little effective shooting, as Toronto Leafs did. Marty Barry, an ex-Bostonian, was the only man to early in the second period on a pass from Bobbie Lewis. The victory gave the Detroit sextet, because Chicago Black Hawks were failing to keep pace with the Motor City team, tied to a 2-2 tie by New York Americans.

The Hawks nearly didn't get even this. They trailed by a 2-0 count until shortly before Glenn Brydson, defend recently in a trade for Ralph Bowman, rounded in the only goal on Johnny Gottselig's pass. Brydson's shot was deflected by Paul and Eddie Wiseman and Nels Stewart scored for Americans.

HOCKEY'S BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

An assist on Eddie Wiseman at the Montreal Forum Chicago at New York last night moved Art Chapman into a second-place tie with Cecil Dillon of Rangers in the National Hockey League's scoring race. Bentley Schriner drew an assist on the same goal, raising his score to 14 goals and 18 assists, for 32 points ahead of Dillon and Chapman, who now has nine goals and 18 assists.

Paul Thompson of Chicago picked up a point on an assist in Johnny Gottselig's goal and moved into a three-way tie with Cook Doraldo and Bill Thoms of Maple Leafs in third place with 25 points. Thompson has 13 goals and 12 assists.

The standing:

	G.	A.	Pts.
Schriner, Americans	14	17	31
Dillon, Rangers	17	10	27
Chapman, Americans	9	18	27
Doraldo, Toronto	14	11	25
Thoms, Toronto	13	12	25
Thompson, Chicago	13	12	25
Gracie, Detroit	13	7	20
Conacher, Toronto	8	14	22
Gottselig, Chicago	9	13	22

—How to Bowl No. 3—

GRIP IS VITAL FUNDAMENTAL

By MRS. FLORETTA D. McCUTCHEON

WORLD CHAMPION WOMAN BOWLER

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a series of ten lessons on bowling, written especially for Central Press Canadian by Mrs. Floretta D. McCutcheon, women champion bowler and nationally known bowling instructor.

Mrs. McCutcheon approves as Pupil Jane Davis picks up ball properly. Right, placing fingers in ball correctly.

The first step in the approach to bowling is learning to pick up the ball the right way. Always pick up you ball with both hands placing your hands on the sides of the ball parallel to the ball rack. Never put your hands between two balls or on the side where a returning ball may catch your hand. If you learn and follow this rule, you'll never have a smashed finger.

In putting your fingers into the three-finger ball, use the two middle fingers and thumb, leaving the index finger and little finger outside for balance. With a two-hole ball, use the middle finger and the thumb. This will give you a much better grip than if you put the thumb in first.

Ball Must Fit Hand.

Use a ball that fits your hand. Any old ball will not do. Every modern bowling alley has balls that will fit you. Such a ball will feel lighter and you will roll it with far less effort and a great deal better results. Don't use a ball that does not fit your hand.

A good test is this. Select a ball with a wide enough span between the finger hole and the finger hole so that if your thumb is in the thumbhole and your fingers spread over the ball, the first joint of your finger will come just over the centres of the finger holes.

The size of the holes should be such that the fingers go in comfortably in them, nor should they be so large that your fingers have to grip the ball. The fit should be snug and comfortable.

Common Fault.

The tendency most bowlers is to use too narrow a grip. If the fingers grip the ball narrow, you will have to pinch your ball to hold onto it with the index finger and thumb. You probably will roll a "backup" ball, which is ineffective. If the grip or span is too wide, you will "choke" the ball and find it impossible to release it. The ball will start to slide, instead of rolling it, and at an angle.

Yesterday's lesson I mentioned an 85-year-old lady, 33 years an active bowler. The youngest bowler I ever knew was little Sammy Bull, Jr., whose father is proprietor of a recreation hall in St. Louis. Sammy was just 16 months old when he bowled his first ball. It was a specially made ball, duck pin size, but with finger holes and the average man really would bowl for the pins. The youngster was happier than when bowling. His mother told me that the first words he learned were "Strut—ball."

Score in Home Game is 11-4 And 16-5 on The Round

LOCALS ALWAYS BEST

'Redmen' Carried Too Much Speed And Combination For Loosers

Continuing their offensive play the Belleville "Redmen" downed Napanee O.H.A. by the score of 11 to 4 in the second game of the first round of the intermediate O.H.A. playdowns at the Belleville Arena last evening, thereby winning the round by the score of 16 to 5. The local victory advances the 'Redmen' into the second round of the O.H.A. intermediate "B" series.

The Thomasites were always on top of the game, and the fact that the fast-travelling Napanee speedsters repeatedly carried the play on the offensive. The Redmen counted on their previously known four goal advantage from the games and added their time to score as the aggressive Gerow-coached outfit carried the puck without much trouble to the locals' goal territory. The visitors' inability to score.

Harry Ingram was the big goal-getter of the night, as he banged three of the 'Redmen's' counters. Pete Morgan made two and Jimmie McGuire, Harry Morgan, St. Louis, McElrath and Bentley each added a single goal for the locals in a one-sided game. Stan Card with two goals led the losers, and Smith as Wilson and B. Jackson scored to finish the visitors' efforts on the offensive. Lou St. Louis and Morton, coupled with the local defence, were the big guns for the Redmen, as Murphy, Wilson and Jackson stood out for the visitors. Both teams displayed the individual star of the night.

The game opened with both teams setting up a brushing defensive, but as the pastime advanced the forwards took command in a thrilling game. However in no way indicates the play as the defeated Napanee sextet battled fervently throughout and never delinquented their efforts. The local victory elevates the Belleville team into the second round of the intermediate O.H.A. play-downs.

The Play.

Napanee opened well on the offensive as they tried to cut down the Redmen's four-goal advantage, but the superior work of Morton, coupled by the united efforts of the locals kept the scrap of the foreign attack from scoring. St. Louis, in a solo effort opened the scoring of the night, but Card came back with a counters as he and Wilson's pass and the initial frame ended one all. From then on the Redmen dominated the offensive play to lead at the end of the second period 4-2, and add to their advantage and win 11 to 4 on the game and 16-5 on the round. The Redmen showed their superior team play by scoring eight straight scoring goals in the middle stanza, but the feature goal of the night was Jimmie McGuire's solo shot in the middle period. McGuire skating through the Napanee defence he scored a thrilling goal. The Redmen showed more goalish all night, as the final line defence in a hard fought, bruising game that saw the losers go down fighting in a splendid manner. The Redmen now meet Campbellford, who defeated the Cobourg sextet of the Intermediate O.H.A. play-downs.

CANUCKS DEFEAT GERMANY 6-2 IN SNAPPY CONTEST

However Canadians Have No Chance to Avenge Defeat by England

BOOS ARE HEARD

St. Germain, Farquharson, Neville And Farmer Are The Scorers

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 14 (CP)—Canada's Olympic hockey team, assured of entering the final, that must be surpassed if they are to retain the crown, which hitherto they have never relinquished.

A 6 to 2 victory over Germany last night assured the Dominion of moving up into the final round, along with Great Britain, the United States and Czechoslovakia.

But Canada and Czechoslovakia face a handicap the other two finalists escaped. Both were defeated in the second round-robin series, while the British and American cases emerged unscathed. Even if Canada wins all her final games, England must lose once to enable the Canucks to cop the title.

The draw for the final series calls for England and Czechoslovakia to clash tonight.

Canada plays the Czechs Saturday morning. Saturday night England and the United States clash, the final game on Sunday afternoon sends Canada against the United States.

The preliminary second round standings are credited in the final round robin series, which gives no opportunity to avenge the defeat by England last night.

Spirited Contest

Last night's game against Germany was a spirited contest with 10,000 pro-German spectators present and frequently interrupting play with prolonged boos and shouts. Several times, in an announcer acted for silence—but his efforts were a spectacular solo counter before the period ended.

Germany opened scoring in the final period as centre Wiedemann scored from close in. Then Farquharson for Canada kept pressing. St. Germain pushed in a long shot, which rebounded to the net after a wild scramble in front of the goal. Neville tallied again on a pass from Walter Kitchen to close the Canuck scoring. Farmer for the final goal was notched by Strobl after he skilfully outmanoeuvred the Canadian defence.

Bodychecks Handed Out

Stiff bodychecks were handed out in the final period as 10 minor penalties were awarded. Germany got five of these, Canada three. Referee Jean Laurent, Hockey Federation met yesterday to consider a possible protest by the final game Belgian system. President Loicq suggested that Canada meet Austria, the last round-robin on an even basis. But the British delegation, represented by Canadian spokesman, opposed this plan, holding the middle of the competition was the time for changing the system. Over the protest, Canada and Germany they carried the day with their point.

President E. A. Gilroy of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association said the Canucks would play the game and abide by the rules. The Canadian Club and Consul are over any decisions reached by the Federation.

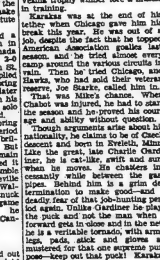
Rookie honors for this season so far must go to Mike Karakas, pin-wheel goalkeeper who stepped into the shoes of Lorne Chabot after the Vedina trophy winner tore a muscle in training.

Karakas was at the end of his tether when Chicago gave him his break this year. He was out of a job, despite the fact that he topped the Amateur Association goalies last season, and he tried almost every other trick in the trade when he was in the minors. Then he tried Chicago, and Hawks, who had their veteran in reserve, Joe Starke, called him in.

That was Mike's chance. When Chabot was injured, he had to start the season and he proved his courage and ability without question.

Though arguments arise about his sensational style, there is no doubt of his decency and keen in Kvelich, Minn. Like the great Hawks with whom he plays, he is flat-like, swift and sure when he moves. His chasters include pipes. Behind him is a grim defensemindedness that has stood up in many a tough game tonight. Jean Parker, Phyllis Rawson, Et-



Eddie Thomas' Redmen moved into the second round of the intermediate O.H.A. play-downs after a one-sided victory over the Napanee Cobbards last evening. The first team on the books to come down winners by the score of 5 to 4, while the home game give the Redmen an 11 to 4 victory, thus giving the round to the Redmen by the final count of 16 to 5. The scoring figures may look one to believe, that Belleville was far the superior club but, after watching the play, however, we congratulate the losers, as well as the winners. There was little doubt, but that the Redmen were the better team, they showed more class, better knowledge of the game and lastly a far better rear guard, as Ingram and McDonald played the puck, while the Bentley's tried to play the puck-carrier, which proved their undoing. On the whole the better team emerged winners as they displayed a better system of attack, as well as defence. Continuing to play as they have, the Redmen should carry Belleville hockey honors to provincial heights.

There is no player on a hockey team, who sometimes does not come in for much credit as he perhaps should receive, that player being the goalkeeper of any team. The goalie is always on the defensive and never gets an opportunity to shoot out the spotlight enjoyed by attackers, which is naturally what the fans appreciate mostly. Belleville has been rather fortunate this year in procuring the services of Eric Morton who has turned in such a splendid account of his winter's efforts. Last night the goal tender for the "Redmen", Morton, is always on the alert and much of the success enjoyed by Eddie Thomastites can be attributed to the good work of Morton. Belleville will be also tends goal for Stirling in the Hastings Valley League and this week will be called upon to tend goal every night for either the Redmen or Stirling. We also share the same fate as he has a Sweet Home.

"The sympathy of the sporting fraternity, especially the local basketball personages, goes out to the family of Wilfred Orville Kenney, "Cret," as he was known to his basketball friends. Cret was the most feared hitter in the C.O.B.L. and his sudden passing was heartily felt by his diamond associates. A number of the old-timers also attended his funeral yesterday.

Appearing as the feature attraction, some 30 members of the Belleville Gaelic Club are scheduled as the outstanding event of the evening, when they present their version of a Celtic dance, starting this evening. The local skaters will participate in 20 numbered events, including solos, doubles, foursomes and fours, and a number of novelties also be augmented. The soloists for the opening number tonight, are Jean Parker, Phyllis Rawson, Et-when Emeralds, through penalties, had their forward lines broken up. Their shots were either weak or Becker proved too good.

Midway through the last period Queen's gambled by placing five forwards on the ice, but a tripping penalty to Munro forced them to bring back the defencemen.

Another main offender was in the dying minutes of play, when they defaulted sent four and then one into Emerald territory for assaults on Becker, only to have the latter bagging the second counter from a pass out behind the net by Tom Thurby.

LEAGUE LEADING MAGEDOMAS LOSE

Lasalle Shutout Brockville While Emeralds Take Queens 7-2

Ottawa, Feb. 14.—(CP)— League leading Rockville Magedomas suffered their second defeat of the season, when they bowed to the LaSalle 4-0 here last night in an Ottawa senior city hockey league game. The victory was the first of the double-bill Queen's University took from Emeralds.

Led by Pete Howe, centre-ice player, LaSalle scored counsaid of many throughout the game. After a scoreless first period the Cavaliers broke the ice-jam in the second, little more than three minutes of playing time after the start of the rest of the way. Penalties in the last session cost Magedomas whatever chance they had of staging a rally in the game. The win moved LaSalle up to a tie with Queen's for third place in the league standing.

Forge in the league standing.

Long Day.

A tired ice following the long bus trip from Kingston, and a "Summer" Woodcock, star forward, the students conceded a two-goal lead in the first period before Johnny Munro retaliated with a brilliant solo effort. Scoring the puck close to his own blue line, Munro skated fast to split the defence, his high shot going cleanly by goalie Becker.

We had a short talk with the little fellow and he it all in love with ice hockey. "Boy I saw a game in New York and that's the hockey sure tackle a wallop," commented Billy in relationship to the first introduction to Canada's national game. We thought his conception of the position worth mentioning, especially coming from an eight year old kid, who has been a fan for only a sunny California most of his life.

Apparently Stratford is really hockey crazy, as a request for information from the railway centre would indicate, that the fall baseball moguls up around the Intercounty League contended that Stratford had the best senior club in Western Ontario and not Galt. Apparently Stratford is getting into the baseball swim early this year as yesterday the secretary of the Intercounty League received a cheque covering the 1936 entry fees for Stratford's three baseball teams, senior, intermediate and junior. The senior team is mounted in fill, covering entrance fees and players' list collectively. This reminds us that the semi-annual meeting of the O.H.A. will be held in Kingston in about a month's time also.

OMIT AUTHORITY ON TAX BILL BUT IS STILL LEGAL

Enabling Formula Can Be Placed on Bill by Amendment

CLAIM DISCRIMINATION

Throne Speech is Moved and Seconded in House

Toronto, Feb. 14 (CP)—Premature explosion of a bombshell the Opposition apparently intended to explode in the Ontario Legislature and the Government faced with the realization today a drafting blunder had been made in the Ontario Income Tax Bill.

Drafters of the bill omitted the enabling formula placed at the top of all Government bills, it was discovered and the Government plans to move to make the necessary amendment.

Instead of the formula which reads, "His Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, enacts as follows", the only note at the top of the bill was the customary definition of the short title.

With a chuckle, Acting Premier Harry Nixon answered a query as to the legality of the bill with the declaration an amendment containing the formula could be inserted any time and this would be done shortly.

Big Net Haul

His words betrayed surprise the information had leaked out. Leopold Macaulay, Conservative member for York South, insisted the amendment could not be inserted. He described the procedure as "running a motor car without the motor."

Arthur Ellis of Ottawa, another Conservative, said the defect was not fatal to the bill and it could be amended either in the committee of the whole or before the House at the second or third reading.

From Major John Lewis, member for Kirkfield Legislature, came the opinion:

"It does not make the bill illegal. It may be amended in the committee of the whole House. The case is that contrary to me at the moment is the case of the Statute Law Amendment Act 1935 which not only passed its first and second reading but received the royal assent, while I am not contending that it actually was law, it is a fact that it was made legal at the following session which added what is called the enabling formula."

Show Unusually Charged

Hammond said by the Opposition for two days, the Income Tax bill, giving the Province the right of taxing incomes formerly held by municipalities, appears again today before the Legislature.

Conservatives made the bill the subject for committee discussion on Wednesday, when their demanded the Government show the necessity for it and yesterday Opposition leader George S. Henry, during the debate on second reading, declared it discriminated between Ontario and the other Eastern provinces, which did not tax income.

The bill came up for second reading after moving and seconding of the address in reply to the speech from the Throne. St. Clair Gordon (Lib. East) West) moved the address, forecast a new highway policy, involving repairing, strengthening and extending trunk highways in Old Ontario.

J. Harry Jelley (Lib. Nipissing) concluded an address on Northern Ontario with a decision if rights of Separate Schools had not been obtained, Confederation would not have been possible.

The 504 Necessary Cabs

Mr. Marcoux noted reference in the Throne Speech to "a more equitable distribution of revenue for educational purposes and said Separate School supporters were confident their appeal for equal consideration would receive support.

"I have never said there was a good ox in this province where I think a Provincial income tax is a proper case," the Opposition leader said. He would, however, favor such a measure for the Province as a whole. The former Premier urged a drastic upward revision of Federal subsidies to the Provinces.

CENTRE MISSION BAND

The February meeting of Centre Mission Band was held in the school-room. The meeting opened with a hymn, followed by the business of the last meeting by the secretary, Leslie Wynne, who was absent. Very good work. Margaret Bellyou gave a reading. The Worship Band was in charge of Ina Janney. This was followed by quiet music by the group. The topic of the Worship was answered with the Response, repeated by all. Lorna Wynne led in prayer, followed by the Lord's Prayer.

A hymn was sung and the Scripture was read by Ruth Hawley. The Roll Call was answered with the memory verse. The offering amounted to 32c.

Miss Odle read a story about Africa, which was enjoyed by all. Another hymn was sung by Miss Janney. The first verse of a hymn was sung, followed by prayer. The meeting closed with singing our World Friends.

ONTARIO CREDIT AT HIGHEST PEAK

Average Interest Rate on Funded Debt is 4.544 Per Cent

Toronto, Feb. 14 (CP)—The credit of Ontario never stood at a higher point than today, A. St. Clair Gordon, Liberal member of the Provincial Legislature for South West, declared in moving the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

During the present fiscal year, he said, debentures were sold and in part for a total amount of $45,000,-000. Interest rates ranged from 2.65 percent to 3.86 percent. Treasury bills were sold at varying rates from 3½ percent down to 3 percent and the results from these interest savings left the average interest rate on the funded debt at 4.544 percent. The funded debt as of December 31, 1935, was $607,896,994.

In the first nine months of the present fiscal year, ordinary expenditures of the Government were $6,000,000 less than in the corresponding period of the previous year and capital expenditures between April 1, 1935, and December 1, were $20,000,000 lower than the same previous period.

Wise regulations of the last year regarding marketing of milk, beans and tobacco were beneficial to farmers. Bean growers will be interested as a result of recent regulations and the sale of beans on consignment discontinued, he continued.

Touched on Agriculture

Mr. Gordon touched for a moment on agriculture in Kent county which, he said, "has long been known as the greatest corn producing county in the Dominion." He spoke also of sugar beets from which farmers obtain $2,000,000 a year.

In Kent County, if farmers could obtain higher prices, "as fair prices for farm produce, within two years great changes would take place in regard to payments of mortgages and debts both to Governments and to individuals," he said.

Study of Highway Department figures showed the Government had a trending influence on people of Ontario. While the number of motor cars in 1929 was 1,000 less than in 1930, "We find," he said, "that we are using cars in far more business". The number of commercial vehicles increased by 30,000 over 1934 and 50,000 over that the high record of 1931.

Mr. Gordon said the Government's policy was to perfect trunk roads by widening and resurfacing while at the same time not neglecting the building of roads into new territory in the north.

June Withers, charming child star of the screen, substitutes for Dan Cupid to portray the Leap Year sentiment of St. Valentine's Day.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating breakfast and me said to pop, Pop what's the day for Valentine Day, and of course there's nothing in my mail but unpaid bills. I suppose you dont even remember the days when you never failed to send me 5 pounds of the most expensive candies in a Mg box shaped like a heart, or later when the candy shrank to 2 pounds but still remained faithful to a heart shape box, or even still later when the box changed to oblong and 1 pound in size but still with a nice ribbon around it, she said.

I remember very well, and I presented pop yesterday when I joined the eager throng of young people assembled among the counters for a token worthy of the fervor of their sentiments, pop said, and me said, Why Willyum how wonderful, but then if that's the case where is it?

That's the story, pop said. I thawt to myself how unsatisfactory it would be to send you one of these lacy confections designed and executed by some stranger to whom your charms will always be unknown, and I thawt to myself how much more fitting it would be to give you something I had made with my own hands, or at least by the labor of my own brow. I refer to this, he said.

And he took a 10 dollar bill out of his wallet, saying, Within its humble limits buy yourself a present from me and to your hart's desire.

O Willyum how perfect, I know exactly what I'm going to get with it unless I change my mind for something even more appropriate, and do you know the Valentine I'm going to have for the little evening? me said, and pop said, Not liver and onions, O boy! and me said, Precisely, and I'm going to have Nora cut the liver into little hart shapes with the mold she uses for biskitts.

It's a man's werd, pop said.

And he got up and kissed me and folded up his paper and went out whissling.

PREMIER NAMES FRED SANDERSON DEPUTY SPEAKER

House Committee to be Appointed to Probe Dismissals

OLYMPICS DISCUSSED

Soon to Announce Personnel of Penitentiary Commission

Ottawa, Feb. 14.—(CP)—Sale of Prairie wheat and employment of House of Common charmen and chairwomen are the only two contentious issues yet developed by the present session of Parliament. Both will be investigated by Parliamentary committees.

With the address debate out of the way and a Deputy Speaker chosen probe into these two matters, one involving millions of dollars to Prairie farmers and the other a few thousand dollars to Ottawa citizens, will begin as soon as appropriate committees can be named.

Last night the House adopted the address in reply to the speech from the Throne without a division after rejecting by the record vote of 208-8 an amendment sponsored by J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F. Leader. The seven C.C.F. members and Miss Agnes Macphail, U.F.O.—Leader Grey-Bruce), were the only supporters of Mr. Woodsworth's amendment. Liberals, Conservatives and Social Crediters voted against it.

The Wheat question entered the debate again when R. B. Parley (Conn. Qu'Appelle) and M. J. Coldwell, K.C.C.F. (Rosetown-Biggar), criticized the new Wheat Board on the score it had assisted traders to boost grain prices.

Deputy-Speaker Named

Conservative leader Bennett rallied anew the question of House emoluments when he declared the privileges of the House had been invaded by the dismissal of a number of employees. Some of those dismissed, he said, were retained soldiers and in some cases they would suffer hardship. The late session had no suggestion should be dismissed without an inquiry and without an opportunity to defend and have compensation given them, he declared.

Mr. Bennett demanded and Prime Minister Mackenzie King agreed there should be an investigation. Mr. King said a Deputy-Speaker should be chosen first.

At 5 p.m. the House adjourned F. G. Sanderson Liberal member for Perth, was elected Deputy-Speaker.

An inquiry into the actions of the new Wheat Board was already assured but yesterday Mr. Perley elaborated charges made earlier in the session by Mr. Bennett.

They concerned the day last December when the Argentine Government suddenly raised by enormous price for wheat 20 cents a bushel. Under the regulations of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange no man may only rise three cents a bushel in one day but a rise was inevitable.

Overnight Sales

This meant exporters, who had sold wheat at the previous day's closing, would have to pay 17 cents more a bushel to get it the following day. The Wheat Board allowed overnight sellers to buy wheat for next morning's sales at one-quarter cent over the closing price of the previous day."

Mr. Perley charged that when Argentina's action became known traders got busy on the floor of the fance telephone to Europe and obtained orders for thousands of bushels, which they were able to fill by buying from the Canadian Wheat Board at a price 2 3-4 cents below the opening price the day of the rise.

The stupidest farmer in Saskatchewan does not have decided what the wheat board did," said Mr. Perley, "but hundreds of bushels before the market opened, when it knew for certain the price was going up."

Mr. Coldwell said western farmers had reason to believe they had been "delivered into the hands of their old enemies, the grain Exchange." They were entitled to know whether the Board sold wheat to traders to enable them to extricate themselves from an embarrassing short position, even if so, to what extent.

Premier King of Canada's Olympic hockey team reached the floor of the House from Prime Minister (Conn. Toronto, Broadview) directed a question to the Prime Minister. Mr. King is to be given a reception by the Government.

Mr. Church asked if the government would inquire into statements by R. W. Kilvey, President of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, in Southern Germany. Mr. King said he would inquire and present the government of Canada and the Olympic team received a grand from the government. Other's statements were creating ill-feeling against Canada, he declared.

No Grant From Government

If the Olympic team received a grant it had been given by the previous government, said Mr. King. He doubted if Mr. Kilvey represented the government in any way but would look into the matter and make a detailed answer.

"If the Prime Minister pacified Europe he ought to be able to pacify the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association," remarked Mr. Church.

In a few days the government will announce the personnel of the Royal Commission on penitentiaries, Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, said in answer to a question by Miss Mian Macphail.

Transferring the relief camps from the Department of the labor departments would make little difference to the men in the camps, Angus MacInnis (C.C.F. Vancouver South) told the House.

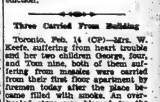
Cannot Get Sugar

It was better to be a deer in the woods than a Chinese than a man on relief in British Columbia, the C.C.F. member said.

Molasses was put out in the woods to give the deer vitamins, but a man on relief in British Columbia could not get sugar.

J. S. Woodsworth (B.C.—Athabaska) said there was confusion regarding the attitude of the Social Credit group in the House. Premier Aberhart, he added, "the time for co-operation has come and I am supporting the motion to adopt the Speech because the Speech proclaims many great reforms although it does not contain, in our estimation, the only and effective remedy, solution to our economic ills."

Demand for legislation to restrict operations of the Canadian Performing Rights Society was made by William Irvine (Conn. Kootenay West). He described the operations of the Society as a "pernicious racket" and said British Columbia, in particular, was suffering a great deal from its activities.



DRAMATIC SPOT OF GREAT LAKES—In one of the most thrilling and tragic epics of the Great Lakes, Clayton Brown, 23 (INSERT), Charlevoix, Mich., marooned for 40 hours on an ice floe on Lake Michigan, in seven-below-zero weather with accompanying blizzard, watched his father-in-law, Claude Beardsley, and a coast guardsman, Earl Cunningham, slowly freeze to death. Brown himself, after vainly trying to rescue his two companions by boating them on a few oars and thus from freezing, crawled four miles to shore, across the ice on his hands and knees, where he was picked up by Indians. He will likely lose both legs. Photo shows U.S. coast-guardsmen setting out from Charlevoix for another search for the missing men.

ACCUSED MAN SEEMS UNMOVED

Toronto, Feb. 14 (CP) — The Crown closed its argument before the jury today at the trial of Harry Oakley, Toronto, charged with the murder of Reid Taylor last November 5.

Last day of the trial opened with J. C. McKeown, K.C., addressing the jurymen. In his final address to the jurors, McDonnell followed the line which he had taken in his opening address. He went on record as stating that the accused killed Taylor, after killing the pretty 30-year-old stenographer.

O'Donnell's case will go to the jury today after the charge of Mr. Justice Wood (Kitchener).

Spectators Nervous

An atmosphere of excitement rippled through the courtroom as the end of the four-day trial neared. Spectators were nervously or excitedly in whispers. The attendants shuffled papers and cleared their desks.

Every seat was filled by the time court opened this morning. When the doors were opened the crowd poured with a rush, and showed little calming room lighted today by 100 electric lights.

Crown Counsel McKeown began his address by saying he had no sympathy with Taylor's killer, he said, had been "inflamed with lust and passion" when he killed the pretty girl stenographer.

"Also the Crown said O'Donnell murdered the victim when the crime was committed," he continued. "What he did was to remove traces of his crime. The crime was committed, and was in bed when the police arrived. He attempted to fix his own statements."

Quoting Mr. McMurray said one of O'Donnell's statements stood him near the ravine about 11.30 p.m., and another that he was there right off a street car near the ravine.

But the Crown's statement without set the time of death at midnight," Mr. Regan asserted.

"This is only approximate," said Mr. Justice Jeffrey. If you remember, I have declared that a doctor could fix the time definitely by looking at the body about 18 hours after death.

"You suggested time and again, yesterday," his Lordship said to the defense counsel "that the Crown and police failed to do their duty in this case."

He told Mr. Regan to "please resume your seat" as the lawyer attempted further argument and the jury left the box.

His Lordship would not let Mr. McMurray continue his address to the jury.

Turning to the jurymen, he declared Ruth Taylor had been "brutally assaulted." Whoever committed the crime without doubt guilty of murder.

This was a "horrible" and "cruel" crime committed in "fiendish" manner, his Lordship said, but said the jury not to let these considerations weigh in arriving at their verdict. The weight of evidence must be reached on the evidence alone.

"It is extremely unfortunate," his Lordship continued, that during the trial there should be attacks made by the Crown and police officers of "deplorably shirking their duty." The charge had "any foundation in fact."

His Lordship added, "that this feature of the case will now be entirely removed."

Circumstantial Evidence Largely

Explaining the law to the jury, his Lordship declared that the jurors could be proven guilty only if it was "the only proven hypothesis beyond a reasonable doubt." It was up to the jury to prove it beyond this doubt. If it remains, the benefit of this doubt must be given to defendant.

This case, his Lordship proceeded, was "practically all circumstantial evidence." He listed the links in the chain "which the Crown claims we have forged against O'Donnell.

"They are not jeopardize," he said, "and I declared that they are that taking them in all, constitute a circumstantial effect, is the way they should be considered."

Speaking of the unknown man who left the train after Miss Taylor got off, his Lordship said the fact he had not turned up did not indicate guilt on the part of the accused.

The case has been greatly exploited in all its details and it would be "natural" for anyone to shun its publicity.

The Ravine

Of the ravine, Mr. Justice Jeffrey said: "There is no doubt but doubts of the burn growing in it or of the nature of its soil. The Crown has submitted that day the girl's body was found.

"It must have been a gruesome sight," he said. Undoubtedly the finding of the body must have caused either by a bloodstained piece of concrete entered as an exhibit at the trial, or by other methods.

"It may be," he declared, "that the concrete was used for the finishing touches—if I may use that expression."

It was clear, he said, "this girl never walked into the ravine." It apparently had been knocked on the head. "Her own street level was cragged down by the feet. This was the Crown's theory.

Struggle at Top

"One cannot help but conclude," his Lordship added, "that there was a struggle at the top.

"The girl went willingly.

The act of ravishing the girl was not completed, he said. "The girl became conscious, and it was then, possibly that her attacker secured a piece of concrete and struck her on the head."

Clothes Most Important

The girl's and O'Donnell's clothing were "the most important part of the case," but his Lordship said he proposed for the moment to take the statements given by O'Donnell to O'Donnell the day of his arrest.

Though the Crown had brought in the statements, he declared it was not binding the jury to accept them. The payment might believe any or all of them as they saw fit.

Next with O'Donnell's clothes, his Lordship reviewed the evidence concerning the O'Donnell's home the day after the murder, when the clothes were burned.

Condition of the clothes at 9:30, according to the Crown, had not been out of the ordinary.

Then, his Lordship said, according to the woman who saw O'Donnell at 11.30 a.m., he had a lit cricket a young woman had seen him at the bewagon and had noticed nothing unusual about his clothes.

"It is a very violent conclusion, if this evidence is accepted, to say that O'Donnell's clothes underwent a change between eleven and one o'clock. And yesterday you have it suggested. It is a serious question.

"The Crown asks you to consider gravely this circumstance. They ask you to look into the mud and the burrs came from the ravine.

Two Pairs of Pants

"You have a right to ask," he continued, "why O'Donnell did not put on his other pair of pants that night. Was it for the reason that his clothes were in such condition that the conditions might be asked and suspicion aroused?"

Dealing with Miss Irving with the parents while his wife lay in hospital, his Lordship said she might act with his own apartment.

O'Donnell's evidence on the day after the killing were to be considered also. His wife was in hospital with a baby. Miss Irving had visited her daily but not on this day.

"Why did he not visit her?" his Lordship asked.

"Are you satisfied the coin could have been used on the pump at the filling station?" he asked. "You must make up your mind on these."

The case went to the jury at 1:00 p.m.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied by Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Sladen Malartic

Application will be made this week to list the shares of Sladen Malartic Gold Mines on the Montreal Curb Market. It is the intention of the Company, also to apply for listing on the Toronto Stock Exchange at a later date.

Recently Canadian Locomotive and Company, Limited made a private offering of 100,000 shares and the issue was heavily over-subscribed on the day of offering. The stock is currently selling around 40 cents on the "over-the-counter" market as against the issue price of 25 cents. An aggressive programme of development was recently approved and a crew of men is employed on the property. Contracts for the hoist and compressor have been awarded and work on the construction of a power line to the mine is under way.

Close to $300,000 has been placed in the treasury of the company and cash standing will be used this way by the near future. The company is capitalized at 3,500,000 shares authorized with 2,000,015 shares outstanding previous to the recent financing agreement with the company. This would leave approximately 700,000 shares in the treasury for further financing if such is required to bring the property to production should the mine shaft already bear out the diamond drilling results obtained from a large acreage of medium to low grade ore.

Wayside

According to Vancouver reports, Wayside Consolidated burned out gold to the value of $45,000 in January. Dividends of 1½ cents per share paid off half the $32,000 it borrowed from the Bank of Montreal on bond interest payments and has substantially strong reserves against receivables and fixed assets. Payments of sinking fund instalments on the first mortgage bonds are in arrears for two years to the end of 1935 to $20,000 and it would seem that some adjustment would have to be made with bondholders before regular dividends are in arrears to the extent of 25 per share. However, as collections improve and earnings increase, the company should find less difficulty in meeting charges which would again place the preferred and bonds on a sound basis.

Purchase of the preferred shares of the Wayside would be made in anticipation of such an arrest, but should only be made with the utmost caution. It is necessary to hold the shares for some period of time, a matter of financial importance to us. The preferred shares are not active issues but the market has been active for some months. While further appreciation might be expected on the company's ability to put a good report or enjoys any substantial increase in earnings this year, the shares are reported to be certain holdings and should be carefully regulated after the stock gets through $50.

IMPERIAL TOBACCO OF CANADA

The final results of the Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, Limited, for the year 1935 will soon be available. It has been the custom of the directors to declare a final dividend each after the financial statements for the year are issued by the Board. Imperial Tobacco have been able to declare a final dividend of 1½ cents a share annually since 1932. There is no official information available as to what the next declaration will be but the market has been inclined to suggest that a higher declaration may be made.

LITTLE LONG LAC

Little Long Lac is growing rapidly. Ore has been developed at a rate which further improves the favourable enlargement will be in order in the near future. Little Long Lac is a more important developed in Canada in recent years.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Feb. 14.—Prices of eggs to the retail trade, for small lots, were unchanged to 1 cent lower here yesterday by wholesale jobbing houses, following a further advance of 4 cents on per dozen, on top of a similar gain Wednesday, on fresh supplies. The large local egg dealers say the weather, with its sharp cold snaps and moderate thawing of shipments through blocked country roads, and light supplies in store, will cause the upward trend in prices of late. The butter market is firmer, with the wholesale price of butter continued heavy, with arrivals of fresh supplies unimportant, and potatoes continued steady. Receipts for the day posted at 40 cars on spot, consisting of 1,000 bags of eggs, 1,019 boxes of butter and 40 cars potatoes.

On the egg market shipments arriving from the country are fairly generally 30c for A-large, 26c for A-medium, and 20c for A-pullets. The list of prices to the retail trade grades B and C have been removed, dealers explaining there are not enough of these grades passing to warrant quoting. There are very few A-pullets available also, the main trading being in A-large and A-medium.

The butter market was generally firm, prices ranging from 1 in earlier or 1c1. lots. The Canadian Commodity Exchange had no sales of spot butter.

Dale Plays The Game

BY—
Ann Forester

The words blurred and ran together through the tears in Dale's eyes. No, mustn't send that; it was too sentimental. She tore it up and took a fresh sheet of paper.

"Dear Honey: Here we are, all settled in Brant's home at last, now. It seems so strange to be in a large city again. Here I've lived in cities all my life until you came, yet that part of my life seems to have fallen away, as though I'd been born again in the desert . . . and I date everything from that. Brant's mother and sister and the Count and della Curda, a former ward of Judge Kendall, Brant's father, live with the family. They are very kind to me....."

The pen fell from Dale's hand and she sat with propped chin, unseeing eyes fastened on the wall as she went back in her mind over the last two weeks.

She was learning the "dreadful boredom of the energetic. She, who had always been active—whose days had been filled with tasks—no matter how disagreeable, which made them fly—now found herself faced with empty hands and dragging hours.

Brant had plunged into the tangled financial affairs of the family. He was down at the office early and never returned until late. Two or three times a week he returned after dinner and worked until midnight. He talked little about his work but a strained look had crept into his eyes and Dale knew that he was secretly worried.

Dale felt a wife's baffled pity. Here was a situation in which she could not help Brant as she had helped him in the west. When he talked of finances—it was all she did talk of, when he talked at all—she made a desperate effort to follow him. But high finance was a Chinese puzzle to the girl who had lived so simply all her life. To the secret relief of them both, Brant shortly gave up the effort.

Dale felt that Brant had locked her outside a door; a door through which she could not pass as his mother and Mimi could pass. She felt stupid as she listened to Mimi asking intelligent questions and listening sympathetically as Brant replied. Did Brant think she was stupid? A little chill of loneliness crept about the girl's heart.

Out in the west Dale had been Brant's help-mate. She had shared and planned, she had worried and rejoiced with him. She had helped decide the momentous questions of their existence; could they afford to have the flat or car repaired—where was the money for supplies to come from? She had helped him to paint the house—to pipe the water from the well for irrigation. Not an act of their simple existence in which she did not share. Now she was the—suddenly herself was creation: treated as a child; left in a deadly stagnation of monotony.

The early morning was the happiest time of the day to Dale. Then she had Brant to herself. She rose when he did and took her breakfast with him. There were just two of them at the table in the cozy breakfast room overlooking the snowy lawn. As a rule Mrs. Kendall and Mimi had their breakfast served in bed, and they seldom appeared before ten-thirty or eleven. Dance was given to wild irregularities. Sometimes she would come prowling to the breakfast table at mid-day attired in robe and slippers, with dishevelled hair, but when the mood moved her she would rise before dawn and get ready for an early canter in the park. It was then when there were more than two at the table.

Yet even this was becoming cold comfort to Dale, for Brant was impatient to get at the morning papers. After the fruit course he was usually immersed in the financial page, and Dale would stir her coffee absently and stare out at the snowy, somber scene.

Mimi's bridge tea did not come—owing to the pleasant if homely shameful ignorance of the game Dale was taking bridge lessons, however, a business which seemed to the girl who had always filled her days with the struggle of living, a shameful waste of time. But Dale had little card sense, and she came to have a horror—dread of the evenings when she made a fourth at the bridge table, playing with Brant against Mrs. Kendall and Mimi. It gave Mimi a chance to say such exciting things in that sweet drawl of hers—remarks which appeared at first blush to be complimentary, yet which carried a sting in their tail which secretly set the older girl to tearing—then a good deal like a scorpion that way, Dale decided.

Before she had been there a week, Dale had met Cecile, Mimi's closes friend. It was a case of mutual dislike at first sight. Cecile was tremendously attractive. She achieved distinction. She was brittle, sparkling—and her remarks were brittle and sparkling too. If Mimi made Dale awkward, Cecile made her feel positively ugly and stupid. Beside Cecile's ideas in clothes, with exactly the right touches of color in the accessories, the pretty gowns which Dale had bought in San Francisco seemed insipid. Beside Cecile's smart trinkets and outfits, Dale felt herself to soon cheap. Mimi and Cecile were so polished, so entirely the aristocrats—and she, Dale felt with an inward shrinking, was so utterly the show girl.....

Nance helped some. Nance, to whom nothing was sacred, wickedly mocked the other two to Dale. Up and down the silver and blue bedroom she would mince, mimicking Mimi's demure sweetness. Or, swaggering across, she would drop carelessly in a chair, banging a cigarette from a corner of her mouth and raising an insouciant eyebrow in imitation of Cecile, whom she eventually disliked.

But Nance, after all, was a child, far younger in character and outlook than her actual 18 years. Nance was warm-hearted but she was undependable. An engagement with her was not enticing she could conveniently forget. This, Brant, lovable, she moved through the same house with her family, but in reality she inhabited a different world. She had friends like herself, who shared all her interests. She would hear the peals of their laughter coming from Nance's room, would hear their voices raised animatedly. But let someone else come into the group—a stranger from the outer world, and wary masks dropped on young faces. Minds were pulled down behind their eyes. Their conversation became laconic. They put on the armor of stolidity.

Nance liked Dale, and she delighted to tease Mimi, but hers was the attitude of an impulsive child. Dale, when life had darkened and steadied, could find no mental common ground in Nance, so little younger than herself.

Dale was lonely.....

She picked up her pen and looked at the unfinished letter she was writing to Honey.

"They are very kind to me....."

Suddenly Dale tore up the letter, as she had torn up several unfinished letters to Honey in the past two weeks. She went to a store and bought some records for Honey's shabby phonograph and sent her an armful of new books to take the letter's place.

And then the newspapers discovered Dale, and a storm of publicity crashed about the horrified ears of the proud house of Kendall.

CHAPTER 36.

OFF ON THE WRONG FOOT

Dale's favorite recreation was taking Major for a walk. She felt a bond of sympathy with the colle these days. Major, too, had exchanged the broad western desert for the restricted quarters of an eastern city. Major, who had been a comrade in the little shack, had become merely another dog in the city. Brant had little time now for this old faithful satellite, and dogs were something which meant little to the rest of the Kendall family.

A link of loneliness had grown between the girl and the collie, and whenever Major caught sight of Dale coming toward his kennel he went with wild, prancing and bounding, pounding the snow with his great, bushy tail and filling the air with sharp yelps of anticipation.

Major alone was unthanged.....

thought Dale, with tears in her eyes as she hugged him. Major meant the desert and the California sunshine and the old simple order of things....

Dutifully she would snap the leash on his collar and take the side path to the street, pulled after the eager dog like a flying comet, but once out of sight of the house, she slipped the leash and let the collie run free.

Dale got a vicarious pleasure in watching him lean up the snowy slopes of Juneau like a fleet, tawny shadow, his tail waving like a wild plume, a joyous free thing, unmindful of the heavy respectability on all sides.

She derived lonely content from these walks. The signs of age in the tall, frowning houses of stone and brick fascinated her. It was a novel sight to Dale. Out in the west the centuries had fallen into limbo. Only a few crumbling adobes went back beyond the middle eighteen hundreds. One lived in their own generation out there. But here there were ghosts. Other people's ancestors crowded about her in these blocks, making her feel the presence of a weed blown by a chance wind into a sedate conservatory.

On the third walk, Dale and Major shared a guilty secret. On the very edge of the old aristocratic section had sprung up one of those isolated districts which talks of the growth of a city. Goose Hollow, it was called, Dale learned, because in Colonial times a goose farm had flourished here. To get there one left the high, lawned, tree-lined section and abruptly plunged down into a labyrinth of mean streets where thin, dark-faced children played in the dirty snow of the gutters.

Here were old frame houses, fallen to dilapidation. Their lower stories were used for stores, their upper windows were decorated by slatternly women screaming at their offspring in the streets below. Here was the smelling pot.....here was bleak and struggling, but gloriously, fiercely alive.

The love of the dramatic in Dale's nature responded to it. Her warm, impulsive heart was touched. A few nickles meant so much here. She became a sort of lady bountiful for the district, gathering up groups of the shabby children to treat them to the movies. Buying them sodas.

TARZAN THE INVINCIBLE (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

"Nkima has sharp teeth," Tarzan said to the little monkey. "Why waste his time with sick fingers or even knots that they cannot untie? Let Nkima's sharp teeth do the work." Instantly Nkima commenced to gnaw upon the strands. He strove diligently and without interruption.

The hyena, in the meantime, made two short rushes at each time coming a little closer, but each time turning back before the menace of the ape-man's fierce and savage growls, which by now had aroused the jungle. From the river came the trumpeting of Tantor.

Little Nkima was gnawing fractically at the bonds when Dango charged again, evidently convinced by this time that this great Tarmangani was helpless, and now, with a great rush, he leaped upon the man. In the distance the voice of Numa thundered.

Tarzan sought to tear his hands free that he might defend himself against the savage death that menaced him in those slavering jaws; and the thongs, almost parted by Nkima's sharp teeth, gave before the terrific strain of the ape-man's effort.

GIRL ASSAULTED THEN MURDERED CROWN CHARGES

Crown Prosecutor Cuts Case to Jury

EVIDENCE REVIEWED

McGhee Claims Link of Circumstances is Clear Enough

Toronto, Feb. 14.—A strong plea was applied Frank Regan, defence counsel for Harry O'Donnell, for spending hours of his address to the jury in the trial of the latter on a murder charge, by Crown Attorney J. C. McGhee, in the Assize Court yesterday as the second trial neared its conclusion.

Regan of defence counsel that detectives working on the case had been remiss in their duties in that the wrench, bearing the initials "O. D." had actually been planted on the Gerrard Street east ravine, where it was discovered as "vicious" by the defence.

Remarking after conducting his address, Mr. McGhee, addressing the jury, announced that illness would bring his speech to a sudden close. Permission was granted by Mr. Justice Jeffrey.

Mr. McGhee commenced his address by telling the jurors that it was "clear beyond any question of doubt" that Ruth Taylor had been brutally ravished before death had occurred. The murdered girl had been seen alive within a very short time of the place where her body had been found, he said, while a woman living near the spot had testified that she had heard a scream on the night of the crime.

Burning Sense of Crime

O'Donnell himself, the Crown charged, had placed himself in the vicinity of the ravine on his own admission, when the leaves and sand that had been present in the ravine near the spot where the body had been, fit sated the jury not to remember the torrent of rain that had been falling at the time the crime had been committed.

Exhibiting the cloth of a clothing before the jury for the last time, Mr. McGhee said that the cloth was by one and laid special emphasis on the presence of blood, sand and burrs.

Ruth Taylor had been criminally attacked, while she was alive, he charged, and the murder had only been committed after that the girl would not be able to give evidence against her assailant.

Burrs Evidence Strong

The evidence which the Crown had produced against O'Donnell was "very, very strong," counsel urged and it had been very difficult to him to sit and listen time and again to the "Crown's case" which had been made by the defence against witnesses testifying in the box. One thing, while, he remarked, that the Crown's witnesses had definitely attempted to "put up a case to convict a man of murder."

Mr. McGhee then carefully held up before the jury the clothing which the accused had had on when he had worn on the night of the crime, traces of mud and blood, as well as the presence of burrs and leaves, were pointed out to the jurors and the clothing's condition was compared with that which had been worn by the murdered girl.

The Crown next recalled the evidence about the finding of numerous tools marked "O. D", all stamped with the same die, and the discovery in the accused's tool box of a die for the initial "D".

Thinks Case Complete

"Was more convincing evidence done and needed to be, he asked?" he asked.

Picking up the wrench which had been found by police in the ravine, the Crown prosecutor recalled the evidence given by the proprietor of the gas station where the accused had worked, that a somewhat similar instrument had been in the station. "It was true, Mr. McGhee argued, why had it not been produced before the court?"

Dealing with those which the subconscious mind of a guilty person would play in the solution of a crime was then stressed by counsel. He had particular emphasis on the remark made by O'Donnell when police had visited him at the gas station, that the accused had been heard to say, 'It's about that affair up the road.'

"Sometimes it is the working of the subconscious mind that plays a great part in the solution of the crime," Mr. McGhee declared. "There is an old saying that murder will out."

Reviewing the conduct of the accused on the few days just prior to his arrest, counsel asked the jury to remember that evidence showed that O'Donnell had visited his wife in the hospital twice on Saturday, twice on Sunday and twice on Monday. On Tuesday the accused did not leave his home until long after 11 o'clock and then went over to his mother's for lunch. Mr. McGhee continued, but not once did O'Donnell show any desire to be bothered to telephone to the hospital to inquire about his wife and baby's health. Neither had O'Donnell telephoned to the hospital at all on Wednesday morning.

Believes O'Donnell Upset.

"Does that suggest to you that something happened on Monday night that had upset him?" the jury was asked.

Not until almost 36 hours after the crime had the police laid the first charge of O'Donnell's clothing, Mr. McGhee continued, and yet his condition had been strikingly similar to what one would have expected to find in the clothing of the girl's assailant. The sand, burrs, blood and leaves which had been discovered on the accused's clothing formed a vital part of the Crown's case, counsel reminded the jury.

The presence of the 294 blue hairs on O'Donnell's overcoat, suit, vest, trousers and hat, and the scientific tests which had been made to compare them with similar hairs on the girl's person, produced strong evidence," Mr. McGhee believed than if a witness had been found that could swear to have seen the murderer in the ravine.

There was always the possibility of "mistaken identity," counsel pointed out, but scientific tests made by experts always revealed actual results.

The last which had been found in the trouser-cuff of the accused had been from a red maple tree, counsel continued, and another leaf had also been found on the sole of his shoe.

How could O'Donnell have got this leaf into the cuff of his trousers unless he were walking there?

On Saturday, Sunday and again on Tuesday the accused had spent the night at his parents' house, Mr. McGhee recalled, but on the night of the crime he had gone back to his own apartment on Hollywood Crescent. Counsel suggested to the jury that this had been done solely to prevent his parents seeing the condition of his clothes at that time.

Light Sleepers.

Other occupants of the house on Hollywood Crescent had told the court that they were light sleepers, the Crown stated, and yet they had not heard the accused return to his apartment on the night of the crime. Mr. McGhee then suggested that this could be explained if O'Donnell had taken "extra precautions" not to be heard.

The apartment of the accused had been cleaned, two days before the murder, by O'Donnell's sister, but yet she never told the court that she had seen burrs there when she had been cleaning up.

Counsel then told the court that no evidence had been produced by the proprietor of the gas station to show that any tires had been changed on the day of the crime, which might account for some of the mud on the clothing of the accused.

It had been a "vicious attack" which defence counsel had made on the matron of the maternity hospital in which Mrs. O'Donnell had been a patient, Mr. McGhee contended. Mr. Regan had attacked her unjustifiably, he believed, while the matron had been trying to tell the truth as clearly as she could.

Clothing Was Neat

The matron had testified that the accused's clothing had been "neat and tidy" when he had visited his wife on the night of the crime, counsel recalled. Evidence given by both the proprietor of the gas station and by Lillian Noddles, who had spoken to the accused in the Ulster Arms Hotel, had also shown that they, too, had failed to notice any mud or burrs on his clothing.

It might also have been the subconscious mind of the accused repeating itself again, Mr. McGhee contended, when he had told police that he had been "upset" after he had returned to his apartment around midnight on Nov. 4. Detective McIlraith had asked if it had not been the presence of mud, burrs and blue hairs on his clothing that had "upset" him, counsel said, but the accused had merely replied that he did not think so.

The presence of the blue hairs on the accused's clothing had proved to be "such a very important part of the case" counsel continued, that experts had been engaged to give them every possible test. The result of those laboratory tests, Mr. McGhee stated, had been to establish the fact that the "chemical reactions" had been obtained from acid experiments made on the hairs from O'Donnell's clothing and from hairs from the murdered girl's sweater.

Queries Defence Chemist

Dr. Julius Zeldler, chemical expert for the defence had stated in court that he had no reason to doubt the testimony given by Prof. Joslyn Rogers, provincial analyst, and Charles W. Ewing, textile expert, the Crown declared. Dr. Zeldler had been gone further, he continued, when he had stated that if the testimony of the Crown experts had been true then their conclusions had also been true.

IN TOILS AGAIN—After serving 14 years of a life sentence for murder in San Quentin penitentiary, Herbert Wilson returned to London, Ontario, and announced that he had become an evangelist. Now he is in custody of Toronto police charged with attempting to defraud A. E. Ames and Co., investment firm of $40,000 by sale of 24 one thousand dollar counterfeit bearer bonds.

12 FISHERMEN MAROONED OFF LOCKPORT N. S.

Rescue Ships Plough Thru Heavy Drift Ice To Men in Small Boats

Schooners Set Out to Force Way Through to Marooned Men

RESCUE EXPECTED

Fierce Blizzard Closes Lockport Harbor With Ice Floes

Lockport, N.S., Feb. 15 (CP)—Two vessels were plowing through heavy drift ice today to aid a dozen fishermen marooned all night off this harbor would be unable to reach one motorboat with two men aboard. It was believed tonight.

The small boat manned by Cecil and Bernard Hamilton was too far outside the harbor and vessels could not get out from here to the men. There was little anxiety for their safety, however, because several schooners were expected to resume fishing during the day and they would be able to rescue the men.

A fierce blizzard had closed the Lockport harbor last night with a large ice floes and prevented eight small fishing boats making port. There were also two motorboats and 10 boats.

Two fishermen were able to walk ashore over the ice during the night but the others were forced to shelter for rescue vessels in the bitter weather.

Early this morning two powerful schooners, the Lucille and the Billy Bell, set out to force their way through the ice and pick up the marooned men.

Shutdown Due To Cold Wave

Vancouver, Feb. 15 (CP)—Cold weather was reflected today in operations along the waterfront. With the Fraser River blocked with ice from New Westminster to Port Mann, waterfront activities virtually were at a standstill. The Fraser Mills plant of the Canadian Western Lumber Company was closed down temporarily yesterday.

Nearly 3,000 men were left temporarily unemployed.

5 TRAINMEN HURT ONE MAN MISSING

C. N. R. Engines Almost Demolished at Capreol

Capreol, Ont., Feb. 13.—(CP) Thomas P. Corcoran, of Capreol, was reported missing and five other members of the train crew were injured today when two Canadian National Railways freight trains collided a few miles west here.

Brakesman Art Flinn of Allandale, was rushed to Sudbury Hospital about 26 miles south of the scene. Physicians found bruises and possible fractured.

H. W. Mackay, of Capreol, engineer of the westbound train No. 408, was badly shaken up. D. R. Martin, Capreol, engineer of the eastbound train No. 94, suffered burns and bruises to his face.

J. Merrifield, fireman from Capreol was pulled from the wreckage of the locomotive after being found bruises and exposure and another fireman, Brennan, also of Capreol suffered similar injuries.

Superintendent S. J. Paugh hurried from Sudbury to the scene of the wreck. Ten empty box cars of the eastbound train were piled up on the right-of-way. About an equal number of cars of the eastbound train were hurtled from the tracks.

Both through wires were pulled to the ground and communication broken between Capreol and the west disrupted.

A considerable distance of track was torn to shreds by the derailments, when they crashed together the engines tore down the 1,800 metre Olympic chute.

Third place went to the second American combination of Gilbert Colcolo, Jr., of Lake Placid, and Dick Lawrence of Branchville, N.J.

Fourth place went to Frederick McAvoy's sled in the first heat.

Brown and Washbond finished with total elapsed time of 5:32.32. Their individual heat clockings were 1.32.80, 1.32.16, 1.33.36.

Feierabend, who smashed his own chute record on his final descent with a speed of 46.2 miles an hour, wound up with total time of 5:36.84. Colcolo and Lawrence finished with 5:38.96.

Henri Koch's Luxembourg sled skewed sharply after leaving Bavaria curve. Koch's brakeman, Gustav Wagner, was thrown from the through the air as the sled crackled to the left and Koch was ultimately by ambulance to a hospital.

Sweden's long distance skiers swept the first four places in the 50 Kilometre cross-country marathon of the fourth Winter Olympic today. Apparently able and ready to begin competition again, Nils Ellefsund, Alex Wikstroem, Nils Englund and Haalmar Bergstroem smilingly crossed the finish line in that order.

J. L. Ilsley, Minister of Financial Revenue. THREE BURNED TO DEATH

Yonkers, N.Y., Feb. 15 (AP)—Three persons were killed early today in a fire which destroyed a six room frame dwelling.

Michael Madigan, 38, a W.P.A. worker, and his nephew, Martin Doyle, 18, were burned to death by the blaze that started when an oil stove exploded in the living room.

Madigan's wife, Margaret, 36, died of inhaling smoke.

Fewer Moustaches Less Conce'it is Wanted by Co-Eds

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP)—What the co-eds would like to see in Toronto University's male undergraduates is less conceit and fewer moustaches.

Conceit comes first among the characteristics to be bolt taken by the Varsity, undergraduate daily. After that, as the Varsity lists them, follow:

"Moustaches, mutilated fedoras, tartan socks, imitation repartee, too long wavy hair, brackets, mouthpieces and other Ethiopian fingernails and moustaches."

Escorts who drink, especially the method of pauper-on types, are also in disfavor with the co-eds. "slav" Varsity notes, "men who haven't got any money."

The trouble with Liberal, one co-ed remarked, is that "they're not even dry behind the ears when they become members." Another thought they were all right "if they keep their hands off." She didn't mention the place.

GUILLOTINE KNIFE BRINGS BUT $167 AT PARIS AUCTION

HAS WOODEN BASE

Auction Delivers Another Blow to Harrassed Royalists

Paris, Feb. 13.—(AP)—The knife which "brought democracy to France" when it separated Louis XVI from his head only realized the sum of 1,500 francs (about $167) when it was auctioned.

The blade, time delivered and other blow to the pride of harassed royalists, already facing the dissolution of their societies at the hands of Premier Blum.

No longer as sinister in appearance as the memories it evokes, the blade, which once severed scores of victims during the reign of terror, is now rust and dull edged. Taken out of its guillotine scaffolding, it is mounted on a black wooden base.

GANGSTER GETS VALENTINE, SHOTS

Dapper Jack McGurn Once Accused of Valentine Day Massacre

Chicago, Feb. 15 (AP)—Dapper Machine Gun Jack McGurn, former Capone gangster, today received a real Valentine and two slugs in the back of the head, killing him in much the same fashion as seven George "Bugs" Moran gangsters died seven years ago in the bloody St. Valentine's Day massacre of which he was accused.

McGurn, "the ace" of the massacre charge by producing the now famous alibi of eight witnesses who came his wife, She testified she and McGurn were in a hotel just blocks away.

While McGurn and two companions had sat a second floor bowling alley in northwest side, two men entered the place, told order4 "stick 'em up. Stand where you are."

McGurn, his back to the men, stood erect. Then one fired a pistol at the pair opened fire with .45 calibre pistols. One shot struck McGurn behind the right ear and the other in the lower part of the left.

Lying on the floor near the spot where McGurn fell, they found a comic valentine addressed to McGurn.

On the front of the valentine was printed: "Roses are red, violets are blue, I'm a woman in this" underwear. In the back-ground was a picture of a house marked "sold" and another sign reading "household goods for sale."

The wording on the other side read:

"You've lost your job, you've lost your dough;
Your jewels and cars and bank-some house,
But things could still be worse for you;
At least you haven't lost your trousers."

After McGurn fell, the hoodlum's companions, neither of whom were known to him, leisurely straightened up the body. They returned ever to the bowling score sheet, tore off the paper on which their scores were entered and took it with them as they left.

BREAK UP RING

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 15 (CP)—An alleged ring which is believed broken last night with the arrest of a man "Dutch" Martens, 33, Toronto, Martens was driving a stolen car when hailed by Detective Inspector Duncan MacNab. He brought the car to a stop after hearing the tack of a warning police bullet Inspector Duncan MacNab. Sentenced to Hang on May 5 For Ravishing and Killing Ruth Taylor

Passes Remark to Press Reporters as He Leaves Court

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP)—The death sentence was passed lightly on him, Harry O'Donnell waited calmly today for May 5 and the hangman's noose—for the killing of the murder of 20-year-old Ruth Taylor.

The verdict came from the grim Don Jail that his 'iron composure was cracking. Nor was any appeal. Counsel Regan said blood him through eleven days of court proceedings, fifteen minutes of testimonce, and through the firm declaration he was innocent of the wilful killing of the pretty stenographer last Nov. 6.

In the last period with the score six to nothing against them, the Czechs were more interested in preventing scores than going out after goals themselves.

The peculiarity of the draw for the Olympic hockey tournament is two-point lead due to the fact they beat us in the previous round" Hepburn's answer to the layman no doubt but evidently the officials know what they are doing.

Our one hope now is for the Assembly," Mr. Kingsmill. Then we turn around and topple the United States we could win the world championship by registering the best goal average.

FORCE OF WORKERS CLEAR ALL STREETS

64 Men And 33 Trucks Used to Haul Away Snow

A total of 64 men and 33 trucks, the largest registration of workers on a single pay roll of the local department of public works in years, employed all day and part of yesterday in the unsnowing business streets of the city shortly after midnight last night according to Chief Engineer Johnson in a heroic effort to clear the monstrous piles of snow which cover the city following Thursday's storm. The huge force of workers continued on the job until eight o'clock this morning until relieved by a second shift of men and trucks, which took up the task of clearing the lower part of Front street.

Throughout the day, Friday, a constant stream of men came for registration on the work applied at the office of the city engineer, Total registration at five o'clock had reached 130 men. Of the total number given employment, 31 was obtained by the department, that over one half were relief recipients.

Police Officer Moves Car on The First Try

A traveller, whose new automobile bore license plates indicating his residence outside Ontario paid as his snow-bound machine parked parallel with the curb on Front St. not far from the city hall late yesterday afternoon. The motor of the machine started in the usual crescendo as a heavy foot trod on the accelerator. Both rear wheels spun futilely in the loose snow. Three local residents, coming to the show civic courtesy to the stranger pushed as helpfully on the rear of the immobile machine.

Attracted by the noise a police officer on the local force on point duty strolled up.

"Need any help, buddy?" he asked genially.

Impatience soared out of bounds. "If you think you can do any better than I'm doing, hop in," sharply replied the now very weary stranger.

Just as courteously the officer accepted the offer.

"Altogether, sure," he repeated.

Almost silently in its action, the machine started through the packed drift, cleared its wheels and stood waiting on the smooth road ready for the journey, moved on the first try.

Did the gentleman thank the officer? Observers said he did, entered the car and moved off without a backward look.

EGG PRICES ON MARKET HIGHER

Production Cut Nearly Half Due To Cold

Weather . . . . .

Heavier and surely steams of horses replaced the more widely used car and truck on the Saturday market today as rural residents continued to hold snowbound roads throughout the district. For the same reason, although perfect weather conditions and bright sunshine were evident today, the market was small. Buyers in some instances commandeered those who had the farm produce for sale.

Eggs were up today. Choice grades were being quoted at from 30 to 39 cents the dozen, while the smaller pullet variety were freely sold at prices ranging from 27 to 34 cents. "It's the cold weather," explained one vender. "During the past week or so our own egg production has been cut down about one-half. If the weather keeps up they'll go higher, too."

Butter remained stationary, at 30 cents per pound in most cases, although lake in the city for a few days offered the fresh two-pound rolls for 55 cents.

Chickens held chief place among the fowl offerings, although an occasional duck and a lonely goose-turkey was noted on the busy counters in the inside mart. Chickens were being held at from 50 to 60c to 75c each, according to size and corresponding prices paid per pair was from $1.50 to $1.75, with according ranging up. The few ducks offered ranged from $1.10 to $1.25. The lone turkey commanded a mere retail price of $7.00, although just an average bird.

Potatoes were scarce, only a few bags offered, ranging from $1.30 to $1.40 per bag. Vegetables were plentiful with the usual staples, including carrots, cabbage and turnips selling at 30c the peck measure. Cabbage was also ready sale at from 5 to 10c per head.

Turnips were 20c the peck.

Throughout parts of the section scarcity of water for stock was complained upon today by a few rural dwellers. In some cases water has been carted to slightly relieve their thirst on snow. Feed, however, is still plentiful.

Little change in livestock or grain prices over last week's quotations was noted.

POLICE BLOTTER

Bruce Jones, 30 Murray Street, who is employed by one of the city trucks reported a motor accident to the police authorities yesterday afternoon. Mr. Jones informed the police he was driving the city truck northerly on North Front Street when a motor car, proceeding easterly from Bridge collided with the front of the truck. Both vehicles were slightly damaged, but about the extent of lights and radiators. The automobile was owned by Mr. Lemuel Berry from well Street police today revealed.

Mr. Lindenberg was hurrying to catch a train and was forced to abandon his motor car and have it towed to a near-by garage.

Chelsea police asked the local authorities to keep an eye open for a Pontiac coach painted blue. The vehicle, bearing 1936 Ontario license plate number X-816, was stolen at Oshawa yesterday.

Only three transients appeared at the police station last night in search of a warm night's lodging. No forwarding addresses were left by Valentines and by the trio when they were released today.

MUSIC
Recent Recitalist at Belleville Praised by Dr. Mason

The following article by Lawrence Mason appeared in The Globe, Belleviillans will note with interest that the recent recitalist, Pera Frances James, comes in for her share of the honors.

Beethoven's "Choral Mass" in D major was given a noble performance in Massey Hall, by the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir, under Dr. H. A. Fricker, as the final offering in our historic choral organization's thirty-ninth season. A mighty masterpiece this was in truth, and one thing that the Mendelssohn does best, among a massive and difficult work requiring vocal weight, long preparation, musical background, technical knowledge, sound leadership, first-class soloists, and a full-sized symphony orchestra. While wishing to avoid churnimism, one may still doubt whether any other choir in Canada could fill all these conditions and do anything like reasonable justice to this exceedingly exacting work.

The special merit of Beethoven's Mass which Dr. Fricker seemed to have selected for particularly effective emphasis last night was the marvellous beautiful combination of quality of tone, trueness to pitch, authoritative handling of the music, and superbly artistic interpretation. The tenor, Alfred O'Rae, was a newcomer who made a very favorable impression, but the bass, Albert Kennedy, held in his fine voice too much so that he was seldom clearly audible.

Beginning with the opening extremely "Lord, have mercy upon us", inspired and inspiring music if any ever was the exquisite interweaving of quartet and chorus was an utter delight throughout, reaching truly wonderful heights in the "And we incarnate" section, in the hushed "Crucifixus" and above all the heavenly "Benedictus". Three times the stately power of the Mass was interrupted by spontaneous bursts of applause—after the magnificent "Amen" close of the "Gloriam", after that other marvelous "Amen" in the "Et vitam venturi", and after the incredible beauty of the "Sanctus" while at the end of the evening prolonged applause brought the soloists back to bow many times, and repeatedly called choir, soloists and orchestra to their feet.

This news comes of the Bert Howe String Quartet, Canada's eminent musical ambassador to far places.

Even before the Harv House String Quartet gave their concert in the Empress on February 13th, they must have conquered by their delightful charm as how was pleased at their disposal for the Symphony concerts at the Trudi School for Girls, and took the opportunity to see Walter Huston in "Dodsworth" on the screen. Their honors were given by the Women's Musical Club, the Arts and Letters Club, and the English Speaking Union.

112,967 BOOKS LOANED IN YEAR FROM LIBRARY

President J. W. Imlah Re-elected Chairman of Library Board

FEWER PURCHASES

Last evening the annual meeting and election of officers of the Public Library Board took place. Miss Ethel Adams, chief librarian presented a splendid report of library activities for the past year showing a slight decrease in the total of volume loaned. Miss Kathryn Gallagher was appointed to take charge of the boys' and girls' department of the library.

The officers of the past year were re-elected as follows:

Chairman: J. W. Imlah.

Secretary Treasurer: H. J. Clarke, B.A.

Chairman of Finance: C. N. Bulman.

Chairman of Book Selection: A. C. Wilkin.

The Board is composed of Mayor Harry Ellis, three representatives of the City Council, M. P. Duff, J. W. Imlah, C. L. Walters, three representatives of the Board of Education, H. J. Clarke, B.A., A. C. Wilkin, C. N. Bulman, two representatives of the Separate School Board, E. B. Leigh and T. V. Shea.

The librarian's report follows:

"We find a small decrease of 2 per cent in the number of volumes issued from the adult sections, as compared with the 1934 total, and 7.3 per cent decrease in the Boy's and Girls' reading, as is shown in the following figures:

	1934	1935
Adult	86,215	86,302
Juvenile	19,061	17,550
	117,286	112,967

"The decline in adult reading can be attributed to the fact that 364 fewer books were purchased in 1935. Also, our monthly records reveal that circulation fell off in September, October and November, a time when it normally increases. This decrease is partly due to the addition of a number of new books, but in 1935, our Fall purchases were delayed until December.

"The decrease in Boys' and Girls' circulation may be accounted for by the fact that since the assumption of my new duties, I have been unable to devote the necessary time to sustain the children's interest. The drama club, which had a favourable beginning, the story hour and book talks in the schools were all of a necessity abandoned since there was no assistant trained in children's work to succeed me. Olive Delaney, however, conducted a successful "Treasure Hunt" reading contest which raised the July-August circulation above that of the summer of 1934. I am happy as this time to announce that my able assistant, Miss Kathryn Gallagher, who graduated in June from the Ontario Library School, is taking charge of the department on the first of February. Together, we intend to visit the schools, organize a reading club and story hour in an endeavor to raise the department to its proper place in the library.

"During the year, 1012 volumes, comprising 644 fiction and 368 non-fiction, including 27 donations, were added to the adult collection; 534 fiction and 66 non-fiction were discarded, leaving 13,994 volumes on the adult shelves. The discarded books were given to Trenton Airport, Valcartier Relief Camp, Egan Creek rural School, and the local Unemployment Office.

"In July, we took a complete inventory of the Boy's and Girls' department in the same detail that the adult section was done the previous summer. At the end of December, we are able to accurately report that there are now, including the new books added during the year, 2,790 volumes in that department.

"While brings the total number of volumes in the library to 18,784, which is far below the standard of the American Library Association, which recommends a book collection of two volumes per capita.

"There are 29 volumes in the Depicaks Pay collection, upon which approximately $70 was collected, with an expenditure of less than half that amount in new books.

"In October, a complete re-registration of borrowers was undertaken, which has not been done in many years past. The files were also re-checked

THE UNKNOWN MEN AND WOMEN

A WPA employe, 38 years old, wrote a letter to President Roosevelt and then forgot it. But the President did not forget. For Louis Stancourt has received a reply, saying "you give me the blessings of the unknown men whose voices seem never to be heard—because you rightly believe that I do try, as best as I may, to understand the human and spiritual problems of the millions in our great land who are loyal to our common ideals and who want to hold their heads high. I am grateful to you. You have helped me."

Stancourt's letter had been one of praise for the President.

The "unknown" men and women who form the vast majority of the people of not only the United States but every other land, are hardly ever heard in the clamor of the mighty, and those who are pressing their attentions on those in responsible positions. It must be a real joy to presidents, prime ministers, or others at the head, to realize that there is that great company of persons, who play their role nobly for their country and do their part without fuss or attention. In the battle of party politics which is the world sees on every hand in the world today, it is the great background of the people which counts. Without them the leaders, the governments, the office holders would not be worthy anything. It is they who are content to be "unknown", but are ready to play their part as citizens of people. They largely control the world.

AVOIDING SKIDS

According to Prof. R. A. Moyer, Associate Professor of Highway Engineering, Iowa State College maintains that skidding accidents are less a matter of chance than any other kind, for there is a good reason for everyone of them.

The frictional force which can be developed on a smooth sheet of ice is only about one tenth to as low as one twentieth of that which can be developed on dry concrete, he says. Drivers who cause skidding accidents are those who try to drive on ice just as they would on dry concrete, the Public Safety Magazine observes.

There are eight ways in which driving on ice-covered roadways can be made fairly safe, according to Prof. Moyer:

First, do not drive unless you have to. You may have your own vehicle under perfect control, but if the 'other fellow' starts to slide toward you, neither he nor you will be able to do a great deal to avert collision.

Second, if you drive your own car, use tire chains. They do a lot to help prevent skidding, and are also beneficial in getting away from the curbing when your machine is in deep snow.

Third, in starting your car on ice when the car is on a slight grade, it is frequently desirable to start in second or high gear to prevent the rear wheels from spinning.

Fourth, keep a steady foot on the accelerator. Increase speed slowly and try to avoid sudden changes in speed, since this is the cause of most skidding accidents.

Fifth, decrease your speed even more when turning corners and going around curves.

Sixth, do not try to overtake the car in front of you unless the road is clear for a distance of at least a half-mile.

Seventh, be alert at all times and keep an eye on traffic as far ahead as you possibly can.

Eighth, maintain a safe distance from the car ahead.

Fortunately, there are many drivers with common sense enough to be extra careful when the streets are "skiddy", but this careful driving is not a guarantee, as there is always the 'other fellow' to contend with.

END OF THE WORLD

A man prophesied that the world's end was to come on Friday. It did not come. Calculations which convinced him were awry. The world's end—no one knows how it will come, whether by a crack-up of this mundane sphere which turns on its axis once a day and spins in space around the sun once a year, by collision with some thing in the realms of space, by gas or by cold or by gradual cooling down.

Though the prophet of world disintegration deceived himself, the theme seems to suit a number of people, but surely fewer than it once did. Such prophecies are the relics of an unscientific age which lingers on despite the majestic discoveries made by astronomers, physicists, anatomists and others.

When man looks upon the stars he need not worry about ends of worlds. The system, that is in all space, has made it possible for man to live and to enjoy this glorious earth. So, why should he think of such doom?

If man must think of crashing systems, he must rather fear breakdowns in the moral sanctions, social breakdown, breakdown of health, rather than the breakdown of a world. With the spiritual and moral assurance as guides, with the advice of the great prophets and moralists, those who love to do good have no fears of an ending world.

HELP WANTED

He's only a boy
with a badly warped soul.
Just a boy,
who is certain to miss the goal,
Unless someone gives him a helping hand.
Understand?

He's a long way off
being a decent chap,
Or the kind
who is likely to give a rap,
If you turn your back as you pass him by
With a sigh!

But deep in his heart
he would give all he had,
For one friend
who would not think him wholey bad:
But take his arm in a brotherly style,
With a smile.

So wait for a chance
the next time he goes by,
Hail him then,
with a laugh and a friendly cry.
And he'll stop and talk, and you'll do him some good.
As you should!

LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY BROUGHT OUT THE CUSTOMARY TRIBUTES TO THE MEMORY of a man whom the whole world delights to honor now but who in his lifetime received very few evidences of trust and affection, outside of his own family. Seems appropriate that a moving picture dealing with the Lincoln period should be released just as the nation was commemorating his birthday. The play deals with the arrest and imprisonment in one of those terrible island prisons of that day, of one Dr. Samuel Mudd who gave aid and succor to John Wilkes Booth fleeing the wrath of the North after the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford Theatre, Washington, April 14, 1865,... Dr. Mudd set the broken leg of Booth and for that was arrested and sentenced to life-imprisonment. Years after yellow fever broke out in the prison, the prison doctor died and Dr. Mudd was brought forth from his dungeon to treat the sick. After the outbreak was curbed Dr. Mudd was pardoned.

John Wilkes Booth was an eccentric actor, fond of liquor, relative of Edwin Booth, greatest Shakespearean actor of his age, who retired from the stage for several years after the assassination on account of the unfavorable publicity and the wrath of the North against all members of the Booth family. John Wilkes Booth fled into the stricken Southland, the defeated, but unsubdued old Dominion, still nursing tremendous wounds and commercial disaster.

To the only country where he might have expected a cordial welcome, even a halo of martyrdom—the hero of The Lost Cause. Some people still think that he was never caught, that he was spirited away to Canada and spent the rest of his life here under an assumed name. However, whatever public John Wilkes Booth expected, alive or dead, from the South, he never received, for the South was horrified and afraid—afraid of reprisals which would shake the whole country to its foundations, to fear for even the church pulpits of the north, the Sunday after Lincoln's death thundered forth denunciations against the whole Southland and many ministers apparently lost their heads and hinted at reprisals sudden and drastic.

BIG CHIEF CHARLIE CURTIS, Vice President of the United States in the Hoover cabinet, was buried at Topeka, Kansas, this week. Born in an Indian tepee on the western plains, Charlie Curtis climbed the ladder of success and fame until he rested just one step short of the highest position in his country, the presidency. He was buried from the Kansas state capitol with all the honors it was possible to give him. The Kaw Indian tribe, of which Charlie Curtis was a member, were present officially at the funeral rites. From the Apache tribe came a bow and arrow sent by Chief Deerfoot, to take with him to the Happy Hunting Grounds. "He was a great man and we loved him," Chief Deerfoot told Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann, sister of Mr. Curtis. Kansas State officials headed by Governor Landon, attended the funeral, the services being conducted by Dr. Harold C. Case, pastor of the First Methodist Church. Interment was made in Topeka cemetery beside Mrs. Curtis.

Permit No Waste of Effort in Health Work Says Tweedsmuir

Montreal, Feb. 15 (CP)—Public health is one of the few things in which the world has really progressed, Lord Tweedsmuir told the inaugural meeting of the Health League of Canada here today.

"May I give you a piece of advice, which I had often occasion to give your colleagues at home?" said His Excellency. "It is that you prevent the duplication of effort. There are many organizations working for the same purpose as yours—organizations both government and private. Let your work be complementary to theirs and not competitive.

"There is always a tendency with the work of voluntary bodies to cover too wide an area and to duplicate the efforts of other people. But this subject is too great and too important to permit of duplication and waste of effort."

The state could not control the thought and the behavior of the people except indirectly nor could it shape moral character; but it could look after the people's bodies, could control anti-social forces which lowered the national physique and could control anti-social conditions which made health impossible.

Special Need For Work.

Today, with vast aggregations of population in limited areas earning their living under conditions which made physical health difficult, there was a special need for this work.

"You have to deal with the problem of crowded areas which involves the enormous question of adequate housing," he said.

"There are prophets today who have drawn us terrible pictures of a future in which the energy of the state shall be wholly devoted to the securing of proper physical conditions, with the result that the human race will become a collection of magnificently developed animals with little character and less mind," he continued.

"Gentlemen, I do not believe in such nightmares," concluded His Excellency, "for the simple reason that you cannot get a people healthy and well developed in body without a discipline and an energy which means also a development of mind.

"And of one thing I am certain—there can be no true moral and intellectual progress unless there is a background of bodily well-being. No system of education, for example, however perfect, will produce results worth having if it is applied to undernourished children coming from squalid homes. You, in your work are defending one of the keypoints of civilisation; and every lover of Canada and of humanity must wish you god-speed."

WALKER GUILTY ON TWO COUNTS GETS 18 MONTHS

Demanding Money by Menace And Theft Charges Are Upheld

MAY SQUASH OTHERS

Accused Said Evidence Taken by Court Was Not Fair

London, Ont., Feb. 15 (CP)—Benny M. Walker's immediate fate rested today with the crown attorney-General's office, which will determine whether the convicted would-be extortionist of Premier Mitchell Hepburn spends an unstumped 18 months in Ontario Reformatory or must stand trial on two additional charges.

Mr. Justice Charles McTague sentenced Walker to 18 months' imprisonment last night after a Middlesex County jury returned a verdict of guilty against the St. Thomas man on two counts—one of demanding money with menace from the Premier, Donald McCrimmon and George McLay, the other of theft or $75 from McCrimmon and McLay.

Immediately the question of further charges against Walker was brought up by defence counsel. Charles W. Bell, K.C., after Walker had been sentenced to 18 months on the first count and 12 months on the second, to run concurrently, Mr. Bell said.

"It is my very positive impression that it is the intention of the Crown to nolle prosse those two remaining counts. I now ask for disposal of them in that way."

Crown Counsel Joseph Sedgewick, K.C., said, however, he had no instructions, but understood that Crown Attorney Norman F. Newton wanted the charges traversed to the next court. Personally he would recommend no prosecution on them and he would get in touch with Toronto immediately and report the case, Mr. Sedgwick said.

Five Months' Deliberation

One charge alleged Walker obtained $200 from Norman Milligan of Sheddon by false pretences and with intent to defraud. The other charges he attempted to extort a photograph from Mr. and Mrs. Bell and "did accuse Mrs. Josephine Owen with the crime of murder."

The jury deliberated five hours yesterday and last night before returning a verdict of guilty on the counts in which the Premier, McCrimmon and McLay were complainants. Walker denied guilt before Mr. Justice McTague passed sentence.

"Have you anything to say before sentence is passed on you?" the Judge addressed Walker.

"I am not guilty of the offence I have been convicted of," was the reply.

"Your trial has been a fair one," commented Mr. Justice McTague.

"Evidence taken against me was not fair," said Walker.

Sentence Follows Participation in Lahatt Kidnapping Case

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 15.—(CP)—A 15-year Penitentiary term faced Russell Knowles, 21, of Windsor, today following his conviction of participation in the kidnapping of Peter S. Lahatt, wealthy London Brewery President, on May 19, 1934.

Knowles and Kierdorf were arrested before Christmas by United States Department of Justice officials at Ottawa, Ill., and brought to Canada to be tried for the Lahatt kidnap charge. Misener, alleged member of the kidnap ring.

O'Donnell Unsprad.

Spectators packed the court room especially throughout the long hour session. O'Donnell, whom the crown says ravished and killed the 50-year-old stenographer last November 1, sat in the dock. Gerrard street east, sat unmoved throughout the proceedings. At one point, when Mr. Justice Jeffrey spoke of the grey blue hairs found on O'Donnell's clothes and the Crown's contention they came from the sweater of the dead girl, O'Donnell stifled a broad yawn.

During most of the session he sat with Clarke, the prisoner's dock, his chin resting on cupped hand.

WILL REIMBURSE MUNICIPALITIES

Companion Measure to Income Tax Bill Introduced

Toronto, Feb. 15.—(CP)— The first week of the second session of Ontario's 19th Legislature has settled into the Throne speech debate barely started and the provincial Income Tax Bill, the one measure under discussion, still without second reading.

Introduced Tuesday, when the session opened, the Bill has been the subject of continuous assault by the Opposition, John J. Glass, Liberal member for Toronto St. Andrew, entered the debate Thursday and continued yesterday. He predicted the measure would receive overwhelming support of made the issue a referendum.

Added interest was given the Bill with the Monday evening night a drafting blunder omitted the enabling formula containing the King's authority for the measure. Acting Premier Harry Nixon contended an amendment could be brought in at any stage of the Bill's progress to rectify the fault. As opposition spokesman, however, said last night the only solution was to re-introduce the Bill.

Companion Measure

A companion measure to the Income Tax Bill an amendment to the Municipal Act, was introduced yesterday by Hon. David Croll, Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs.

This Bill takes from municipalities the right to levy an Income Tax. It provides individuals might not suffer double taxation as far as business and income tax is concerned.

Persons assessed for Income Tax by the province will receive a return of their business tax. When they have paid Provincial Income Tax on the same assessment the province will reimburse the municipality for lost revenue.

Croll will introduce another Bill Monday, which is understood to deal with the question of reimbursing municipalities, that levied no income tax, for losing the source of revenue.

In an effort to speed up proceedings on the Bill, there will be a night session Monday.

The Throne speech debate resumes Tuesday. So far only the movers and seconders of the address in reply have been completed.

Tweed and District

Tweed — The February meeting of Group 7 of the W.M.S. of the United Church was held on Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Percy McKeighan at six o'clock. There was an interesting program and a supper was served with chicken pies and cups of tea. Mrs. Arthur Hagerman presided over the business session. Prayers for the Queen of the Royal Family were offered by the President, followed by a short poem with reference to the late King George V. by Mrs. Ed. Way. Miss H. Stuart B.A., gave a resume of the fourth chapter of the Study Book in a very interesting manner. Mrs. Arnesen sang, "We're a Story to tell to the Nations". A short prayer service was held during which several of the members offered prayer.

The chimney at the Consolidated School burned out about 9.30 Tuesday evening. Flames shot into the air to a height of twenty feet and it burned fiercely for a space of a quarter of an hour. It was a Seagrave apparatus which is located in the basement of the school and the alarm was turned in, and no damaged resulted due to the solid construction of the chimney. The roar of the flames could be heard a hundred yards away.

Mr. G. Roy Fenwick, Mus. Bac., of Hamilton, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. John Stills, scored another notable triumph as conductor of the Elgar Choir of Hamilton, in the thirteenth annual concert given on Tuesday night. Mr. Fenwick's newly-appointed choirmaster of the choir, succeeded Mr. Bruce Carey, founder of the choir and Mr. Ley H. Hewitet, both of whom had enjoyed marked success as conductors of the choir in the past. To successfully succeed such outstanding musicians was a difficult task which Mr. Fenwick performed splendidly. Choirs of 120 voices reflected the careful training given them by their excellent conductor. All the different numbers, the most delightful, from the standpoint of the audience was a part song "My Bonnie Lass, She Smileth." (Edward German), by the choir. The following prolonged applause.

Mr. Fenwick was formerly director of Music for Hamilton Schools and now holds a similar position for the Ontario Department of Education. He is a frequent visitor to Tweed where formerly visited Tweed Consolidated School.

The crowd roared their approval as the ball went to the ice, and gave voice to loud boos when the cat with the ball crossed the goal line. Mr. Ward was referee. This was a very interesting number in the program which caught the fancy of the spectators. Many of the players have not had the chance for many years and penalties were frequently called. VALVE-IN-HEAD ENGINE Completes ITS VALUE

TWISTS being facts to fight . . . and every test of Chevrolet performance adds further confirmation to the fact that the Valve-in-Head engine is the very best kind for a low-priced car. Two reasons stand out. First, the inherent design of this type of engine (used on racing cars, airplanes, speedboats) produces extra power. Second, the shaping of the cylinder head forces fuel to burn evenly and completely, serving you money on gas. Conventional engines can't both these things at the same time; gentlemen agree you must have a Valve-in-Head engine to get this matchless power-economy combination. But let your own driving test furnish the proof. Drop in and drive a Chevrolet today. Easy 7% GMAC time payments.

Helping Millions to Enjoy Greater

FREEDOM from COLDS

Quick Relief Comes to Thousands Who Use Vicks Va-tro-nol Nightly

Prevents many Colds

At the first sign of sneezing, irritation, dryness or stuffiness, use Vicks Va-tro-nol—just a few drops up each nostril. Va-tro-nol is especially designed for the nose and upper throat—where most colds start. It stimulates Nature's own protections—in the nose—to help prevent colds, and to throw off many colds in their early stages. Used in time, Va-tro-nol helps avoid many colds.

Prevents Colds That Develop Into Deep Chest Colds

A bold statement? Read what Vicks Chemists and Medical Staff, tested in extensive clinics by practicing physicians—further proved in every home use by millions. The Plan is fully explained in each Vicks package.

Quick Relief When Colds Do Develop

If a cold has developed, rub Vicks Vaporub on throat and chest at bedtime. Vaporub acts direct—(1) soothes at once; (2) by stimulating body skin like a poultice or plaster; (3) by inhalation of its medicated vapors all night long. Also use Vicks Vaporub to relieve distressing coughs of children. Its simple, time-tested vapor-poultice action loosens phlegm, soothes irritation, helps break congestion.

VICKS PLAN — CONTROL OF COLDS

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

Apparently it's not true that "all the world loves a lover", especially if he is trying to propose to a girl in a parked car.

The police on an up the telephone switchboard of a Cambridge police station boomed as Bradley Kay, 21 a Massachusetts student in the Immaculate neighborhood, Policeman Frederick Marckinnel, on the beat, rode by place, snapped the boy and sweetheart with authority.

Walled an irritated gasmiles voice on the other end of the line: "Tell me, is it against the law to propose marriage to a girl in a car in this city?"

Familiar with the law as any policeman, that was a new one to Patrolman Marckinnel.

"Know of," he managed the irritated one.

"Then, why in blazes is it that every time I park my car and work up enough courage to propose to a girl a cop comes along and shines a light in the window and yells 'drive on'? Is it against the law to kiss a girl?"

Then the frantic voice, even more irritated than the first, shouted: "There is no living-room, and dropping on one knee is out of the question in a car. I'm tired of it. Every time I park my car and work up enough courage to propose to a girl a cop comes along and shines a light in the window and yells 'drive on'! Is it against the law to kiss a girl?"

Then the frantic voice, even more irritated than the first, shouted: "There is no living-room, and dropping on one knee is out of the question in a car. I'm tired of it. Every time I park my car and work up enough courage to propose to a girl a cop comes along and shines a light in the window and yells 'drive on'! Is it against the law to kiss a girl?"

By this time, every ounce of any town or city.

Patrolman Marckinnel should have known that he invokes the law when it absolutely safe for any young man to propose marriage, and that man to pop the question under the direct supervision of police headquarters, in my opinion.

The change in household decorations accountable for Aunt Hazie's frantic letter.

Patrolman Marckinnel should have realized that he invokes the law when it absolutely safe for any young man to propose marriage, and that man to pop the question under the direct supervision of police headquarters, in my opinion.

The result? A curiously logsided affair, ambiguous, vague and quite scintillating in some subjects, dull and inferior in others.

Now, these particulars be borne in mind — as was the case with the thirteen cited above — no successful intelligence can be achieved. The keynote of this training is to develop gifted children in individual study and attention.

Pupils do not necessarily feel excited because you have such a child, but if you do it may be that the child is developed as it should be—intensively, individually and with—then, indeed, will be fulfilled your duty and may justly feel proud.

Dr. Bloch's Daily Diet Hint

An excellent nutrition broth is prepared as follows: Take a pound of lean mutton, add some salt, pepper and a pint and a half of cold water. Cook slowly down to half the quantity. Strain through muslin and remove fat. This broth may be eaten as a jelly or warmed, when required. It is splendid for invalids as well as for those in good health.

Good Manners

FIRST CARDS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly advise as to the correct form in which to have my daughter's cards engraved? She is between years of age and an only daughter.) Should the card read "Miss Carol Allen" or "Mrs. Carol Allen's" She will be entering society this winter and would like to have the best form. Although it would not be incorrect to have only the last name, with the Miss, this is rarely done now, and I prefer to have the cards read as my daughters. It is far better, and far more appropriate for a girl to have cards of her especially since she has such a fine name. Also the complete name always makes a better-looking card, a more balanced card. And be sure not to omit the Miss — this should be used, even though your daughter is a debutante.

I suggest, for the type of engraving that you use Roland Script or Bickman. It is a delightful style of engraving, and has pretty, distinction, and handsome quality.

PROMENADE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. If I am introduced and a man walks down the street, where does the lady walk?

2. If it is correct for him to walk on the outside, is it correct for a lady to take the precaution if walking with her wife and mother?

G.

1. The man walking with two women walks on the side of the pavement nearest the curb. He should not walk between them.

2. It would be gracious for the man and his wife to have the same other walk between them.

REFRESHMENTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me what would be correct to serve as refreshments at a very informal evening party? Should it be light at home (reception directly after the theatre) or about seventy-five guests will be present.

A thinks like ice cream, cake, cookies punch or coffee would be correct. It thinks that a salad or sandwiches should be served.

Reader.

It's suggestion to add a salad and small sandwiches, is an excellent one. And this would make the refreshments quite unexceptional one. Too, it means that there are two "courses", a good rule for a buffet meal. The salad might be a delicious fruit salad, made as rich as you wish it to be, and with this serve dainty, thin sandwiches, cream cheese and nut, cream spiff and toasted. Or crackers with cheese spread on them. Then, for your second course, the dessert, or ice cream and cake. Also it is best to serve a hot drink, hot coffee, as well as a cold punch.

POTATO SKINS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me what would be correct to serve as refreshments at a very informal evening party? Potatoes, you should put the skins on the butter plate. If you choose to eat the skins, does that mean that they should be eaten with the butter plate? If so, why is it not just as good form to eat potatoes and skins off the one plate?

Reader.

I meant of course that we put the skins on the bread and butter plate, not on the side of the dinner plate (if that is more convenient) If we do not intend to eat the skins. If we do intend to eat the skins (and I do, if they look well-scrubbed) we simply hold the potato with our fork, and open it out so that the inside is very conspicuous, and put the salt and pepper and butter on top. And let's be good

HEALTH and PSYCHOLOGY

Except for a few instances here and there throughout the country, specially gifted children are put in the classes with those who are average mentality. The result is that these children with a faster rate of development are held back to their own detriment.

Aside from the personal equation, holding a specially gifted child back in this fashion is wasting just that much brain power for the good of the world. We are learning that the world's most superior people can accomplish. And, therefore, superior children should receive the best of educational training so that opportunity may be given them to develop to their own very best advantage.

A few years ago I was privileged to attend a four-year-old boy who, according to a standard mental test, showed 200 percent mental age. He was a child of average parentage.

At eighteen months he could carry on a conversation that was perfect in sentences. His sound memory was truly remarkable. He could recognize more than twenty-five different songs when played, sung or whistled. He could count and knew his alphabet. He could recognize letters even when held upside down. At twenty to twenty-four months he sang and recited. His father and Freud actually readily remembered historical facts and formulas. When I suggested that he be taken from the whole of Warren's "Bunker Hill Address" in a year, I had the blank evidence of understanding.

There have been other cases like this. You may recall that Stella Ivy who discussed the fourth dimension before a lot of unsuspecting high school classes. Then there is Winifred Stoner who could read Cicero in Latin at the age of nine.

Certainly children like these represent a distinct asset. Whether you happen to have such a child, be sure to investigate your local educational facilities. See to it that the child's mental development is not thwarted or held back.

Unfortunately, we know less about those specially gifted children than we do about those of defective mentality. But in every instance the child endowed with superiority should receive more attention than the average public or private school curriculum can give.

Sometimes superior endowments are as far behind in some abilities as the defective mentality may be. Literally, the things they are gifted in they like to do. The parents, too, tend to be proud of the accomplishments and lose sight of the fact that parents unhinged their folding doors and made a shuttle. Now that the change in household decorations accountable for Aunt Hazie's frantic letter.

DEFEAT CHILL winds by concentrating on a house coat or robe that is made of stitched velvet in a sea-wave design, comes in bad news for winter. Just received, but interlined in lamb's wool, it is silk crepe lined. Huge sleeves are caught into narrow cuffs, and the girdle is of self material.

WHITE WINTRUS are just what the winter sport enthusiasts seek. And smart girls use the white bedraggled appearance to advantage. A gray gabardine suit is worn with a pink flannel shirt; a green Tyrolean hat still is of green with bright red pipings.

GET ACQUAINTED with the new fabrics no longer imported from Paris. Suzy makes a divine little bonnet of black felt which rises high above the hairline. The brim is faced with ruchings of velvet.

SOUTHERN MOONLIGHT smiles down on countless chiffon dance frocks. A model is of pale blue chiffon with subtly draped bodice and very wide skirts of trailing length. The broad silver girdle is set with tiny pearls and turquoise stones.

NOT ALWAYS does the tourist wish to wear white or pastels when going abroad. Black is fashionable point. Something different in a skirt of plaited black crepe with fine high above the hairline. The brim is faced with ruchings of velvet.

Vegetable Plates Are Popular

By BARBARA B. BROOKS

Nearly everyone knows some person whom he considers the best cook in the world. It may be a mother, wife, sister or friend. And in the case it is — of all things! — a man. Such a person's reputation for woman is absolute proof that a dietitian can cook not only well, they reckon as often attributed to the members of this profession, but in the most delicious way of all. One of her hobbies is the vegetable plate or platter which she uses as a means of the methods of cooking as well as the vegetables. Serve some-thing fried and something baked, something boiled and something color, texture and flavor and will suit every taste.

Many vegetable combinations are endless and range from the once which are simple and easy to make which require time and patience to prepare. Vegetables may be cooked separately and arranged on a platter or plank. Often eggs or cheese are used with a great type of meat and sometimes green peppers, onions or tomatoes are stuffed with a highly seasoned mixture and topped with grated cheese, then browned in the oven and served from the kitchen rather than from the dining table.

Here are some suggestions for both luncheon and dinner combinations. Serve the vegetables hot and sometimes including a small amount of meat.

In the center of a plate put a small mould of savory rice and tomato. Around it arrange sliced cooked, buttered carrots. Complete the plate with grilled tomatoes, Tomatoes, raw celery hearts and steamed spinach with lemon is also a delightful color arrangement and contrast in flavors and textures.

Serve rice in a bed of lightly browning cooked rice in onion and celery and topped with grated pepper and pimento. Press into a custard cup, turn out and serve hot. Dress them with butter, salt and pepper. Then into slices may be steamed and broiled or dipped in fine corn flake crumbs and fried in a well oiled pan. Set in a hot oven. This combination is heavy enough for dinner if served with a hot bread of some kind. Bran muffins are good and it is easy to stir them up and bake them, especially if you are using the oven for the vegetables.

A plate suitable for luncheon may be a baked half of an acorn squash, French fried potatoes, cabbage and beet salad and buttered onions. Tomato corn bread is good with this combination.

There are numerous plans for baking corn bread. Curried eggs, a peeled banana, steamed rice and the like. Or, baked apples, onion and green pepper form an unusual mixture for the person a little daring in food combinations.

The Church at Ubetcha

By ADJUTANT BOSWORTH

Tears ago Ubetcha was a roaring town. Gambling houses were packed and big gaming tournaments there were more than ten thousand miners and others in the place during every week-end, and quite a few every week. There was money in the hands full of nuggets or more than sixty million dollars' worth of gold, washed over from the placer dredged scales in the Walla Parrow district, and with the gold there was also in Ubetcha a lot of sin, misery, disorderliness and strife a place as bad as Dawson.

Drop down the slope to the eleven acres mentioned, and then it passes on the ridges to look at the all but deserted village. The iron shacks, the ruins of the old log buildings and some of the rock's have fallen in, but have the desolation to no different than that of the ghost mining camps in that Mother Lode which started Bret Hart chronicling and Mark Twain to swapping yarns. In the open field of white rocks standing like headstones that grew the place its name, and there and over the hillside, on a foundation level with the ground, are the remains of the old church.

Let us add for those in the old Ubetcha that they established the church quite early in the life of the place and strove. Then some one found that there was gold on the hill, gold caught in the hollow of rock, wedged in the crevasses, and all had for the finding. The valley was turned in and the dirt was sent through the flumes. What were outcroppings of buried rock appeared now as grotesque statues, and glaring white and glaring white. Thousands piled into the town and the hill through the fifties, sixties and seventies, they worked. When they were through the rocks looked like a plantation of gravestones after the dying city. The dirt and the gold were washed away and there was the home of a few old men who did not wish to leave.

Con Tomlin, Louis Brown, and Len Hughes were trustees of the church. Each week the miners and miners packed it to the doors. All around the church the miners there worked until the little structure and the first pastor, Ubetcha's only weather-beaten and dreary but upright building, was completed.

There came a time when the miners left, and that was when left of the original trustees and all was then that Louis Brown made his remark.

"There's no minister to come to and let us in" he spoke with hesitation almost afraid of his own words, "and besides we can put it to busy and need repairs and the dirt."

Tomlin and Hughes went on smoking their pipes and sat in their thoughts.

"It is," the other continued, "that I want the money so much, but just think of the fun of getting it out, just as it is, and then it's there! And it's ours, you know—all of ours alone."

"Put it as a motion," said Con Tomlin and the motion was carried, were two firm votes in the negative.

On Sundays the three old men held services, taking turns at delivering the sermon. Sometimes they wandered from theology into reminiscence but, nevertheless, answered the supply there something that was needed and important. When Tomlin died he was buried from the church and Len Hughes spoke the sermon.

"I put the motion again," said Louis Brown, after a month or two had passed by.

"And I vote 'no,' " said Len.

"You are a confounded old idiot," was Louis's rejoinder and he stamped out in a rage that could not be stilled.

Thereafter when Len delivered his sermon it was an extemporaneous for Louis would not attend. When it was his turn to preach he would, however, Len sat in a back seat and listened intently to every word, and when he arose hastily and departed. And this went on for more than a year.

Len was the next to go and a minister from Belleville came and conducted the funeral and Louis Brown stationed near the door.

Now the church belonged to Louis Brown. That is what he thought when he came to the service on Ubetcha's hill. He looked out of the window on the mountains and on the rocks and each stood in his mind for one of the miners who had been there. Then he remembered each of them, those old timers who had been in the town. It included Con Tomlin and Len Hughes.

Then Louis and Louis Brown's voice echoed in the empty building, that nobody disturbs this here church. Let it stand as it is!"

Again he looked out of the window and the rocks which crowded around.

"It is so ordered," said Louis Brown, and he stamped out and down the hill into the town of Ubetcha.

Teach Your Sacrifice Means

Child May Appreciate Value in Care of Pet, Says Writer

(By Lina Grenadle)

Freda was a happy-go-lucky kind of child. There was no harm in her, and she wasn't intentionally selfish, but she was thoughtless.

When Freda wanted something she wanted it very badly and right away, too. The cost? Ah, that was something Freda never considered, for Freda never paid the bill.

It wasn't so easy for mother or daddy to approve Freda's endless enthusiasms. They were expensive, they demanded endless petting and caresses of mother and father. Besides it wasn't good for Freda, this indulgence. Some day Freda would have to learn that in order to have one thing she would have to give up something else.

Freda tried to explain to her, but Freda wasn't very interested. Father tried firmness and abrupt refusal, but Freda

"You'd think it was a crime, asking for a female radio," she pouted.

"They tried putting Freda on an allowance. Freda spent all of her allowance for a week, saving for this and that. When she was ready to buy, Freda had changed her mind.

And she learned nothing much about petty sacrifice until Tiger came into her life. She learned about it then, but she couldn't help it.

Tiger was a kitten, a darling little Tiger down. No one could not when Tiger spent small enthusiasms, but, beseeching eyes and waited for you all day, his nose pressed against the glass of the door, his little crooked tail moving expectantly.

Learned Sacrifice

Father was very firm and could not be moved. Tiger, Freda decided she had enough to feed.

"But he's got to be bought," Freda said, "he'll dig if he isn't."

So Freda started to sacrifice. She gave up her candy. She went without no ice-cream cones and no candy, but Tiger still wouldn't dig. She stood it if she hadn't known that Tiger would be paid for. Tiger, did if they weren't bought and loved. But soon she had enough money for a foundation.

"But how's he going to be fed?" mother asked.

So it went on, not so many ice-cream cones, not so many movies, week after week, so that Tiger could get just the food he

And understanding came slowly to Freda. She learned that it was hard to give up so much of that until you grew cross and almost crying in the effort to do it.

She never asked quickly or made up her mind right off, but thought everything over a long time after that. Did she really want it so much? Was it worth it? How much did it cost in petty sacrifice?

The Church at Ubetcha

By ADJUTANT BOSWORTH

Years ago Ubetcha was a roaring town. Gambling houses were packed and big gaming tournaments there were more than ten thousand miners and others in the place during every week-end, and quite a few every week. There was money in the hands full of nuggets or more than sixty million dollars' worth of gold, washed over from the placer dredged scales in the Walla Parrow district, and with the gold there was also in Ubetcha a lot of sin, misery, disorderliness and strife a place as bad as Dawson.

Daintiness Is Important Quality

Whitney Bourne

Daintiness is an important quality of her beauty.

By HELEN FOLLETT

DAINTINESS is a quality of beauty that any woman can possess. It is the reward for fastidious personal care, regard for the small details of one's wardrobe, hair so clean that it glistens and finger nails in tip-top form.

One detail that is not to be overlooked is the care of the armpits. Large glands are there, sending perspiration, unless it is bathed away, frequently, will place upon the skin surface waste materials that are odorous. Dress shields are not enough to prevent perspiration. Discard them, find a deodorant that will act as an astringent to the glands, and stick up a protest in the form of a mild dermatitis.

When the palms of the hands are moist, there's a reason. Health is up to par...nervous system out of kilter.

Perspiration with alcohol after the hands are washed. At night apply a soda solution, one teaspoonful of soda to a tumbler water, followed by a cup of baking water, and cooled.

ATTACKS BALDWIN ON ERROR POLICY

Chamberlain's Criticism Forces Baldwin to Concession

London, Feb. 15 (CP-Havas) — Prime Minister Baldwin today announced abolition of the Air Ministry, foreign Secretary, to No. 19 Downing Street for a conference following a bitter attack on Baldwin's management in the House of Commons by Sir Austen Chamberlain, former Foreign Secretary.

After his conference with Mr. Eden, the Prime Minister announced Viscount Monsell ,First Lord of the Admiralty.

Sir Austen, prominently mentioned as a possible successor to Baldwin as the time of the collapse of the Hoare-Laval peace plan, made the words in taking Baldwin to task for what he described as "two additional errors of judgment."

By "two errors" Sir Austen said he meant the Hoare-Laval peace plan, for which Baldwin apologized in the House of Commons after its collapse and the resignation of Sir Samuel Hoare, Secretary, and (2) the Prime Minister's admission that he misjudged the public extent of German re-armament.

Sir Austen declared that these circumstances for the Prime Minister to be an effective head of a committee of defence. Chamberlain said during the course of a long attack on the conduct of Britain's defence ministries.

Sir Austen said the latest policy of the government was "without precedent in the 40 years of my parliamentary life."

Such bitter criticism from so staunch a Conservative as Sir Austen has not failed to make a deep impression here.

General bewilderment over this criticism was reflected by the Labor Party Opposition leader.

"Are the Tories preparing to put Baldwin overboard?" he asked.

"Baldwin has lost his prestige and his hold on his own men," the Herald's bitter editorial said.

"They don't trust him. They don't respect him. He is suspected of indolence and indifference to his high duty. His own friends have found him out at last. 'A lath painted to look like iron.'

The Liberal News Chronicle commented it would be difficult to exaggerate the significance of Sir Austen's speech but the Telegraph argued it was unfair to attempt to interpret the speech as a sign of revolt.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied by Singer and Crawford by Financial Service.

Hollinger earnings this year are expected to be somewhat higher than the $1.00 a share estimated for 1935. The annual statement for 1935 is scheduled to make its appearance early in April. Less favorable conditions will mark the year with a consequent increase in milliheads as compared with last year's record. A condition which will result in higher earnings during 1936 is the average price of ore milled was $7.93 as against a grade of $12.38 as representing the average grade of ore reserves at the mine. These figures give us an idea of the improvement that may take place, at a later date, in the milling grade of ore. Mr. John R. Timmins, the new president, intimated recently that officials feel that the present operating conditions that seems with the program of sinking and development mine workings above 800 feet had been arrested, and that a somewhat higher average ore grade in the mill than last year could be anticipated in 1936.

Should, at some future date, in a period of higher prices, the grade of a same grade as that being estimated as mine average, the Company could earn over $3.00 per share on its issued capital, in our calculations.

In view of the increasingly strong position of Hollinger it will be believed that Hollinger will continue its policy of charging the bulk of its earnings in the way of dividends and bonuses. Last year a total of 75 cents a share was paid, or approximately 90 per cent. of net earnings. With increased earnings in prospect for this year, shareholders can confidently anticipate dividends of at least $1.00 a share for the current year.

It is considered that the market value of the investment subsidiary's assets, the International Bond and Shares, has increased from $5,000,000 as at May 1935 to over $8,000,000 today. This growth is expected to reveal the ore reserves position at an all time high point.

Red Lake Gold Shore Mines has completed station-cutting at the new bottom level at 550 feet. A crosscut will be started at once to pick up the downward extension of the Red Lake Section.

Some people are endeavoring to discover the reason for the demand for preferred and many theories have been propounded to explain the interest. Nervousness over inflation, possibly some hope that the purchases of common stocks, convertible into preferred at a low option, however, the explanation that seems to be long sight of their curities is explainable by the fact that there is a plethora of funds seeking investment.

Flood, Potter and Co. in their Market Letter point out that not all stocks will go up. For instance in both the New York market and the Montreal markets many stocks have been left behind while others have trebled in value; nor will the rise be confined to speculative issues—but the major trend in business and securities is upward. In the stock markets and a great deal of care should be observed when making either investment or speculative purchases to see that one gets the full benefit of the rising tide in new issues working for higher prices in equities.

Buying of Brazilian Traction is founded on the belief that the company's cash position is sufficiently strong to warrant a dividend payment. A favorable point in the situation is brought to the fact that the price of coffee has increased substantially and that this coffee is at present being exported from Brazil in very satisfactory quantities. Also, the fact that the exchange situation favorably but the net result is that the profit of that there is a tremendous amount of backwash to be cleared up. The recent rise in Brazilian Traction had improved sentiment a great deal as to the buying people own the stock in Canada.

In the present setting we see no reason to disturb either our investment holdings or conservative, long range speculative commitments. We believe that this is a good time, in new purchases, however, especially in the senior issues, preferred. We believe the period just ahead is sufficiently favorable to reasonably both caution and close discrimination.

Ford A was down slightly and in the Oils British American, International Petroleum, Imperial and McColl, Frontenac showed small recessions.

Higher prices ruled for Western Canada Flour, Canada Steamships, Canadian Bakeries, Ltd, the latter extending its 1935 record high. Most of the heavy Industrials were unchanged at the close.

ROYALIST EDITOR INDICTED IN PARIS

Charge of Incitement To Murder Pressed Against Maurras

Paris, Feb. 15 (CP) — Charles Maurras, editor of the Royalist Paper Action Francaise, was indicted today for incitement to murder following the assassination of Jacques Blom, Socialist leader.

Firmin Gemier, managing editor of the Royalist organ, was also indicted.

"I am humiliated at being considered nothing more than an accomplice in this affair," said M. Maurras emerging today from the examination room.

The indictment against both Maurras and Daudet accuses them of "provoking the assassination by their articles of incitement to murder on the heads of Parliamentary Deputies published in their paper, These editorials, the authorities charged, directly provoked the assault by young Royalists on Leon Blum Thursday.

Canadians Shutout Czechs With the Finest Display of Combination Seen at Olympics

Win However Will Not Help Unless U. S. Beats England

Three Canadians Were Sliding Back Wide Passes

Garnisch. - Fartenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 15.— (CP Cable)—Behind the finest combination attack unveiled here, the Canadian hockey team shutout Czechoslovakia 7-0 this morning to remain in the fight for the Olympic championship.

The defeat ended the European team's chances of taking the title but by the same token kept alive Dominion's hopes of defending the honors she has won since the winter games were inaugurated. If the United States spared not even the strong English side when they slash tonight in the Olympic rink at nine p.m. (three p.m. E.S.T.) and the Canadians turn the American basic tournament, Sports must crown a close, the championship will go to the team with the best, yeast average.

Several the English team is favored to whip the Americans and the result would automatically give the laurels. Both around six players who started the game in the Old Country have signed on to contend for the biggest quest of the winter. Only B.C. who over the Canadian defenders in the second period.

Czechs Help Help

The Czechs' goals the Canadians ran in against the outclassed Czechs will be a history total in one the Canadian, England and American crew of the series tied in points and total goals are the deciding factor. The margin of victory was better than England counted on beating the Canucks Friday, 5-0, but the Canadian passes were sliding in the groove and six of the goals were born of combination thrusts. Duncan Munro, Hugh Farquhar, two of the Royals, and Ken Farmer of the Victorias, were the stars. Farmer's three goals all came unassisted in another while Farmer and Munro got one and two assists in three others.

Despite the one-sided, the European spectacle were aware there were in for a trimming. They contested every foot of the ice and made a effort to keep the score as low as possible.

Pelm, the 37-year-old Czech goalie in spite of the fact that he managed to outside the Maple Leaf guns for 1-3 minutes, mull Pod Kilchen of Canada, picking up the score. Otherwise, the Port Arthur, wing scored a shot.

Three in Five Minutes

Firing long passes, the full width of the rink at times, the Canucks baffled the Czech defence and scored counted three goals in five minutes: Arnold Deacon of Port Arthur shot the first goal for the 1-3 second Farmer helped Farquhar on the third and the order was reversed as Farmer scored Safely in the lead, the title defenders took things easier in the second. They slowed down and began to weak up more of the rapid combination thrust, but still Pelca was giving a hectic session in the Czech net. His didn't help much though as gave when Hevlik, Ivan Murray, added up passes almost in front of the net, with only Pelca and the goal line off guard.

The closing period was pretty dull. Farquharson registered the only tally of the session and was the only one of the game produced by solo effort.

Only a small crowd attended, most of the visitors flocking to the hair-raising bob run finals of the Germans behinds. Those at the hockey game were treated to a display of passing unequalled by anything the Canadians have flashed in their three previous and certainly superior to that smoothed by the other six.

HOCKEY SLOGLIGHTS

BY RAY COLLETT

Cap-wearing is an incurable habit with sturdy Bill Hyrdge whose stalwart form and hard-hitting tactics gained renown as part of the New York Americans. And a grim-looking customer it makes of Bill, when he puts that cap down over his eyes and stares outward from in front of Roy Worter's citadel. And here's a secret—only a few, a very select few, of the N.H.L. forwards knew it—but you want to get William's nanny, knock off that cap!

But really Bill is quite genial. Off the ice, in fact he's rather self-conscious and one of the pleasant fellows you'd meet in a day's travel. Only he has that habit of blocking the player, not the puck, out of the play or over the fence or even into the seats wherever possible and they and the officials don't appreciate it.

But don't think it's all new to the house of Bruyge. Look at that strong jaw and face. Its marked and criss-crossed with hockey scars. Bill's body is like that from head to toe. Off the ice he wears a bowler hat and gray spats. While Bill's always ready to fight for his recreation, his business partner for many seasons on the Americans defence likes theatres—and good shows at that—by his leisure hours. When Lionel Conacher retired his recently, a colorful and courageous veteran took his bow.

The B.C.I. senior girls showed too much class to aim their second consecutive victory without defeat, as they trimmed Napanee seniors in the score of 34 to 18, while the local Allison-coached junior B.C.I. sextette won their first victory by downing the proud the undoing of the visitors, Rae Symons, who with Bessie and Sylvia Reddick with eight were the leading point-getters. G. Walker and D. Clapham were the only marksmen for the losing Napanee seniors. The half-time score was 20 to 6 for the B.C.I.

Power play by D. Aseltine and Perrin in the last half asserted the B.C.I. of victory as the local girls rounded out the scoring for the visitors successfully. D. Aseltine, J. Perrin and D. Patterson were the only point-getters for the B.C.I. with M. Roney and J. Clarke making the majority of the baskets for the losers. BILL MacKENZIE WINDSOR, HURT

Bulldogs Hold Bisons to Tie But Lose Defence-man

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 15 (CP)—Feelings in the Windsor Bull Dogs camp were varied today as they figured their playoff chances in the western section of the International Hockey League. The dogs were elated that their 2-2 tie with Buffalo Bisons moved them to within two points of the second-place Cleveland Falcons but the game also proved costly.

The Windsor team will move into Pittsburgh tonight to play Rockrocks minus their stellar defenceman Bill Mackenzie, who suffered a torn ligament in his knee when he crashed heavily into the boards during the second period with Troy Teasdale during the first period. The former Winnipeg player may be out of action for several games.

Fighting an uphill battle all the way, the Dogs staged a rousing last minute rally in the final session, Joe Hevio pinching the tying goal. Neither team scored in the overtime period.

How to Bowl—No. 4

TRY THREE-STEP D'ELIVERY

By MRS. FLORETTA D. McCUTCHEON

WORLD CHAMPION WOMAN BOWLER

Miss Barbara McCutcheon, daughter of the champion, at finish of delivery, showing follow through, with left knee and back bent.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a series of ten lessons on bowling, written especially for Central From Canadian by Mrs. Floretta D. McCutcheon, woman champion bowler and nationally-known bowling instructor.

Even if you never have bowled, don't stand at the foul line and let your ball go. Put your left foot and arm in back of the delivery.

Neither do I want you to start by running down the approach. Start on that three normal walking steps to the foul line.

Walker of Napanee C.I. juniors to win by the final count of 26 to 17 in the junior contested game in the junior series. Power play by D. Aseltine and Perrin in the last half asserted the B.C.I. of victory as the local girls rounded out the scoring for the visitors successfully. D. Aseltine, J. Perrin and D. Patterson were the only point-getters for the B.C.I. with M. Roney and J. Clarke making the majority of the baskets for the losers. The same two officials handled both contests to the satisfaction of the crowd. A full gallery of cheering students was on hand to rout their favourites home.

Junior line-ups:

B.C.I.V.S. (26)—D. Aseltine, 11; J. Perrin, 8; Patterson, 4; H. Smith; 2; D'Carr, 3; C. McIlheer, forwards, M. Houston, M. Clarke, T. Kelly, J. Dutton, Bert Higgs.

Napanee C.I. (17)—M. Roney, 8; R. Sinclair, 2; V. Pidgeon, 1; J. Clarke, 6, forwards, M. Miller, M. Curry, D. Murphy and L. Rawson, guards.

Stand erect and relaxed. Hold the weight of the ball in the left hand, if you are right-handed, cradling it comfortably in front of you, low enough so that you can see over it to the foul line.

Now Get Down On Your Hips.

Arrive at the foul line with the left foot within six inches of the line, right foot back and in balanced position as the ball is released, shoulders parallel to the foul line and almost horizontal, left knee and back bent. Get down to your alley.

There should be no more tension in elbow or wrist than in knees and ankles when walking or dancing.

The right arm is a pendulum and the ball is the weight that swings it.

Next: Down to the alley.

Miss Jane Davis in first step of delivery, left hand holding weight of ball, right arm as she can see foul line beyond.

Definite information relative to what team the Belleville Redmen meet in the second round of the intermediate O.H.A. play-downs is expected by Manager Thomas Whether or not the Cam-bellford Maroons will elect to enter the play-downs was announced as an early hour today, but in all likelihood the Maroons will naturally take advantage of winning their league and enter the play-offs. Manager Thomas is endeavoring to have the first game of this series played in Belleville on Tuesday night with the return game away on Thursday. Naturally with the charity V.O.N. ice carnival scheduled for Thursday night it will be impossible to play here on that date. Skipper Thomas expects definite word in relationship to the next series some time today. In the meantime the locals continue their the Napanee series in good condition with the exception of "Speedy" St. Denis who sustained a slight injured thigh but will be ready for a possible game here on Tuesday.

Only one game was played in the local Kl-Y League last evenitde, the first being scheduled for the Stars 4 to 2 in the juvenile series.

"Punch" Boit, Montreal skiers who won premier honors at a recent Belleville ski meet, should be known to older residents in Belleville. Boit's mother, previous to her marriage some years ago, was Miss Ida Hendborne of this city. Boit won his honors in Ottawa, Lord and Lady Tweedsmuir, who were attending their first ski carnival.

C. D. Shipley of Amherst, N.S. and chairman of the affiliation and alliance committee of the Canadian Amateur Athletic Union, says that the officials of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, now in Germany could not reinstate Jim Foster and Alex Archer, the two Canadian hockey aces who are playing for England in the Olympics. Maybe, Mr. Shipley is right but the fact that they were reinstated and did play against Canada remains all too concrete as was established when England beat Canada and caused many a headache. Even the Canada's only hope and salvation is to have the United States trim the Britishers.

With one more double-header scheduled for the Inter-provincial-astic Hockey group for next Wednesday night we find the group standing reads as follows:

	W.	T.	L.	P.
B.C.I.V.S.	3	1	0	9
Albert College	2	2	1	6
St. Michael's	1	0	3	2
O.S.D.	0	0	5	0

Games next Wednesday at the Exhibition Arena: St. Albert College; O.S.D. vs. B.C.I.V.S.

Considerable interest in the public skating rink may be stared during Thursday night's V.O.N. charity ice carnival is being shown throughout the city and schools throughout the city. Relay teams from the O.S.D., St. Michael's, Queen Alexandra, Queen Mary, Victoria, Wing, Wing Deerpark and the Prince of Wales schools will compete. Incidentally valuable prizes are being purchased for the winners of the dress carnival, all of which are well worth competing for, the committee assured us today. No effort are being spared to make this charity carnival one of the most outstanding winter events ever staged in Belleville in years. Every line of entertainment has been considered to that all patrons may be afforded a metropolitan show at popular prices.

"Pig Skin" Peters, that noted character from Birds Eye Centre, has been contacted and agreed to come to Belleville and try to referee or at least keep peace between the warring factions of the police and fireman clubs' hockey squads.

The members of the Quinte Skating Club, who appeared as featured artists at the Cobourg winter carnival last night, will remain in Cobourg until the early hours of this morning. They say they thoroughly enjoyed themselves while their performances were very favorably received by the local cast of learning have won and lost.

REDWINGS AND MAROONS PICKED FOR THE FINALS

BREAKS AGAINST TEAM

Thinks His Own Team Would be in But For Injuries

By GEORGE MAGUIRE

New York, Feb. 15 (CP) — Slim, quiet-spoken Harry Oliver, keen backchecking wingman of New York Americans, believes the coming Stanley Cup play-off series will be little more than a two team battle.

The teams? Detroit Redwings and Montreal Maroons, said Harry with a conviction that bespoke lengthy deliberation.

Oliver, a toptoucher with Boston Bruins for eight years until secured by the Amerks, is not overlooking his own team's chances. But, he said, "we get no breaks"—with a sidelong glance at Leighton "Happy" Emms and Tommy "Cowboy" Anderson, Yankee pilot, busily denouncing broken hands.

"With fellows like Shrimp Worters, Sweeney Schriner, Ned Dutton and the best centre in the league, Frank Boucher, on the ice, I'll say we and give them all an argument but we only started to click. We're a winning streak when someone is put out of action.

"Yes, and don't forget the games we have lost in the last minute, the games we have tied in the last minute, should have won," chipped in Owen "Sleepy" Morrison, Amerk scoring goal scorer.

"There's the way it goes," proceeded Oliver. "We lose a bunch of games by narrow margins that we should have won, then we should have three more than we did from Maroons, then we think we have hit a winning stride and bang—another player is sent to the cleaners.

Fraher Chabot.

Oliver believes acquisition of Lorne Chabot is going to make the difference between a championship aggregation and a team championship club in the near future.

"What a boy in the tight spots," he ejaculated. "Chabot's nothing more than a veteran who has come into the nets after a layoff of a month or more. Forwards to one goal. He is a miracle man alright."

In comparing the Maroons and Redwings Oliver is somewhat of the opinion the Maroons would now have an edge in goal over the Wings which "coupled with their better balanced forward lines and defence should put them the edge provi-ding of course," he adds, "we don't get one of Lady Luck's turns and upset the dope."

The Americans left for Montreal last night minus Anderson and Emms. The latter suffered a broken hand when checked by Earl Seibert, Chicago defenceman, in the game with the Blackhawks here on Thursday night. Anderson has been confined to his home now but may be back in another ten days.

Oliver was out of the Rovers game with a bad ankle. Back but refused to be left behind when the Americans entrained for the tough battle with the Montreelers.

Ned Robinson, dashing Maroons wingman with the baffling change of pace, Oliver named as the hardest man to stop on the Canadian Cup holders, but he admitted that when Lionel Conacher started down the ice there was little to be done about it except try and tell him some-thing. Conacher's days of the game of balance as his shot would go wide.

WHITE-WINGED CRAFT OF YORE

Recollections of Yachting

Sailing history was written in this Belleville district by a sturdy race of water-dogs in the palmy days of a sturdier build of commercial craft, who made the local land harbor their port of call from others across the lakes and from the sea. But not all these old timer reminiscences of sailors and ships of a bygone age are confined to the exploits of coal and lumber and grain carriers that were forever to and fro across the waters. There were more graceful, more speedy craft that plowed over the bay and surrounding waters with their white wings, and while the lumber and grain carriers were the more popular craft of the day, there existed in the early days of yachting in this district a fleet of pleasure craft which were owned in this district and the Belleville-Sargent Bay of sound north Hastings timber, and sailed at weekends and contested in the Ontario Intelligencer is indebted for those which appear below.

Among the pleasure yachts which were owned in this district was the Atlanta, built in Belleville of sound north Hastings timber, and sailed at weekends and contested in the Ontario Cup. Much has been told of the exploits of the Atlanta in her trip to New York, where she made her best attempt to win the cup which has been so annually fought for by British yachtsmen. Unfortunately for the Atlanta, the New York Yachting Club had changed its rules following the previous year's meeting and the competition unless they were sailed in yachts built and owned in the United States.

The Atlanta subsequently sailed to Chicago and there con-

BRITISH OLYMPIC HOCKEY TEAM WRECK WHIPPED CANADIAN 8—One of the greatest upsets in Olympic history came when British team squeezed out a win over the Canadians by a score of 3-1, Jim Ivy Foster and A. Archer, both playing for the Britishers, were suspended by the International Ice Hockey Federation because they did not have the endorsement of the Canadian Association. These players, however, were reinstated by the International Board. The above picture shows the team waving their Olympic colors. The team consists of A. Erhardt; Capt.; J. Foster, J. A. Borland, R. Wyman, R. French jr, J. Chappel, G. Davey, S. Shinchcombe, A. Archer, G. Dudley; J. Kilpatrick; J. Gyward and A. Child.

BRITISH POLO STARS DEFEAT CALIFORNIANS IN INTERNATIONAL GAME — Winning the second game of an international polo service at Meadvick Country club, to tie the score in games won, British All-Stars defeated the California Stars 11-8 in a hard-fought game. This photo shows Elmer Boeselin, 8-goal man of the California stars as he shot home a goal, successfully eluding E. Tyrell Martin (black shirt). England 8-goaler, who is galloping up in an attempt to block the shot.

HOW VIRTUAL UNKNOWN BEAT CUNNINGHAM—One of the most sensational climbs to track fame is that of Joe Mangan of Cornell University, who is known far and wide in running circles as "the man who beat Cunningham" in the Wanamaker mile at Madison Square Garden's Millrose meet. It is the last burst of speed requiring every ounce of strength, energy and perseverance that means the difference between defeat and victory. In this workout, the candid camera records his spurt finish in which he calls upon his physical reserves. Notice the facial expressions and the action of his hands as he bears down toward the finish line. Notice, too, the muscles of his neck and the feeling of relaxation imparted by the last picture on the RIGHT. The unusual strip was made at Cornell.

ACE SPEEDSTER— Here is Ivar Ballangrud, Norway's brilliant speed skater, who won the Olympic speed skating championship at 500 metres. Ballangrud flashed over the course in 43 and four-tenth seconds in a speed test against the watch. A team-mate Kroz, took second place with 43 and five-tenth seconds. Leo Freisinger of the U.S. team finished third, in 44 seconds flat. Canada's lone hope, Tom White of St. John's was far back after losing speed on the turns.

ERIC HOUGHTON, discovered by Aston Villa back in the 1928-1929 season, and accounted as one of the "finds" of that year. Packs one of the hardest shots in the Villa team and can drive from all angles. Came to the Villa direct from school and received his league training from none other than Billy Walker, one of England's most brilliant football figures. Injuries kept him out of the Villa side last year; he played only twelve games and scored four goals.

JACK HOLLIDAY—Leading manager and sparkplug of the Brentford team. Plays in the forward line and his exceptional ability with both head and feet makes him a thorn in the side of opposing defencemen. Is particularly dangerous around the net, and his 25 goals in 41 games registered last season aided the Brentford team no little in their drive up the stretch to a first division

CHABOT BACK WITH CANADIENS; OTHER CHANGES POSSIBLE—Seeking strength to bolster their flame-shirted squad for the N.H.L. stretch drive just ahead, Montreal Canadiens are trying some player changes. Lorne Chabot, veteran goalkeeper, who last year won the Vezina Trophy only to be transplanted in Chicago Black Hawk nets by sensational Mike Karakas, has been bought back from Chicago. Canadiens sent him to the Hawks in the Marcel deal. His acquisition is expected to open the way for a trade with Detroit, Redwings who ardently desire little Willie Cude, Canuck netminder, and would likely give some forward or defensive material for him. Canadiens have also recalled Marc Bennett, former Hamilton Tiger amateur from Springfield Indians, and will use him to help the injury-riddled forward line.

DEACONS AGAIN BEAT NAPANEE

Score 73-19 Win And Finish Ahead in Group Schedule

Continuing to be the class of their group the Deacon A.C. juvenile basketball team of this city defeated the Napanee Grads by the score of 73 to 19 at Napanee last evening in a scheduled E.O.A.B.A. game in the juvenile series. The Dole-coached outfit was always on top of the score, leading by the count of 30 to 11 at the half-way mark.

The win gives the Deacon juveniles the group title for "B" section of group number one without suffering a single loss. The entire Deacon squad entered into the scoring last night, as the "shirtmakers," emassed one of the largest cage scores ever piled up locally. The players showing the most improvement in their play last night, however, were Mitchell, Clare and Dickens with Culhane and Gilbert proving the best threats used by Coach Egan of Napanee.

The lineups:

Deacon A.C. 73: Mason, centre; Simpkins and Dickens, forwards; Muir and Collins, guards, subs. Peoples, Mitchell and Clare.

Napanee 19: Culhane, centre; Gilbert and VanLuven, forwards; Weed and Exley, guards; subs. Urna and Woods.

Referee: Coffey, Kingston.

Dale Plays The Game

BY

Ann Forester

laughing at their attempts to ride Major, and at Major's more successful attempts to buck their dirty fates.

A young man perked one day, and feeling the girl distributing lady-fingers to a circle crowd of young gentlemen, he stopped. Consequently followed as a matter of course. Dale was more than mouthy tangly that day, and in the evening she was grateful for his pleasant company. She talked at random, as instinctively, as she would have talked to any agreeable stranger in the world. How could she know that did not realize until a couple of weeks later, when she met him in the Kendall living room on Sunday morning - and found an aghast family grouped about the morning paper.

Sunday morning was the one time in the week when all the members of the family met at the breakfast table. Mrs. Kendall had been for a couple of hours, busy with his eternal figuring in the library. When she succeeded it was to find the entire family collected in the large living room, Mrs. Kendall was sitting on the davenport. One got the impression that her legs had given way beneath her. Mimi, in a clashing negligee of violet chiffon, was beside her. Mrs. Kendall's new wool sport suit, which was already stained and ripped, was dragged carelessly over on the other side, the inevitable cigarette smouldering in the ash tray at her elbow. Behind them, his brows level, while he nervously chewed his pipe stem, Mr. Kendall was on the newspaper Mrs. Kendall held.

Mimi was armed with bitter emphasis: "An actress—we could stand that! They've shown before that they're members of good families. But a vaudeville—"

"Whoopee!" burst out Mamie, reality, just doesn't describe what was grinning, but it was plain to see that even Mamie was startled.

Mimi's voice ordered Brant and Dale jumped when she heard his name. Dale, "How did this thing get in?"

"What thing?" she asked, and asked her voice for quivering.

"What thing!" Mimi echoed, then with one of her typical thought processes, "Oh, the—the—the picture. I was talking with them—"

"Yes, I know," said Dale, "that young man came along. He seemed so—so interested. She was laughing at him children and Major—and we got talking. He was so nice and so—and without meaning to being personal, you know. And he'd been out west too, so we talked—he knows Brant—"

Dale's eyes pleaded for him—to understand. Mimi, who had known the appalling loneliness of being an actress, who had had to be friended... But that Brant had vanished. Here was the picture and the newspaper and a bitter mouth.

Dale's own misery blinded her to the fact that Brant, too, was suffering. He was smarting under the sense of betrayal, under the consciousness of his wife's appealing face, of his mother's hurt pride. He drew his head up.

"Well, there's nothing to do. After all, they'll find out the truth, even though it's pretty highly colored. This picture probably won't be run. Dale, are you a good feature in it and got somebody out west to do the publicity for you? That's where they got the photos too, of course. Well, let's forget it, that's all we can do."

"Oh, I'm so sorry—awfully, awfully sorry—" and she turned frantically to Mrs. Kendall. "Please believe me, I didn't realize. I wouldn't have done this for the world! Please see how sorry I am—"

Dale stopped with a dreadful feeling of futility. Like a fly, she was frantically trying to get through the glass—futilely bumping—striving to get through that cold reserve to the older woman.

Brant's mother had recovered her poise, outwardly at least. She swept the paper to one side as though it were dirt.

"Brant is right," her tones were like thinking ice. Her eyes refused the girl without appearing to see her. "There is nothing we can do save make the best of it."

"Oh, please—please—if you know how I feel!" Stung by the sense of unbearable distress Dale caught imploringly at the elder's chiffon sleeve as she went by. She stopped in hot confusion at the sound of Brant's voice. A tone out of hell in her hand and Mrs. Kendall looking at it, as though it were dirt.

Unfriendly eyes—hating her.....

And they were right! She had brought this dreadful thing upon them..... Dale turned and groped her way blindly to the door.

Upstairs at last in her own bedroom where she was to remain for two days and nights..... But she could not be free from the misery of her own thoughts. Her memory went back over the headlines of the paper. The shocking craftiness of the picture of Sandy pushing before the lunch counter. She had been the weapon in her hand. Just as he was winning his place back in the world, she had been the one to deal him his first blow in the back.

Dale pressed her hot face down into the pillow, if she could only run away. Leave it behind her. But that would be only self-deception. She would be just in it. Proud Mrs. Kendall—Mimi, crimson faced with shame—Brant, disturbed for an unusual moment..... They would be let to face and live down the humiliation she had brought upon them. And Brant—oh, Brant, whom she loved more than she loved herself—oh, it was a cowardly thing to have done to Brant!

It was nearly an hour later when Dale heard Brant come upstairs. He went to his room and listened. There he was moving about, changing his clothes, then the door slipped from the bed and entered his room timidly.

Brant was facing the mirror, tying his tie. Dale crossed over and laid a hand on his arm.

"Funnyface—" her voice quavered on the old silly love name she had used in the days when they were engaged. "Please say you forgive me....."

Now Dale was facing him. Knew how somber his eyes.....He looked down into Dale's grief swollen face, and looked away, frowned wearily.

"Don't be ridiculous, dear. I'm not the one to ask for you to look for forgiving you."

"Oh, don't make a debt of it!" Dale cried in pain.

Brant put an arm lightly about Dale's shoulders, but he did it as his without meaning.

"I know you didn't mean any harm, dear. Let's just forget it. That's the only thing to do."

Although she knew Dale's thought, standing with heavy hanging arms, while bitterness flooded her heart. She turned back to his dressing and after a moment Brant joined her. He knew that Brant did not call her back. A short time later Dale heard his step on the stair and then faded out down the hall.

The afternoon stretched itself to a space of wretchedness which held no minutes nor hours. Dale sat with her head which beat back and forth wearing a dreary rut in Dale's brain. Dinner, which was served on Sundays and no one came to break her lonely vigil.

The sad light of dusk flooded the room. Wearily Dale began combing the damp hair back from her hot face. After all, she would have to get out of her own room sometime. She did what had lost all meaning. She would "face the music" and get it back. If she could only read it might help her to forget.

Dale met no one in the upper hall or on the stairs. She was only aware that she was only the bitter vitals at the far end. The lamps had been lit in the living room. It was blessedly empty. As the girl reached the bottom of the stairs she was startled by a voice from the next room, only slightly muffled by the heavy portieres which screens the entrance.

"Oh, my dear, what a bitter mistake it has been! And the times I nearly went to Brant's mother—and Mimi's voice, holding a note of fiery anguish which Dale had never heard before.

"There was a time when you didn't think it a mistake."

CHAPTER 38

THE EAVESDROPPER

Dale stood, one arm outstretched toward the bookcase, as though she had been frozen when Brant's voice, coming again, "I was wrong—horribly wrong. But I was mad, Mimi. I was little more than a child—a spoiled child. I know what you're thinking, Brant, and you're right. But I was the one who was the rage when he was here. All the girls were after him; hilarious about his title. And when he singled me out I was looking ahead and my mind was made up. Dale thought Brant must have made some impatient gesture for Mimi's voice protested.

"Oh, I know! It sounds petty, but I'm not the only one who's suffering in my life. I was flattered by the attention of a man who was older than myself—I lost my head. But I paid for my mistake, Mimi. I paid bitterly and I'm not always—you."

There was a poignant silence on both sides of the curtain. Dale was tortured by doubt. Was Mimi in Brant's arms? Was he looking down at her with that grey flame burning in his eyes of a lover? She sat down at Dale that night he thought Hemp?

Dale's heart leaped as Brant's voice sounded. He spoke in a low, strained monotone.

"After all, Mimi, it is wise for us to go back into the past? Hadn't we better leave things as they are? Ah, I knew you were resentful!" Mimi cried. "I knew you really hated me for—for—"

"Making a fool of myself for seven years?" Brant asked. "No, Mimi, that's even hold you responsible for that. I don't need any one to make a fool of myself. I seem perfectly able to attend to that personally."

The listening girl wondered, with a stab at her heart, just what Brant meant by that. Perhaps Mimi, too, was puzzled for there was a strained silence. Then Dale thought she heard through the other woman had moved nearer. Her voice was so low she could barely catch it.

"Ah, Brant, my dear, if we could only have looked ahead when we were girl and boy. If we could only have foreseen and avoided these bitterness!"

Dale found her hand pressing hard on her heart as she could against Mimi clinging to Brant. Could picture her dark head tilted as the small, perfect face was seductively posed just below his lips. A wild furore of fury went over her. She would sweep she curtains aside—she would confront them. She would ask Brant whom he considered the more contemptible, the woman whose selfishness had sent him into a seven year exile, or the girl who had been judged guilty on the dock and the unbearable heat of the desert!

Before Dale could be betrayed into any such mistake, however, came a match strike. Brant was lighting a cigarette. Mimi had not moved in his arms then!

Brant's voice was dry—neither woman could see his face—expressionless on his face when he held the pipe from its bowl into the vegetable patch . . . Brant, bruised and bloody, after his fight with Jerry Kemp, leaning for his self-defense.....

Suddenly, with purpose, Dale moved to the closet and snatched an armful of clothes. She flung on the bed. Dragged out a suitcase from the depths of the closet and began piecing in shoes and toilet articles. One owed something to Mimi—"I owe you too much—" Brant had said. So he had given his love as one pays a debt.

Here, don't cry! How could she have left her self-control about in her own feet and play the game, Dale? Oh, she was a fool—a fool! And she played it in a half bedroom under the blank stare of four cold eyes. Mimi's eyes would follow her as she had met their white plaster upturned ones in the bathroom. Dale bled, with its enamel flaking. Faded carpet, dingy curtains. Dale's own rags on it where neat tenents had put down careless spots. The bureau scarred at the window. The stringy and grey with soot. And she was lay in bed and tried to make faces out of the cracks in the plaster ceiling and the dirty wall paper . . . . What was it that song said?—Something about going out from your own room—walls . . . He knew, the man who wrote that song! He'd suffered it by himself too .....

Dale suddenly slumped on the floor and buried her face in the clothes she was packing.

"Oh, God—please—please . . . please . . . she whispered. And what she was praying for, she did not know.

CHAPTER 39

THE LONE WINTER

The door opened and Brant entered. But he halted and an exclamation escaped him as his eyes swept over the room. That little crumpled heap over there on the floor .....

Swiftly he crossed and lifted Dale to his arms.

"Dale!" Brant's voice was sharp with alarm. "Sweetheart, what's the matter?"

Then the meaning of the half packed suitcase flashed over him and his arms tightened about the girl. Another day came back to Brant—another such scene and a half packed grip ..... For the one time in his life again in the desert shack and found himself gripped by the sense of loneliness. He remembered the mental felt it had been to realize that Dale might leave him. It had startled him out of his selfish abstraction. It had been the beginning of his love for her. Suppose Dale had gone away then. Suppose she went away now . . . . At the thought such a rush of love and fear went over Brant that he could only rock her back and forth in his arms while he murmured indirectly into the silky tangle of her h's.

"Oh, darling, what fools we're both being! Let's forget it! Don't cry so, baby. It's all right. Say it's all right, sweetheart. My little sweetheart . . . . "

And clinging to him, taking comfort from his sheer physical reality, Dale found all her rage and unnerving pride had evaporated. Her bitter reproaches of the minutes before were forgotten, the crushed Cocktail parties and shelf and gouty old millionaires trying to tempt the beauteous maiden with a new car—all seemed now. I'll bet you raised lots of whoopee with your looks."

Dale had been writing a letter to Honey when Grace burst in and now she leaned on the desk, her chin in her hand while she regarded the other girl seriously.

"Not much chance to raise whoopee, Mamie, while trying to raise bread and butter too," Dale said slowly.

Mamie struggled an impatient shoulder. "Oh, don't talk like an Advice to Young Girls column!" she said largely. "I'm more of a woman of the world than you think. I know the stage is Beauty's auction block and rich men vie with each other over the wares." Mamie was very evidently quoting. "Come on, this is way-over-the-head stuff. I won't tell. I've thought of you on the stage myself—"

Dale looked across at Mamie. Thin young arms hugging her knees. Eager, wide open — eyes so startlingly like Brant's — watching under the fringe of bronze bob. And then before the sheer immensity of the task Dale shook her head. How could this girl, coddled in luxury in the viewpoints of those step-children of fortune, ever hope to climb out of the roof? What could Mamie, with her slim, boyish figure, her undeveloped but her junior league dances know of of the heart chilling terror of losing one's job? What could Mamie know of endless rehearsals in draughty halls, of limping home on tired feet in the late hours — home, to some dreary, cheap hotel room?

A little chill went over Dale's heart. These people — what could they know of Brant's life? Dale's head herself wildly. They didn't! She felt suddenly old and tired and time was too short for them to learn it.

The winter passed in a sluggish grey stream. Looking back on this year Dale could remember only a few things marking the passage of time. Christmas meant a warm robe and slippers for Honey. New Year's eve ushering in a large glittering party at an immense hotel where she met a number of people and moment permitted to forget it. It was, Dale thought with a sort of angry despair, as though a thick sheet of ice had frozen over the whole affair. It was there between everything, but the surface was cold and smooth. A slick, treacherous surface on which one could never get an honest grip.

But if Mimi Kendall and Mimi serenely disdained the incident, Mimi Kendall was interested — almost embarrassingly so. Muffled in a wadded silk robe, its front stained with spilt coffee, wearing a pair of disreputable silk mules, she padded into Dale's room one morning to squat on the floor while she fired questions at the other girl.

"Come on, tell me all the real dirt!" Nance said blowing a cloud of cigarette smoke through her nose. "Tell me about your stage days. Cocktail parties and shelf and gouty old millionaires trying to tempt the beauteous maiden with a new car—I know how you'll bet you raised lots of whoopee with your looks."

Dale had been writing a letter to Honey when Nance burst in and now she leaned on the desk, her chin in her hand while she regarded the other girl seriously.

Chronic Fatigue
Tells of exhausted Nerves

In health, rest soon overcomes fatigue. When you become chronically tired there is the instability of the nerves. Memory and power of attention soon weaken when the nervous system is exhausted. It is difficult to concentrate like mind and the daily task becomes a worry and a burden. Sleeplessness, nervousness rule your temper, and you become depressed and discouraged.

Whatever may have been the cause there is a way in which to regain health and that is by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Nerve Food is created to restore the function of the body machinery and ensure the healthful working of the mental and physical organs.

REINDEER HERD PROVIDES FOOD FOR NORTHERN INHABITANTS—The 2,000 reindeer, which were driven across country from Alaska to ranges near the mouth of the Mackenzie river in the Western Canadian Arctic, and which arrived lately last year, constitute all of the meat supply for the Eskimos at home. From the herd, which is owned by the Canadian government, 218 steers were killed last Fall and the meat fed to Eskimo children living in the Shingle Point Anglican and Roman Catholic school. Native patients of two hospitals got some as well. Apprentice-herders, young men and boys, are being trained to look after the herd. Photo shows a section of the herd in the vicinity of Shingle Point.

Susie Balances the Budget

By HAZEL T. CLAFF

"Mummy, daddy's income is a beast," said Sam emphatically.

The monthly battle of the bills was over, and Susie in a state of exhaustion sprawled on the couch with Sammy on the hearth rug.

"Everyone must choose and judge values in money matters," Susie went on. "It teaches discrimination. It trains one in a sense of values, and is good for mental development. It would be good for you."

"Then I won't do it," said Susie stubbornly. "I'm not going to undertake any more things that are good for me, because they just lead to nothing but grief. When I did those setting up exercises I sprained my knee, and it was by that time in bone economics that I met that horrid Mrs. Bonlong who brought typhoid on my charge account and never paid for them."

"Now Sue, don't be a little fathead. You're not likely to sprain your wrist writing down in a book, and if you developed the practical side of your nature more you wouldn't be so likely to be preyed on by your friends."

"I don't like figures," Susie objected.

"This isn't a geometrical theorem, Honey. You can add, can't you?"

"Not long ones," said Susie firmly. "They never come out the same."

The battle of the budget was joined, but in the end Sammy, who was a diplomat as well as an orator, prevailed, for Susie was persuaded to try budgeting one of life's rosiest pastimes.

"It really isn't any trouble at all," said Susie, displaying the neat little leather covered book to her mother. "You just keep track of what you spend."

"But what for?" insisted Mrs. Jarvis. "Why bother?"

"Well," said Susie doubtfully, "Sammy says then you know where your money goes."

"You know where it goes anyway, if you count your change," said Mrs. Jarvis impatiently.

It was with some pride that Susie displayed her book to Sammy at the end of the first month. "Great work, old girl," was his comment as he surveyed the neat rows of added totals with what seemed to Susie lightning speed. "You are really beginning to get results already. Most of the time before your allowance has been gone at the end of the month, and now you have $22.75 left over."

"Oh, but I haven't," objected Susie. "I owe it all and had to borrow $10 from my personal allowance."

Sammy sighed heavily and girded up his loins for the battle of encouragement. He commended statistically that Susie had failed to keep track of all her expenditures and that it was absolutely necessary to do so.

"I'm celebrating," announced Mrs. Jarvis one sunny morning two months later as she dropped in on her daughter. "If you my dear, will shock from the Dome mines and we could do a little shopping, have lunch at Sullock's and go to the matinee."

Susie raised a somewhat tense face from a page of figures. "I don't know if I can, mother. I've got to get that thing that Sammy said off my mind."

"Good heavens," said her mother. "Are you still struggling with that budget?"

"I'm not going to give it up till I get it right," said Susie firmly. "First month I spent far much and made it up out of my own allowance, and the second month I spent $1.50 more than I had to begin with and I owed $1.50 left!"

"Well, my goodness," said her mother, "I'm sure I never expect to do better than that."

"It ought to be even," said Susie sternly. "It's only a matter of addition. I've made a columnar system that allows for 10 per cent for that and it come to $45.99 a month."

"That's a dollar and a half a day, isn't it?" said her mother. "Well, why don't you put your return a day or and a half for each day. That would make that column come out right."

Susie raised rather startled eyes to her mother. "I wonder if it would," she pondered.

"Of course it would," said Mrs. Jarvis impatiently. "And if you figure out what the right amount should be for all the other items and put it down it couldn't help but be right. And that saves you all the bother of trying to remember and keeping track."

Susie excitedly seized a sheet of paper and began copying figures. "Why didn't I think of that," she cried. "Mother, you're a wonder!"

In the first month of a short half hour to copy a new budget with its prescribed figures. "And how much better it looks, too," said her mother with satisfaction, "with the rows all alike."

"What did Sammy have to say about the budget?" asked her mother a few days later.

"Well, to tell the truth, he didn't have hardly anything to say. He just seemed at a loss for words," said Susie. "You know, Mother, I think Sammy just wanted to see if you figure that out for myself. We aren't going to have to help him any more," she went on, "and I'm glad of it, for he's a kind of nuisance. But there's no point, really, in keeping on with a thing once you've mastered it."

REALLY DANGEROUS!

TARZAN THE INVINCIBLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

As Dango leaped for the frowned throat, Tarzan's hand shot forward and seized the beast, but the impact of the heavy body carried him sideways to the ground. Dango struggled to free himself from the death grip of the ape-man, but steel fingers closed upon his throat.

The great brute sank helplessly upon the body of its intended victim. Until death was assured, Tarzan did not relinquish his grasp; but when at last there could be no doubt, he hurled the carcass from him, and sitting up fell quickly to the thongs that secured his ankles.

During the brief battle Nkima had taken refuge among the topmost branches of a lofty tree, where he escaped almost screaming frantically at the battling beasts beneath him. Not until he was quite sure that Dango was dead did he descend.

Warily he approached the body. Then he leaped upon it and struck it vigorously again and again, and then he stood upon it shrieking his defiance at the world with all the assurance and bravado of one who has overcome a dangerous enemy single-handed.

Marmora and District

Marmora, Feb. 15—The annual At Home of Marmora high school was held in the town hall on Wednesday evening with a very large crowd present.

The hall was beautifully and appropriately decorated with valentine motifs which received many favorable comments from the guests. Gaily colored balloons were strung across the room overhead and the windows were covered with large crimson hearts in the centre of which were decorative drawings made by the students of First and Second forms. Festoons of crepe paper and gaily colored paper chains also adorned the walls. A large crimson valentine was the central figure of the elaborate stage decorations which formed an effective background for the orchestra, the downstairs room was also pleasantly decorated and a delightful luncheon was served there to the guests seated at long tables. Music for dancing was supplied by Dejmark's Aces. Many guests were present from Madoc, Stirling, Belleville and Hastings, and a great deal of credit must be given the high school staff and pupils for the success of the most successful Athenae to be held in recent years.

Marmora high school decisively ousted their Stirling high opponents in a game on home ice Tuesday evening when they defeated them 8-0. Marmora outclassed Stirling at every point of the game and scored three goals in the first period. Those successful in denting the nets in the first canto were Leonard, who put in two and Norman O'Neill. The second period followed with the same type of playing, three more being added to Marmora's score. These were put behind Cook by Jack Shannon, Burridge and Reynolds. Reynolds showed some promising talent in this game with his hard and fast shots which were "right on" every time. Marmora built up the score to 8-0 in the final period with goals by Kouri and Clare O'Neill. Despite this outstanding win Marmora has no chance to play in the interscholastic finals.

The lineups:

Stirling: Goal Cook; defence, Tennant and Cronkright; centre, Tulloch; wings, Bailey, Howell, Allen and Mrs. N. A. Kilpatrick and daughter Irene, spent Sunday in Bannockburn.

Marmora: Goal Gray; defence, C. O'Neill, N. O'Neill; centre Burridge; wings T. Shannon and Kouri. Alternates, Leonard, Reynolds, J. Shannon and Loveless.

The final game of the Big 5 euchre tournament was held in the White Hall, Tuesday evening with fifteen tables enjoyed. The weekly prizes were secured by Mrs. M. McCarver and Mrs. G. Kerr.

Refreshments were served by Circle 3 of St. Paul's Ladies' Guild.

A close check up of points obtained by the highest rating players will take place before the winner of the tournament will be announced. Meanwhile weekly euchre parties will be held until Lent.

ADOPT ESTIMATES ON ALL BUILDINGS

Substitute Payments on American Wheat Are Criticized

Ottawa, Feb. 13 (CP)—In the first week of business sittings the House of Commons made an early start each day and kept regular hours of work, voting money in run the various departments in the most liberal year, after voting $1,780,000 for public buildings throughout the afternoon it took a night off and resumed early.

On Monday private members got their first chance to present resolutions and bills embodying the policy they would like to have adopted.

Routine votes for public buildings in all provinces except Alberta were adopted yesterday and Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, Minister of Public Works, encountered little difficulty in getting the estimates approved.

A new departure in presentation of estimates was made by the government this year. Finance Minister Dunning told the House. The main estimates, he said, would not contain only the votes of money necessary to carry on ordinary business of the country. Later in the session "emergency supplementary estimates" will be presented. They will provide for all expenditures not included in the railway deficits and relief grants. They will take the place of the moneys appropriated by Order-in-Council under the so-called "Bennett-Steeves" legislation of the previous government.

The only serious criticism directed at estimates yesterday related to the practice of paying for buildings in annual instalments, parliamentary approval. The estimates contained several votes for such instalment payments.

MAY RETALIATE WITH BOMBINGS

Reported 30,000 Italians Surrounded by Ethiopians

(By Albert W. Wilson)
(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Addis Ababa, Feb. 13.—(AP)—Ethiopian forces encircling 30,000 Italians today the Italians might retaliate with a bombing of Addis Ababa for the recent Timkoben battle in the Italian Adarberhaidie. No panic was observed.

Hallo was also attacked, two children being killed. Martha Rogers, Irish Red Cross representative, who said it was "absolutely certain" 24,000 Italians had been surrounded was summoned to Imperial palace and asked to give the government official further details of the battle near Abbi Addi.

Tonight, the first white man to return here from the northern fight front, Rogers obtained his information first hand from Ras Mulugheta, Ethiopian War Minister, Ras Kassa and Ras Kasa, the three principal Ethiopian leaders in the north.

N. WESTERN STATES FEEL WINTER'S STING—With the intense cold blanketing the major portion of the United States, Iowa and the Dakotas have been the most seriously affected. Householders were unable to buy coal for two weeks, and, in consequence, small quantities of groceries, meat, and milk. Main highways were gradually being opened after being blocked for days by huge drifts of snow. Farmers in Iowa and the Dakotas were forced to burn corncobs and stalks to keep warm in houses literally banked to the rooftops with snow.

RETRIAL SOUGHT FOR O'DONNELL

Led from Corridor

Then, at a sign from the Deputy Sheriff, Harry O'Donnell was led from the court room, preceded and followed by a guard.

Dr. E. Jay Hamilton, whose evidence regarding blue hairs, blood and other matter helped convict O'Donnell, leaned over and whispered to Crown Counsel Arthur Slaght, did O'Donnell say? Did he say he was not guilty?" This was when O'Donnell remarked, "Am I to be ill?"

The reporter repeated the remark and Dr. Erb smiled faintly.

Immediate Appeal

After sentence had been passed Frank Regan, chief defence counsel announced that immediate appeal would be launched.

"The fight has just started," the grey-haired K.C. said. "I say just as before the trial—my client is innocent."

Mr. Regan declared his appeal would be based on a number of grounds including "improper rejection and admittance of evidence." Mr. Regan stated afterward that one of the points on which appeal application would be based was upon the introduction by the Crown into evidence of Chief Detective Mullins' unconcerning the finding of a wrench at the murder scene.

The defence counsel maintained the verdict was "against the evidence the weight of the evidence and against the law."

When the jurors were dismissed with a word of thanks for their services they retired to a room adjacent to the court and picked up their suitcases.

Justice Fisher, as he left the court room, shook hands with the guards who had watched over the jury in a mysterious, silent, six-storey dash and night.

Refuse to Shake Hands

Only three jurymen were left at the doorway of the court room when the last juror attempted to leave. The jurors came up to the detectives in turn and offered to shake hands with him.

"It's a fine gentlemen," said Mr. Regan, "I cannot do so."

O'Donnell's lawyer then passed into the jury room, accepting the proffered hands.

The final scene of the murder trial which may go down in Canadian criminal annals as the "Elderberry Corner" case was dramatic in the extreme.

Justice Jeffrey concluded his charge to the jury at 1 p.m., and the jurors filed out to consider their verdict.

More than sixty spectators, including a number of women, clung to their seats. They went without lunch, and continued in low whispers.

Out Almost Three Hours

There was only one topic of conversation—the jury's verdict.

As the clock in the court room snipped off the minutes like a large pair of tin shears, the spectators looked uneasily at each new arrival.

Finally at five minutes to four the appearance of a number of deputies at the rear heralded the approach of the jury.

They had been out 2 hours and 55 minutes when they returned to their customary seats in the jury box.

As each juror took his place he glanced straight before him. None looked about the court room, but appeared to be suffering under the strain induced by the verdict they were about to bring in.

Shortly, O'Donnell was led into the court room, walking jauntily as has been his custom. His pipe was still was uncreased, and the lips of his dapper moustache were freshly shaven.

Heavy stains of nicotine on the fingers of his right hand were the only indication that during his lonely hours in his solitary cell he had worried over the outcome of the trial.

As he took his seat in the prisoner's box an assistant of Mr. Regan crossed over, filled a glass table and conversed in low tones with O'Donnell. Presumably he told the prisoner what the decisions should be when the verdicts was given.

The names of the jury were then read and found correct.

In the dock the Registrar then asked: "Gentlemen of the jury, do you find the prisoner guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty! Guilty! Guilty!—"

Scarcely had the question been asked, when a juror, in the thin wail of the voice of a child, put his hands on the ceiling and clipped out, "Guilty!"

Every eyes in the court turned to the prisoner.

Only by a faint flicker of an eyebrow did O'Donnell betray emotion. His head, slightly bowed, remained listless in his lap, and his eyes fixed intently on the floor in advance at the high-roofed ceiling.

Court procedure continued. Mr. Regan, K.C., asked that sentence was required to stand and repeat the "Guilty."

As the constant repetition of the dreaded word struck through the prisoner's mind, Mr. Regan walked over to the prisoner and half put his arm around the slender shoulders. It appeared to be shielding him as he listened to the fatal word.

When the jury call had been completed, Mr. Justice Jeffrey left the Deputy Sheriff, Deputy Clerk Regan and J. O. McNiece, Crown Prosecutor.

The deputy guards opened the prisoner's box and escorted him downstairs, but were prevented from removing the condemned man by the police.

Condemned Man Leaves

As the court room filled in advance for the Justice's return, the jurors stared intently at the man who had condemned to die. And all the majority of the spectators and members rules the Attorney-General, O'Donnell showed no indication of the strain of the long searching scrutiny and sat quietly, while others discussed the date on which he must hang.

Finally, as if realizing the strain under which the jurors laboured, the Deputy Sheriff motioned to the guards to lead O'Donnell from the court room.

The entire court room turned to follow the tall, ...

The jury followed, but quickly returned when Mr. Regan and Mr. McNiece re-entered the court room at 4.13.

The prisoner was then returned and the room wailed in hushed expectation. It was a contrast between the ranger and the slater of the young murderer out to protest his grasting rights.

With its cattle stampedes, broncho busting scenes, and its many exciting thrills of the bitter duel between law and outlaws, "Drift Fence" is rich in exciting entertainment.

Zane Grey Western.

Stirring drama, such as one has come to expect of a Zane Grey story, is presented in "Drift Fence," the new Paramount action picture announced as the second feature attraction on the same program. It unfolds a colorful story of the days when cattle ranches ruled the American cattlelands, and refused to let big ranchers enclose their herds within fences.

And "Drift Fence" is one of the most engrossing stories that has come from the pen of this wizard of western life. Adventure, romance and humor are skillfully blended in this danger-bristling melodrama.

STATE OF ALARM IS PROCLAIMED IN SPAIN

Leftists Gain Victory Over Fascist Forces In Sunday's Election

State of Alarm Fixed For Period of Eight Days

SIEGE IN MADRID

Demonstrators Call For Amnesty to Political Prisoners

Madrid, Feb. 17 (CP)—One civilian was killed and two guards and several civilians were severely wounded in a fierce post-election riot today which resulted in proclamation by the government of a state of alarm throughout Spain.

At the same time it was reported Leftists, spurred by hope of victory at the polls, had set up a revolutionary committee at the general post office and were about to launch a decisive move to take over the government.

Indications the riotous Leftist celebration of victory in the election might be ill-founded came here when Premier Valladares announced latest returns give the Parazir front of Jose Maria Gil Robles 205 seats in the Cortes to 265 for the people's front. The Centrist group acquired 14. There are 743 seats in the Cortes.

Premier Casagallas, lifted for the election, immediately re-established.

The state of alarm was fixed for an eight-day period.

Clamp Down Siege.

The government clamped down a state of siege on Madrid as gunplay and rioting followed a revelation of Leftist "people's front" victory at the polls over the Fascist forces of Jose Maria Gil Robles.

Several persons were wounded when shots were exchanged between guards and rioters as thousands of Leftists demonstrated in the streets. Def fist demanding immediate amnesty for Leftist political prisoners.

The disorder came to a head after a state of alarm and remained in force.

Soons Outside Prison.

The cabinet establishing a state of siege in Madrid decided to extend a state of alarm throughout the republic, thus empowering the military governors to take swift action against any disorders.

Demonstrators massed outside the prison of Celas, crying for "amnesty, amnesty" for political prisoners.

Hundreds joined in singing the "International" and a related song of riots in the Red salute. Workers in the building trades dropped their tools to join in the demonstrations, jubilant over the election success.

Returns announced by Premier Valladares indicated the anti-Revolutionary bloc led by José Calvo Sotelo Robles, had made a slight gain over the Leftists securing 302 seats to the 300 secured by the people's front. The centre group secured 18 seats.

FIGHTING FORCES SEEK MONEY AID

$39,055,000 Appropriation Tabled in English Parliament

(By Burdette Johns)
(Copyright, 1936, By the Associated Press)

London, Feb. 17 (AP)—Great Britain's fighting forces asked the House of Commons today for an additional appropriation for this year of $11,109 (about $39,055,000), most of which would be expended "upon special measures taken in connection with the Italo-Ethiopian dispute."

Four supplementary estimates were issued asking $4,850,000 (about $34,250,000) for the navy, £1,611,000 (about $8,055,000) for the army and £100 (about $500) for the Royal air defence academy.

The sums requested, which must be approved by the House of Commons, would be in addition to the appropriations for the fighting services provided by last spring's budget.

The navy estimate was explained as "due to the 3,500 additional personnel required" in addition to "special measures" in connection with Ethiopian conflict.

The issuance of the supplementary estimates gave the first inkling of the amount of money to be spent by belligerents in naval and aerial defenses in the Mediterranean and canal zones and the definite number of extra men involved in naval moves since the height of Anglo-Italian tension last summer.

Viscount Monsell, first Lord of the Admiralty, in a memorandum explained, authorization also was sought for construction of seven new destroyers, six motor torpedo boats and 20 trawlers.

BRITISH FIRM ON SANCTIONS

Mind Has Not Been Changed, Mussolini is Told

London, Feb. 17 (CP)—Great Britain's firm attitude on sanctions in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute she has not changed, it was learned tonight.

Following the adoption of the resolution of mutual support against Italian aggression by the co-ordinating committee of the League of Nations, Britain informed the governments of France, Spain, Turkey, Greece, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia to see whether under paragraph three, article sixteen of the covenant, they were willing to assist Britain in the event of her being attacked if obliged to "full" the application of sanctions.

All these governments, Britain then submitted a memorandum to all members of the coordinating committee of the League and also to Italy outlining the steps she had taken.

Italy's Protest.

Italy replied by sending a note of protest to Britain and all members of the coordinating committee.

It was officially announced today that Italy's reply to Britain's Feb. 14 British note in these terms: "On Jan. 24 Sir Samuel Hoare, British Foreign Secretary, made a speech at Geneva in which he spoke as to communicate to the principal secretary of state for foreign affairs a note setting forth the views of the Italian government on the memorandum forwarded to the president of the co-ordination committee on Jan. 22 on the subject of paragraph three, article sixteen of the covenant. In accordance with the wish of the communication Anthony Eden (British Foreign Secretary) has the honor to inform His Excellency that the position of His Majesty's government remains as set forth in the memorandum in question and that they do not feel any useful purpose would be served in prolonging the correspondence on the subject."

Similar notes were understood to have been forwarded to Premier Mussolini by France, Spain, Turkey, Rumania, Spain and Czechoslovakia.

BRUNO PERSISTS IN HIS DENIAL

Hauptmann May Be Resentenced Tuesday For Crime

Trenton, N.J., Feb. 17 (AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, persisting in his claim of innocence in the baby kidnap-slaying, may be re-sentenced today or tomorrow to die for the crime.

The convicted man underwent a routine examination by psychiatrists last night by Samuel S. Leibowitz, New York attorney who recently won for Hauptmann's defense staff.

"We are making progress," Leibowitz said, as he left the conference. Dr. Max Hagemann, Hall co-ed in the New Jersey State prison.

Leibowitz refused to explain what progress he referred to but it was learned afterward Hauptmann had not changed his story.

After the conference, Leibowitz said he would confer with Governor Harold G. Hoffman, whose 30-day reprieve of Hauptmann's first death sentence expires Saturday at midnight.

Subsequently the Governor reiterated that he would not grant the condemned man another reprieve unless Attorney General David A. Wilentz agreed he was necessary.

Governor Hoffman himself said in a brief statement after his three hour and a half hour talk with the lawyer had subjected him to "perhaps the hardest questioning" he has faced so far.

Cod Liver Oil Offered to Medicine In Paste Form to Heal Wounds

Chicago, Feb. 17.—(CP)—Cod liver oil, long a potent defense against disease, was offered to medicine in a new form today—a paste which heals wounds on the body's surface.

The revolutionary combination came from two Soviet physicians, Dr. V. I. Loss and Dr. I. G. Kochergin of Gorkin, Russia.

Vitamin A and D, the source of the oil's power in building resistance when administered internally as a liquid tonic, are retained, they believe, when applied externally in paste form, the Russians announced.

Successful use of the salve in 383 cases of the following types was proclaimed in a report received by the American Association for the Advancement of Science and published in the journal Novyy Khirurgicheskiy Arkhiv.

Fresh superficial wounds. Older wounds which have started to fester. Chronic ulcers. Burns. Frostbites in the extremities. Healing on open stumps of arms and legs after amputations.

The salve was made with 100 cubic centimeters of cod liver oil, 100 grams of potatoflour, 1.5 cubic centimeters of a preparation containing vitamins A and D and 10 cubic centimeters of Japanese wax.

The Russians said vitamin D in oil stimulated the growth of granulation—part of the process of healing—and vitamin A, taking part in fat, when applied externally in paste form, the Russians announced.

The paste also slowed down the activity of pus producing bacteria, the Soviet experimenters found. They considered it probable injurious effects of ultra violet rays and of vitamins due either to an interrupted supply or an increased demand.

FIREMAN'S BODY IS STILL SOUGHT

Traffic on Main Line Out of Capreol is Again Continued

Capreol, Ont., Feb. 17 — (CP) — Traffic over the Canadian National Railways line at Capreol resumed regular runs today while work parties continued a search for the body of Fireman J. F. Collins of Capreol, who disappeared when two freight trains collided head-on Saturday.

Workers late last night cut through the telescoped engines and cleared the wreck of a total of wrecked box cars and a coal tender. Eight freight trains had on the line since early Saturday, moved through and passenger cars were again provided from the Canadian Pacific Railway Lines.

Railway officials did not disclose the cause of the collision that brought injuries to five members of the train crews, but it was learned recovering but Engineer Wes Clarke was found to have four broken ribs instead of two as at first reported.

The trains, No. 403 moving west and No. 404 eastbound, were but one mile length apart when Engineers Clarke and D. Martin sighted each other. Both trains were moving slowly when they crashed on a sharp curve.

PROVINCE BOND SALE QUERIED

Question is Placed on Paper By Former Premier

Toronto, Feb. 17 (CP)—The "over-the-counter" sale of bonds carried out by the Ontario Government last July after investment dealers failed to tender on the issue is the subject of questions placed on the Legislature order paper by Opposition leader George S. Henry.

Mr. Henry wants a return showing the names of all purchasers of the $20,000,000 issue of that date and none appeared. Premier Hepburn charged financial interests were refraining from participation in the issue.

The Premier announced extension of the Provincial Savings Bank throughout the province and said the bonds would be marketed thru that channel.

Arthur Ellis, Conservative member for Dufferin-Simcoe, has a series of questions about sale of bonds since the present government took office. He asks the amount of each issue sold, the rate of interest, the price and to whom these bonds were sold. Mr. Ellis wants to know if tenders were called for in all cases, where any tenders were called and no bids were made.

Mr. Ellis also asks for a return showing by tender, why were tenders not called for?

DR. EMMA CONNOR MOURNED BY ALL

Practised in City For 32 Years And Well Known

"We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breath; In feelings, not in figures on the dial."

Very aptly, indeed, do the above lines apply to Dr. Emma Connor, who passed away at her late residence, 194 Dundas street, after a long illness of eight days' duration, on Saturday evening at 6.30 o'clock. Dr. Connor's life was indeed filled to the full with deeds of others; in noble deeds, kindly thoughts and quiet feelings she minimized her own sufferings and ministered to the needs of others in this city and district for many years. Regardful of herself and her own comfort she ignored the figure 4 and lived out at any hour, early or late, in fine or stormy weather, she gladly responded to the many calls that came to her for help and consciously to relieve pain and suffering. Such these were when ill. Dr. Connor was a clever and skilful physician and a good woman; a gentlewoman in the truest, truthful traits of character, deep sympathy for the suffering and sorrowful; in the sick room she was more than the physician, she was a friend and her death has brought sincere sorrow and deep feelings of sympathy to the many residents of Belleville and throughout the entire district.

Dr. Emma Connor stood high in the estimation of her fellow practitioners and at the Belleville General Hospital she was affectionately regarded by the nursing staff and esteemed by the hospital officials. She was a member of the staff of the Belleville General Hospital during the years 1904-1907 and was honored in distant places, will learn of her death with much regret.

The Late Dr. Connor

The late Dr. Emma Connor was born in Thurlow Township, in the township, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. William Connor. In early life she attended the schools at Marsh Hill and was a pupil of the late Miss Jane Ann Bleecker Parker, later Sir Gilbert Parker, Bart., the famous author. On graduating from the Belleville High School she became a teacher in the school at Marsh Hill and after teaching for some time she entered the Medical College in connection with the University of Toronto, in August 1904, about thirty-two years ago. Dr. Connor returned to Belleville and took over the practice of Dr. Elizabeth Bunnell, who was residing at Ottawa. Dr. Connor's practice grew rapidly and for many years after was in the residence on Dundas street now occupied by the Bell Telephone Company's building on Pinnacle street.

In religion Dr. Connor was a member of the Bridge Street Methodist Church and her support was freely given to the work of the church and to all worthy causes.

Surviving to mourn her loss are one brother, Mr. Walter Connor, Belleville; one brother, Mr. John Connor, who resides on the old homestead in the 6th Concession of Thurlow; two sisters, Mrs. Jane Mr. William Connor; Belleville; two sons, Miss Grace Connor and Miss Dorcas Connor, Belleville.

Dr. Emma Connor's long life of outstanding service in her profession has closed, but for many years to come memory of her will be treasured by those who knew her and enjoyed her friendship.

"How far that little candle throws its rays;
Now the battle day is past;
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.
Lends the wayfarer at last.
Lends to the Light that gladdens keeping
Leave we now Thy servant sleeping."

Marmora, Feb. 17 (Special)—Following an illness of five weeks Baldwin Chester Hubbell passed peacefully away at his home here on Wednesday last, Feb. 12th.

Hubbell who has lived here since 1876 was born in the old Methodist parsonage, Stirling, on September 19th, 1853, the son of the late Reverend Hudson Hubbell and Jane Twining. Canon Greene, Rev. Caldwell, Anglican minister from Stirling conducted services at that time, the first Methodist minister being Rev. Mr. Hall.

In 1884, the late Mr. Hubbell attended the Commercial College at Belleville and after finishing his diploma resumed his position as clerk in Marmora with Hubbell, pioneer merchants of the time. He also served as a member of the town council for a number of years and down 1930 was a close contestant for the Mayoralty. On his first visit to England, predecessing him' sixteen years, he met Miss Mary Jane Cameron, his only surviving relative, who with the late Mr. Hubbell enjoyed recounting the events of Marmora fifty years ago. Miss Mary Cameron is a resident of Marmora and has been employed for many years as a dressmaker. Mr. Hubbell was a member of the Masonic Lodge, Marmora, and was a familiar figure on the streets of Marmora, being a regular visitor to the village daily and young. Hardiness Acquired in Years of Trapping Helps Lost Man in North Bush

SLOWLY RECOVERING

Had Little to Eat And Only a Hatchet Carried

Port Loring, Ont., Feb. 17 (CP)—The hardiness John M. Bennett acquired in years of trapping through Northern Ontario's wild bush country stood him in good stead when he lost his way wandering nine days in the north waster with scant food and shelter.

The 75-year-old trapper was found yesterday by search parties in an abandoned cabin by Island Lake and was brought to Port Loring where he suffered from exposure and severe frost bite. For five days the old man wandered in the lonely bush land around Port Loring between the Ferguson Highway and Georgian Bay, 40 miles south of North Bay.

He stumbled into the unheated shack last Sunday and stayed there until search parties found him. With temperatures below zero throughout the period, the cabin had been felt Bennett would not be found alive.

Word that the aged man was missing was not received until Feb. 14 when his partner, Henry Graham, came to Port Loring and organized the first search party. Since then searchers scoured the sparsely-settled country, following Bennett's snowshoe tracks over much of the district.

Bennett left Port Loring on the 15-mile journey to his cabin with only his hatchet, a bag of cash, meal, two cans of condensed milk and a small lunch.

Tracks in the snow led the searchers to believe the trapper had crossed his own tracks and it was once within 200 yards of safety in the camp of Fred Weller.

C.G.I.T. GROUPS HOLD SERVICES

Miss Tyhurst and Miss Lewis Address Congregations in City

Closing the observance of C. G. I. T. week, an inspiring service was conducted in the Bridge Street United Church on Sunday evening by members of the Girls' Auxiliary of John Wesley United Church, when the address of the evening was given by Miss Elmine Tyhurst, secretary of the Girls' Work Board of the Religious Education Council of C.G.I.T. colors and crests were used to decorate the church. The girls in their short uniforms were seated in a body at the front of the church.

Miss Harriet Cronk and Miss Phyllis Archibald were in charge of the worship service which they conducted in a reverent manner. Special hymns were sung by the choir which is under the direction of Miss Leona Sisco. The offering was received by Misses Shirley McIntosh, Marjorie Anderson, Dorothy Cronk and Jane Crosby.

During the service Rev. Robert Hall announced to the congregation the sad news of the death of Dr. Emma Conger Bowen, who is a paid-heartist tribute. Belleville Conservatory of Music, not only the loss of an expert physician but a dear, devoted friend.

Purpose of Life

Emphasizing the slogan adopted by the C.G.I.T. this year, "On the Highway to Better Living," Tyhurst showed that under sympathetic and wise leadership the girls are trained in training develops into the organization's ideal "the girl God would have her be." The purpose of this anticipation that life is going to be full of joy and the desire to interpret joy differently as she progresses. Play it means recreation alone, then moderation in recreation, then the even greater joy of making play for others. Work is the activity of mind necessary in a C.G.I.T. group. Worship is reaching and seeking, for those who find God will find it to grow. Thus if one object of C. G. I. T. is to find joy, another is the spirit of the quest.

Leadership

The influence of this experienced leader, and the co-operation of the congregation was heeded for the success of the C.G.I.T. Miss Tyhurst spoke of the opportunities for leadership which the girls at John Street United offer.

Coming from the outside, I cast you in all carelessness, she said, but on looking you over see the training given the C.G.I.T. in this church, and understand more clearly to the girl out of experience and poise by the way that has proved satisfactory. The C.G.I.T. seeks to give, in the words of Jesus, "Life in abundance" to put into practice the principles to which the members subscribe. The ideal of living for others is means a complete devotion, expanding and developing the mind, body and the ability of facing the issues of life, prepared to everyone sooner or later. The ideal is expressed in the words of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, "Let thy God, with all thy heart, all thy thought, all thy strength." The second half of the command, the golden rule, "Love thy neighbor as thyself" is lesson that is borne out in the lives of those who seek to perfect themselves in their every day relationships.

As the Empire mourned the death of its late king, it was not a royal crown and sceptre of a Christian spirit, such a spirit as is needed today, and the spirit which has led to the true development of the Canadian girl in training.

Bethesy Hives, Dalsy Church

The annual C.G.I.T. service was held in Bethesy Church yesterday morning at Holloway Street United Church and was in charge of Miss Evelyn Anderson. Miss Jean Lowery read the Psalm and Miss Madeline Rose the Scripture lesson. The offering was taken by Misses June Clark, Phyllis Twiddy, Eva Hogle and Florence Sill.

Miss Elmine Tyhurst, Toronto, secretary of the Girls' Work Board was guest speaker and brought challenging message to the leaders and girls.

Bridge Street United Church

C.G.I.T. group members were in charge of the service at Bridge Street United Church on Sunday evening, when Miss Nellie Lewis of Toronto, secretary of the Ontario Religious Education Council, addressed the members of the group and the congregation. She likened life to a highway and indicated the essentials required for the achievement of success in living.

Miss Norma Sidley read the Scripture lesson and Miss Price offered prayer and introduced the chorus of C.G.I.T. members singing the C.G.I.T. hymn. Miss Beatrice Moore accompanied on the piano. Six girls received the pledge, Helen Wotten, Winnifred Sandy, Jean Hamilton, Dorothy Moore, Jean Thompson, and Phyllis Lewis.

BOY VICTIMIZES ELDERLY WOMAN

Buys Bread For 25c And Charges Woman 60c

Jesse Salisbury, 17 year old Madoc sawmill youth, pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining money under false pretences when he appeared before Magistrate Masson in police court today. Local police court Salisbury was lectured at length by His Worship and given a one year's suspended sentence with further instructions, that he was to report to Mr. Masson's home, assist his father on the farm and refrain from entering the city of Belleville for the entire period of his suspended sentence.

Salisbury was taken into custody after an investigation by Plain-clothes Officer Fred Dolan on Saturday relative to his practicing a confidence game in the city. On Saturday Fred Ward, St. Paul St. grocer, reported to the police, that an unknown youth had called to procure a quantity of cigarettes and candy and after charging the bill to elderly John St. resident, whose sole income is her old age pension. Later Officer Dolan questioned Salisbury on Dundas St. and after questioning the youth placed him under arrest. When he appeared at the police station Salisbury is alleged to have approached Ward and signed a statement in which he stated he had made the confidence of the elderly lady and had on different occasions purchased candy and cigarettes and bread in the same—to her account. He also revealed a plan whereby he would call the lady for 25c and charging her 60c for the same article.

Mr. Ward, when the authorities fix, would not allow the old lady to be victimized in such a manner, especially assume the loss of previously purchased articles which were procured by Salisbury. His Worship severely reprimanded the accused youth and told Salisbury in every day, after Chief Kidd had disclosed the facts in the case that the property had assured the authorities they had tried in vain to keep their son on the straight and narrow path of righteousness, but without success.

Chief Kidd stated he was given two months in the common jail after pleading guilty to a charge of obtaining money under false pretences from Angus, of this city, asked for a week's time in which to procure the necessary fine after he had pleaded guilty to the illegal possession of beer. It was disclosed by police, that the beer found in Argue's possession was the same beer purchased from Moon.

SECOND TESTS FOR NEGATIVES WILL BE GIVEN

Ten Per Cent of Negative Reactors Will Usually Show Positive

First tests in the tuberculosis survey at the Belleville Collegiate Institute under the direction of Dr. G. G. Brearley of the Ontario Department of Health showed 10 per cent reacted positively. It is these persons who have the challenges whose reaction on the negative undergo a second test as it is usual to find this additional ten per cent with a positive reaction to this test. The physician in charge wishes to impress on parents the importance of having the pupils complete the test after a negative reaction is indicated. This will be given tomorrow and Wednesday. Those who show a positive reaction to the second test will need no further treatment. The X-ray will be taken at the Collegiate Institute.

T.V.A. MAY SELL SURPLUS POWER

Court Holds Disposition Vested in Congress Not Courts

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP)—The United States government won another victory in the Supreme Court today when justices by eight to one held the T.V.A. could dispose of surplus power manufactured at the Wilson Dam at Muscle Shoals.

The Justices held federal disposition of power was a question for Congress to answer, not the courts.

The court upheld the right of the government to dispose of all surplus power made at dams intended for private navigation and all national defenses.

The government owned the property, said Hughes, and there was nothing in the constitution to limit the government's disposition of the power.

The general purposes of T.V.A., it was decided, present no "justifiable question."

"The Tennessee River is a navigable stream," said Hughes, developing the thesis that the government proposed powers over navigation in the interest of commerce.

"In its present condition the river is not adequate for commercial navigation."

The only thing involved in the present case, he said, was validity of a contract for sale of transmission lines by the Alabama Power Company to T.V.A.

He dismissed at the start the contention those suing had no right to do so because they were preferred stockholders of the Alabama Company. Justice Brandeis had by implication questioned their right.

"A court of equity should not shut its door against such actions," he said.

Justices Brandeis, Cardozo, Roberts and Stone concurred in a concurring opinion saying the case should have been dismissed.

Some 36 resolutions by private members are on the order paper, ranging over many aspects of the social and economic status of the people. First to be called will be that of "J. S. Woodsworth (Winnipeg, Centre), concerning a proposal to establish a housing and slum-clearance programme.

Other resolutions deal with retiring allowances for aged workers, freight rates on grain, citizenship rights for aliens, nationalization of banks, nationalization of all commercial and industrial organizations, debt and interest reduction, maintenance of the unemployed, peace efforts and pensions for the blind.

Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays are given over to private members during the first four weeks of the session, with the remainder one hour Tuesday and Friday evenings in their only sections of opportunity to advance resolutions.

When a private member introduces a resolution and the member sponsoring it is not ready to proceed when his turn goes to bottom of the list and the next in order is considered.

Banquet to Oppose Pact

Consideration of government measures will continue tomorrow and it is reported Prime Minister Mackenzie King will then move for an resolution for approval of the Canada-United States trade agreement. Opposition leader Bennett has already given notice that he will move that the agreement is "disastrous" to the best interests of the people of Canada.

If Mr. Church is not ready to proceed with his resolution the next in order is that of A. A. Heaps (G.L.P., Winnipeg North), for "adequate, adequate retiring allowance" for all persons, 60 or more years of age.

Government legislation expected to make its appearance soon includes the bill to re-establish a national commission to deal with unemployed and relief matters; bill to amend the Bank of Canada Act on ownership of that institution may be transferred from the people to banks and bills to effect amalgamation of civil service departments and appointment of parliamentary under-secretaries.

AT THE BELLE

"Splendor"

Grade A Entertainment "Two In The Dark" Thrilling

It's just like smart, sparkling screen drama (and who doesn't) Samuel Goldwyn's "Splendor" which brings fascinating Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea to the Belle Theatre, tomorrow and Wednesday, will give you a grand evening's entertainment.

Written by Rachael Crothers, "Splendor" tells the story about New York's Fifth Avenue—the pretense, the struggle to keep up a front.

Miriam Hopkins is cast as a pretty southern girl who marries the son of the crumbling Lorimore family, whose sole remaining assets are their name and their Fifth Avenue mansion. How the girl is manoeuvred by her selfish mother-in-law into an affair with a wealthy and influential man in order to secure money for the family exchequer is ably told in deft, telling strokes. How the husband and young friend is finally awakened to the truth, however, and the story ends in a happy manner.

Miriam is more beautiful and appealing than ever as Hilda and Joel McCrea is splendid as the husband. Helen Westley is grand as Mrs. Lorimore and Billie Burke, Cavanaugh is surely attractive as the mother-in-law.

Billie Burke, David Niven, Goldwyn's new "discovery," tallahassee and Cavanaugh in supporting roles also shine.

"Two in the Dark" Thrilling

The clairvoyant's wife and Christine, who has become a sort of "psychic battery" to Maximus, become embroiled over the affections of this new wonder of the world. In a sensational courtroom scene Maximus is brought to the bar of justice and his power or clairvoyancy placed on trial. The denouement of the story is a brilliant and unexpected solution of this strange situation.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Clairvoyant"

Fast, Furious and Fascinating

The screen of the Capitol Theatre this Monday and Tuesday displays one of the most thrilling and entertaining films ever shown in this city. The title of this outstanding photoplay is "The Clairvoyant." Co-starring in this exciting and melodramatic shocker are Claude Rains and Fay Wray, two competent screen stars who are noted for their excellent work in other similar movie motion pictures.

In "The Clairvoyant," Rains appears as the great Maximus, a vaudeville mind-reader touring the English provinces with his wife, Rene, played very effectively by Fay Wray. Under the influence of Christine, (Jane Baxter) who is the beautiful daughter of an influential newspaper publisher, Maximus is suddenly seized with the power of true clairvoyance.

A series of thrilling and uncanny episodes follows. Maximus correctly foretells a railway accident and becomes the hero of London when he picks the winner of the Derby.

HEALTH and PSYCHOLOGY

Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Lead-poisoning not as uncommon a condition as one might suppose is particularly prevalent among those who handle lead in their work, painters, plumbers and glaziers.

Lead-poisoning, also known as plumbism, sometimes results from drinking water which has been stored in lead-lined cisterns or which has passed through lead pipes. Cider and wine which contain acids may become poisonous through contact with lead containers.

Lead-poisoning has even been caused by the handling of hair dyes, thread and fine teeth. Cosmetics containing lead may cause the disease.

Children do not seem to be affected by lead as readily as do adults, and wound seems more susceptible than men. The lead enters the system through the lungs, through the digestive tract or through the skin by way of the mouth.

Small quantities of lead may occur in the body in health. In the case of poisoning, the lead is found in the urine, blood, saliva, etc. In this disease are, first of all, an anemia which sometimes occurs. The red blood corpuscles may be reduced to fifty per cent, and their structure changed. Sometimes especially in cases of long-standing poisoning there are abdominal cramp-like pains.

The rather typical lead colic comes in spasms and seems to involves the entire abdomen. Vomiting may accompany the attacks, also diarrhea. There are cases where colic and digestive disturbances have been going on for years without the patient suspecting the true nature of his trouble.

Occasionally acute cases of poisoning, there are convulsions which resemble those of epilepsy. There may also be coma and delirium.

The characteristic of lead-poisoning is the well-known "blue line" on the gums This sign, however, isn't invariably present in all cases of plumbism and workers in lead who do not have it should not consider themselves necessarily immune.

There are really two lines to be seen. One is between the gums and the teeth; along the edges of the teeth but not in the gums proper. It is somewhat on top of the gums, and can be removed by cleaning the teeth and rinsing the mouth with water or other liquid. The other line is really in the gum itself showing at the margin . This is the true blue line. It is formed by the absorption of lead and its conversion into a black sulphide, hence the bluish blackness of the blue line.

The true blue line may appear a few days after exposure to lead but may disappear in a few weeks or it may remain for a long time, often months.

Paralysis of the arms or legs, or both, may also result. Hardening of the arteries is a frequent sign in lead workers.

MUNCHAUSEN

Baron Munchausen was born two hundred and sixteen years ago. And his stories live yet. His home in Hanover, Germany, has been bought as the mayor's office, one room is to be converted into a museum of Munchausen relics and souvenirs. The anniversary is to be celebrated this year.

Munchausen is credited with being the world's greatest 'liar'. He is called Sir John Falstaff's younger brother. Those who know their literature and theatre know that Falstaff is the greatest comic creation in English and possibly in world literature, his only rival being Panurge, in the romance of Gargantua and Panagruel. The character Falstaff was based on a real man, Sir John Fastolfe, who was metamorphosed by Shakespeare into the marvellous creation—more real than the man who walks the streets today. The real Fastolfe was an honorable man though it was said he retreated in battle. That hint in the chroniclers was seized upon by the playright who makes Falstaff, run only when it pays with the immortal phrase "Discretion is the better part of valor". Falstaff is the Middle Age hulk of a man who drinks heavily, and becomes the head of the company of rascals in Prince Henry, the son of Henry Fourth, King of England, who was to become the conquering hero of Henry Fifth.

But Munchausen is a real figure. He created a blarney type of tall story. He was a cavalry officer who fought with distinction on the fields of Europe, but he feigned the counts of his own prowess with exaggerations. But he was no coward. While he probably to many does not possess the lifelikeness of the man who was the fiction of a poet's brain and life experience, Sir John Falstaff, Munchausen could be parted with, only with a loss to world humor.

Munchausen attracted to himself the great whoppers of stories of all the ages. So it is no wonder that legend has grown up about him and many a whale of a story has been fathered upon the German cavalry officer. His joy is innocent and his attraction of the world stories to his standard has given countless millions laughter.

Romancing is not a dead art. Munchausen had just a human frailty. Into his classification go the fisherman with the story of the escaped huge fish, the politician who tells the electors of the things he has done for the civic candidate on the eve of an election. But Munchausen "has it on" these persons because the Baron's stories live, though magnified and the people delight in them. His stories are universal in their appeal, the romances of politicians and ward politicians are for a day only and for a narrow sphere of interest.

But there are persons with the Munchausen tendency who are a never-ending delight to men. Every city has them, they are the perfect artists of exaggeration. Their fiction seems more pleasant than bare truth.

A WEATHER-MAN

A weather man is not just a guesser, the man who looks at the fur of animals, or the store of nuts hidden in a squirrel's den and then forecasts. He is an expert of many qualifications.

He may be a lawyer, a newspaper editor, real estate operator, and interested in many other things, including of course a wide knowledge of nature and science.

There has just died James H. Scarr of New York, head of the United States Weather Bureau at that place, who had just this training. For thirty-eight years he had foretold the weather. His knowledge of meteorology was extensive and was so wide that he was used as a witness in more than 8,00 civil and criminal trials. He had observed rain, snow, tornadoes, droughts, heat, cold and other weather conditions in divergent areas. His weather forecasts were often front page news.

The man himself was little known to the people. He used to don overalls and go about his workshop. he built doll houses for his grandchildren, would play for hours with the children.

He was kindness itself, no matter how foolish the questions were which came to him over the telephone. "How cold will next winter be?", "Would it be wise to go picnicking next Monday?" and so on. He never revealed any irony in his answers.

He prepared weather forecasts six days of the week for mariners, aviators, merchants, shippers and the mass of plain people. as he grew older, he said "There is no bad weather—just different kinds of good weather. The weather is the harmonious working of natural laws. Weather was before we can remember and will be after we are forgotten. You can change the weather but you can change your plans. If it rains on the day you plan your picnic, have it the day after."

He was a wise man because he set up no claim to infallibility, but he was about ninety per cent right. He refrained from prophecies, recognising the caprices of nature, but he did claim that proper forecasts of weather resulted in millions of dollars saved for commarce, industry and government.

LITTLE ASHADOW PETS

When all the house is still and dark
And Memory's Lamp is lit,
Those little ghosts of pets we've owned
Steal back and by us sit.

With bright, dark eyes they speak to us
Of distant yesterdays,
With tail a-wag and head a-tilt
In dear, remembered ways.

So real they seem, we reach a hand
To stroke a silken head,
And think we hear familiar barks
When a well-loved name is said.

No human heart that once has known
A furry comradeship
But when the house is still and dark
Hears tiny ghost paws trip.

They're with us still in memory's niche,
Tho' Starry Fields they've crossed,
Those furry wraiths of shadow pets
That we have loved and lost.

HAUPTMANN, CONVICTED OF THE MURDER of the Lindbergh baby, and sentenced to the electric chair has lived several months beyond the date set for his execution, because the Governor of New Jersey is not quite sure that Hauptman's crime included murder. Now a new phase of the case has been reached with Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean, prominent Washington society woman, dealing herself a hand in the game, a second hand by the way, for she gave Gaston Means $150,000 to reclaim the kidnapped baby from the underworld, and received nothing but publicity. Now she has engaged a noted criminal lawyer to look after Hauptman's interests and endeavor to solve the puzzle of what actually did happen the Lindbergh baby and what Hauptmann had to do with it. Mrs. McLean was the daughter of a miner named Walsh who became fabulously wealthy through the Bird mine which he discovered in the western United States and which is still a big producer; She purchased the Hope diamond, one of the largest diamonds in the world, which is said to have brought ill luck to everyone who ever owned it. Mrs. McLean laughs at this as superstitious, but she admits that she will not permit any of her friends to wear or even to touch the sinister, gem. She has had plenty of misfortune. She married into a newspaper family and her husband operated the Washington Post. One of the hot night spots and more than partial to bubbly water. She divorced him. Her son died from injuries received by being struck by a motor car. Her son was the road outside the family estate, despite the fact that he was accompanied by a bodyguard, armed and instructed to protect the child from all harm. She paid to the Lindbergh case in its early stages and listened to Gaston B. Means, now a member of the prison population of the State of Georgia, when he said he could contact the kidnappers and recover the child. She gave him $150,000 which Means spent in riotous living, all the time carrying on the farce of pretending to search the objective. She finally had him arrested and he was sent away. Means is the same man who posed as a private detective during the Harding administration and had entree to the White House, being employed by Mrs. Harding, at one time, it is said, to shadow the President in his after-dinner manoeuvrings. He wrote a book afterwards in which he intimated that President Harding's death was not from natural causes—that is the shadow of impending impeachment and consequent national, political and family scandal made it necessary for a presidential demise. However Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean is not averse to publicity, apparently, for she recently published her life story in weekly installments in a national weekly magazine. What motive inspires her in this latest sensational move is easily be guessed, She loves the limelight.

WILLIAM McFEE IN HIS BOOK OF THE SEA "THE BEACHCOMBER" has the captain of a big ocean liner disappear from his ship while nearing port. No one sees the captain take his departure, he just vanishes into the murk of sky and sea while the great liner is rushing along as though in a hurry to make the home port. That of course was fiction. But in fact, a great liner is rushing through the seas bound for San Francisco, the captain retires for a few hours rest, leaving word to be called at a certain time. He is called but his cabin is empty and he hasn't been seen since. There seems no reason for his disappearance except one tendered by Lowell Thomas who said in his radio talk that the fact that the ship was carrying the bones of Father Damien, the heroic priest who gave his life to the lepers of Molokai, would remain according to the Polynesians who worshipped the priest as a god, that there was a curse on the ship because the bones of Father Damien had been disturbed—his grave was safe and should not have been disturbed. Strange to say another liner landed at New York about the same time with a similar man mystery, one of the passengers having disappeared en route.

It was a jolly crowd that left here all confident that the Belleville boys will win the game.

Citizens of Belleville and residents of the surrounding district who intend to operate automobiles during the season of 1916 will find a great increase in the cost of up-keep owing to two reasons. Gasoline that was selling as low as 18 cents a gallon during 1915 is now up to 30c per gallon and the price may go higher, and the second reason is the increase in the cost of a license to run a car.

100 Years of Municipal Government

Wage Earners Percentage Unchanged

Belleville, February 11, 1936

To the Editor, Ontario Intelligencer

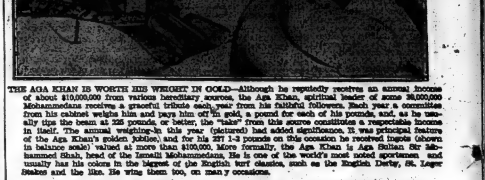
On the 20th of April 1836, a statute was passed by the Legislature of Upper Canada fixing the boundaries of the Village of Belleville and providing for the election of a council. Following this Hilla Flint was elected President of the Council and Asa Yeomans, Zenas Dafoe, William Morden and William Connor members, and ever since there has been in continuous operation a Municipal Council for Belleville.

A glance over the past century shows that there has always been a percentage of men not earning sufficient salaries as well as the present percentage of non-wage earners, but in former times, citizens or Belleville were employed in producing food, though not continuously earning wages. Nearly every home in Belleville formerly had vegetable and fruit gardens and small orchards; nearly every home kept hens which produced both of eggs and fowl, not only from hens, but from geese and ducks, and most of the homes kept one or more cows from which milk and beef were obtained. many homes also maintained pigs from which pork was supplied, thus the bulk of the food of Belleville was produced by the labor of the citizens, though no direct wages were received for this work. Now, practically none of this food is produced within the city, consequently the large percentage of citizens who produced their food from their own labour are obliged to find labor with which to earn wages for the purchase of food produced elsewhere, and as there is no larger percentage of jobs from which wages can be earned now than there was in former times, money is provided by the taxpayer for the relief of persons who are not producing their food by their labour and who have no employment.

We have become so aesthetic in our tastes that we prefer flowers, lawns and shrubs instead of apple, pear and plum trees, berry bushes and vegetable patches. We have learned to prefer the noise of the motor vehicle to the noise of the food animals. We prefer the deadly monoxide gas from the fumes of gasoline to the odours arising from the keeping of animals.

Patience is NEEDED Undoubtedly

If we could turn back the dial of time to the days when all persons who were not employed for wages were employed in producing their food ,it would no doubt reduce the tremendous tax burden necessary to get money to buy food instead of producing it.



There is an old maxim "Yesterday is the teacher —of, to-day." Sometimes we can learn useful lessons by taking a look at the past. It has been said that the church, and the schools are the two three greatest influences in life. How strange it is that one of the greatest influences have not been to prevent unemployment or war.

There seems to be a view prevalent now that the less work people do the better off they will become. What is true of Belleville is true of practically every community on the continent of North America.

W. O. Mikel.

THE AGA KHAN IS WORTH HIS WEIGHT IN GOLD—Although he reputedly receives an annual income of about $10,000,000 from various benevolent sources, the Aga Khan, spiritual leader of some 36,000,000 Mohammedans receives a graceful tribute each year from his faithful followers. Each year a committee from his cabinet weighs him and pays him off in gold, a pound for each of his pounds, and, as he usually tips the beam at 225 pounds, or better, the "take" from this source constitutes a respectable income in itself. The annual weighing (this year pictured) had added significance. It was principal feature of the Aga Khan's golden jubilee, and for his 227 lb pounds on this occasion he received bound (shown in balance scale) valued at more than $100,000. More formally, the Aga Khan is Aga Sultan Sir Mohammed Shah Mohammedans. He is one of the world's most colorful figures in sport and movement, and usually has his colors in the biggest of the English turf classics, such as the English Derby, St. Leger Stakes and the like. He wins them too, on many occasions.

Coughlin Invited To Kicking Duel By N.Y. Democrat

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP)—Hostility between Father Charles E. Coughlin and Representative John J. O'Connor (D.-N.Y.) flared into sudden partisan warfare with the latter theatrically threatening to kick his critic through the Capital's streets. O'Connor's chairman of the powerful House Rules Committee.

The district radio priest called O'Connor a "servant of the money changers" while the New Yorker replied the clergyman was a "disgrace" to the church.

At issue was the Frazier-Lemke Bill to issue up to $3,000,000,000 in new money and use it to refinance farm mortgages at easier terms.

Father Coughlin, demanding passage of the bill, accused O'Connor yesterday of trying to intimidate legislators into taking their names off a petition being circulated in an effort to force a vote on the measure.

He called on President Roosevelt to "order" O'Connor to release the "strangle-hold."

Father Coughlin declared O'Connor "does not only do that" but from the committee chairmanship but "should resign his seat in Congress."

O'Connor was sitting by his radio, listening in. When the address was over he seized paper and pencil and wrote a telegram to the priest. He said it read as follows:

"Just heard your libelous radio ramblings. The truth is not in you.

"You are a disgrace to my church or any other church and especially to the citizenship of America which you recently embraced.

"You will not dare to print what you said about me. If you will please come to Washington I shall be glad to kick you all the way from the Capitol to the White House with clerical garb and all the silver in your pockets which you got by speculating in Wall Street, while you were voting for farm bills.

"Come on."

CAPITULATION OF SELASSIE SEEN RESULT OF DRIVE

Casualties Estimated At 30,000 When Amba Aradam Falls

ETHIOPIANS IN FLIGHT

Drive Acquires 300 Square Miles of Territory

(By Charles H. Guptill)

(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press)

ROME, Feb. 17.—(AP)—A vast Fascist offensive on the Northern front, resulting in capture of Amba Aradam and Ethiopian casualties estimated at 30,000, aroused Roman exultation today as a triumph certain to hasten Emperor Haile Selassie's capitulation.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio's Northern Divisions swarmed deeper into Ethiopia, consolidating the positions they seized during last week's massive, six-day drive.

Bitter Battle

The Red African Commander-in-Chief reported the offensive—the third major movement since the war started in early October—developed into a "bitter battle" but all objectives were reached against Ras Mulugheta's army.

Press dispatches reported the offensive concluded Saturday with the Ethiopian Army of 80,000 in flight, Ethiopian losses estimated at about 1,800 dead and 15,000 wounded and Italian deaths less than 500 with about 1,000 severely wounded.

The drive yielded 300 square miles of new territory to the Fascist campaign of conquest, reports from the Asmal front said, and gave Italy all three more major towns in Northern Ethiopia and 36 smaller villages.

The joy which swept through Rome swelled in response to news which had been awaited ever since Marshal Badoglio succeeded Gen. Emilio de Bono as Italian African Commander-in-Chief nearly three months ago.

Fascist officials attached particular importance to the victory, expressing belief it quashed Emperor Haile Selassie's hopes of calling the Italian lines of communication through Makale and Hamlen, 30 miles back toward the main Eritrean base.

Given Fresh Courage

The fresh offensive drove the Italian lines about 200 miles into Ethiopia from Italian Somaliland and 100 miles from Eritrea, leaving about 250 miles to go to Addis Ababa on the south and 360 miles to the north.

At the same time, the triumphs provided Fascists at home with fresh courage to wait out the economic siege being applied by the League of Nations in punishment for the adjudged Italian aggression in East Africa.

"We have taken fantastic Aradam, which has been tying our guts in chests so long," Marshal Badoglio, the Commander-in-Chief told war correspondents at his headquarters observatory, less than a mile from Amba Aradam.

"The enemy is beaten and flying to the south. You saw the bold-ness of our manoeuvre. But right now, the negus is probably in some abandoned cave writing victory communiques".

CHECKER WIZARD IS SEEN IN PLAY AT MIAMI, FLA.

His Honour Judge G. E. Deroche Describes Accomplishment by W. N. Banks

MIAMI'S GROWTH

His Honour Judge Deroche, who is wintering in Miami, Florida, sends an interesting account of a checker tournament by W. N. Banks of Detroit, staged at Miami one day last week. The Judge's account of the match will prove interesting reading to Belleville, Trenton, Picton and Bancroft checker players.

"370 N. E. 73rd. St., Miami, Florida.

"I saw an interesting thing yesterday.

W. N. Banks of Detroit who claims to be the world champion at checkers was here yesterday. He played twenty-four men simultaneously. Two of the games were chess and four of the checker boards he never saw all through the games. Of the twenty boards he saw, including eighteen checkers and two chess, he walked around, taking his move, passing quickly from game to game. As he came down to the end where four "blind" boards were, he was told the move the player took on board one, then he named his move, likewise with boards No two and three and four. Then he passed around taking his move in the other twenty boards. The four games he was playing "blind" he of course had to carry in his head all the time—and with the astonishing result that he won every game. The players got even a draw game with him, and the players in the main were expert players—men who play hours every day.

"Many Belleville players will remember Alf. Jordan, who visited Belleville and played simultaneous games, but not "blind" games. Jordan at that time claimed to be the champion of the world. Banks was champion of the United States. They finally met and Banks won. Then a man, named Stewart of Scotland, became champion of Europe and Banks went over there to play him, expecting Stewart to return the compliment. Stewart won the games, Banks won one—all the rest were draws. Now Stewart, it is said, refuses to come over here although Banks has offered him $1,500 and $800 expenses. So the matter of the world championship rests."

"Weather here fine. No fire required since we came. A little cooler today (11th) but sometime hell-ishly hot."

Growth of Miami

Judge Deroche also forwarded several clippings and some data about the growth of Miami. One reads:

"Building in Miami thus far this year showed an increase of 161 per cent over that of the same period a year ago, W. F. Lowry, Building Inspector, reported yesterday, when the $1,000,000 mark was passed.

"Thirty-three permits totalling $115,000 were issued yesterday, increasing the 1936 total to date to $1,018,947.

"On the same date last year the total for 1935 was $390,000.

"The total for February this year is $453,000 as compared with $75,103 on February 10 last year.

"This building program for January and February up to 10th does not include the cities of Miami Beach and Coral Gables, which together form Greater Miami. Judge Deroche points out. In Miami Beach alone between the two winter seasons there were built 23 new hotels and 20 large apartment houses.

Safety Driving Campaign

Another clipping reads:

Donation of a $15,000 fund by the Automobile Manufacturers' Association of America to be administered by the International Association of Chiefs of Police in a national campaign for safety was revealed yesterday by Andrew J. Kavanagh, Miami safety director and president of the chiefs' association.

The fund was offered and the responsibility for administering it was accepted by the association through President Kavanagh on a recent trip to Washington, D.C. Director Kavanagh and four other members of the police association will have charge of the fund, which will be expended in aiding communities in safety problems and the setting up of accident prevention bureaus.

Director Kavanagh said that the committee will hire two traffic experts from the police profession who will gather statistics in preparation of a model plan of accident prevention bureaus which will be promoted in various cities. Part of the fund also will be used in aiding cities far behind in their safety measures and in a general educational campaign.

"Father Time"— Our Oldest Employee!

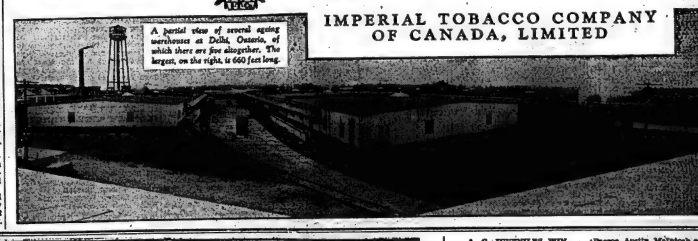
A view to one of the ageing warehouses at Delhi, Ontario, where as many as 25,000 hogsheads can be stored, representing a net weight of between 22 and 24 million pounds of tobacco leaf.

BETWEEN the green leaf in the fields and the golden brown tobacco you buy, many things intervene, involving two main factors—Time and Processing.

To grant you the boon of complete smoke satisfaction, tobacco must be aged. It must be aged exactly right, and only Father Time can do the job. He will not be hurried. Thirty months is the average period; but just leave him alone and how wonderfully he matures and mellows the leaf for you.



Our tobaccos are aged by Father Time in many different storage warehouses located throughout the world, but the Ontario grown, flue-cured leaf we buy goes through the mellowing process at Delhi, Ontario, in a plant operated by this company.

That vast warehouse at Delhi stores tens of thousands of wooden hogsheads packed with slowly maturing tobacco leaf. It is an unusual warehouse, without a floor. The ground is covered five feet deep with builder's sand as insulation against earth odours and dampness. Above the sand the hogsheads rise row on row, resting on stringers, with free air space all around. Plank runways between the hogshead rows provide access to them, for removal or replacement.

For nearly three years these hogsheads of selected tobacco leaf lie mellowing under the subtle influence of Father Time. Summer breezes, winter blasts, circulate around and about them, until at last the tobacco is just right, "aged in the wood", fit and ready for manufacture.

We have reason to be proud of our Delhi plant. Experts from abroad have called it: "The last word in a scientific tobacco handling plant."

Municipal Band Hopes to Assume Kilties' Place

It is generally conceded that The Kilties Scottish Band of Belleville was the most popular and outstanding of any of this class of musical organization ever formed. During their tour of the world they visited England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, France, Australia, New Zealand, Burmah, Arabia, Italy, Egypt, Spain, India, Hawaii and Mexico. They were cited before Royalty. They were organized in 1904 and during their tours played before audiences of 176,000 paid admissions. During their trip they travelled over 90,000 miles, visited 20 different countries and spent 110 days at sea.

This article is written to again introduce to your readers the success of the above organization (several of whom are still living in Belleville), now organized under the auspices of the City Council and named "Belleville Municipal Band". The Band, with your patronage and help, are endeavoring to make themselves worthy successors to the organization so ably managed by the late Mr. T. F. J. Powers.

The City of Belleville is fortunate in having so many organizations to fall back on for recruits, such as The Belleville Collegiate Institute Band, The Argyle Light-Infantry Band, the Salvation Army Band and the many and varied Oranderal organizations.

With the co-operation of the various musicians and organizations your Band anticipate again assuming their place as a leader in all matters musical in our fair city.

Incidentally the Municipal Band holds weekly practices in their new and spacious band room in No. 2 fire-hall on each Tuesday evening.

TERRIFIC STORM SWEEPS ACROSS CANADA, U.S. AND EUROPE, ISOLATING TOWNS, SMOOCHING MOTORISTS—Everyone's talking about the cold weather and the snow and how much we've had of it. And so the weatherman explains, too. The cold wave comes from the region of northern Alaska and the Mackenzie valley, in British Columbia, sweeping down across Canada and clipping into the United States and does back on itself again. Another thing, there has been no much snow to allow radiation—or heat—from the earth to escape. And the sun's radiation at this time of year is not very effective—Snow, rain, sleet and blizzard struck Ontario on Feb. 13 in one of the worst storms in years. Highways were blocked towns and villages c ut off, and motorists stranded and forced to find haven in nearby farm houses. Snowdrifts up to ten feet deep even stopped powerful snow-p lows. The layout ABOVE shows two scenes taken after the storm. LEFT: a motor car left stranded in the ditch on a highway outside of Toron to. RIGHT, farmers had to dig out their mail boxes, so high did the snow drift.

Katherine Hepburn Has Sweet Tooth

Hollywood, Feb. 17 (AP)—Katherine Hepburn buys an average of 12 pounds of candy every week—but weight stays at 105 pounds.

That's a mystery supplied by Ruth Gaskins, who looks at the sum from the viewpoint of a candy-storeowner.

Maybe she doesn't eat it all herself, suggested the purveyor of sweets, but she buys that much, thinks she must give a lot away. Anyhow, Miss Hepburn is a familiar figure around the "box." Since she and Merle Oberon, her partner here from Ulrichsville, Ohio, have been making and selling candy in the movie stars. By all odds Miss Hepburn is her best customer.

Among the men, Clark Gable has been a steady customer, buying about fifty or four pounds a week, care of him.

Two Women Held After Girl's Death

Hamilton, Ont., Feb. 17. (CP)—Arlene Bernard, 21, Hamilton, faced a charge of murder in magistrate's court today when she was arraigned following the death of Mary Dorothy Jillard, who died in the General Hospital Saturday. It is alleged the young woman died following an illegal operation. Mrs. Louise Robidoux, 32, is held as an accessory.

Police received a call Saturday saying a woman was sick at a Wilson Street address. Upon responding they found she was dying.

"I simply must go—I must!" she told herself in something of a panic.

Motherly old Mrs. McCarty tried to "doctor her up," and urged her to give up the thought of going to the theatre." But Dorothy knew what the money she received meant to her. Then the mail brought a long, official envelope and a letter that told her the scholarship had been otherwise disposed of.

In the seclusion of her room, she fought the battle through, but it was a girl who bundled herself up and went to the door, to be caught by strong hands, she turned to look into Irwin's face.

"You're not going out tonight, little girl," he said, and his voice was firm.

"But—I have to play—Chesterfield!"

"I'll play at the palace for you," he announced.

She went back to her room with a tired, running stride. Irwin, as he had told her just a moment in his arms as he removed her coat.

In her room she found one of the girls with a newspaper turned to the musical page. "Dear, if that isn't Chester Irwin—who is he? I'm sure of it!"

Dorothy stared at the face. "There is no doubt of it, Ruth. It is—I suppose—why he is a radio pianist—and see what they say of him!"

She drew back, her mind in a whirl. What was he doing here—or could it be a mistake—and what did his kindness to her mean?

She found out later. Her heart began to pound as he mounted the stairs, and she heard him pause.

"Well, you've lost your job, Dorothy, I've got it. Come out a moment," he suggested.

He stepped out, and seeing her big eyes grew serious. "You look as if—what is it?" His eyes caught the newspaper still clutched in her hands, and she saw that his swift mind had sensed some connection between it and her mood.

She held out the paper, and he saw the picture.

He folded the paper, returned it, then looked up and down the stairs. "I was going to tell you tonight, who I was, because I came here to get away from my name and rest. I am going tomorrow, and I am going to take you with me."

She swayed slightly.

"You were a good little girl when I told you to stay in tonight; are you going to be good about this?"

How could she speak with tears starting all speech?

With his wise understanding, he did not wait, but gathered her in his arms. And at the feel there strength about her she knew she was safe now from cold and wind from weariness and struggle, doubt and question, in the circle of his love.

COLONEL'S SKULL FRACTURED

Peterboro, Feb. 17.—Condition of Col. Fred R. Millman, admitted to the hospital Saturday, with a fractured skull and brain injuries, was reported unchanged. Attending physicians held little hope for the 60-year-old colonel's recovery.

Col. Millman, foreman of the Peterboro Lumber Company, was believed to have suffered a fainting spell while climbing the stairs of his home on Friday night and to have fallen backwards.

When Dorothy Found True Love

By DUFORD JENNE

It's Dorothy hesitated at the door of her boarding house, dreading to go out into the wild, wintry night, a sturdy figure stepped in, and she recognized Charlie Irwin, one of the roomers' nicknames.

"Where under the sun are you going on a night like this, Dorothy?" he asked quickly.

From the moment she had met him, only a week before, his easy manner of comradeship, and now and then his first use of "Dorothy," gave her a little thrill. But she covered it with:

"I am going to earn my bread and butter, kind sir."

"Well, you ought to be in here where it is safe and snug," he urged.

As she tramped down the avenue through the snow, facing the keen wind, the friendly tones of his rich manly voice followed her and comforted her. Between her hard study at the Conservatory of Music, her limited funds, her night work to which she was going, and the absence that she might not win the scholarship for which she was trying, she had a chance to worry.

"Thank you, Jenney," she advised herself. "It's dogged as does it."

She turned into the lobby of the cheap, avenue movie palace. There she was to play the tin-pan-y piano through the evening performance.

It was a tired girl who dragged her weary feet back through the heavy snow to the boarding house, and those keys ran mad.

"I have had Mrs. McCarty keep a hot lunch for you in the kitchen, little Miss Snowbird—go down to the kitchen, you go," he announced.

She stood silent, forcing back the tears. "Don't be too good to me, it—I don't deserve it!"

She knew in an instant that some keen sense of sympathy he possessed had warned him what her mood was; that he was gently hearkening:

"The good are never rewarded according to their deserts, so I am told; but Mrs. McCarty will have my scalp and yours if you don't eat it!"

He did not follow her to the kitchen. Instead, he went with a lingering good night word.

Then next day a cup of bitterness was filled to the brim. When she woke, she knew she had caught a cold that promised to be a real one. Then came her fear of one classroom result. The owner of the "movie palace," while fair enough, had his problems, and she told her that she must be on hand—if she missed one evening, she was done.

"I simply must go—I must!" she told herself in something of a panic.

Motherly old Mrs. McCarty tried to "doctor her up," and urged her to give up the thought of going to the theatre." But Dorothy knew what the money she received meant to her. Then the mail brought a long, official envelope and a letter that told her the scholarship had been otherwise disposed of.

The problem of marriage is one that confronts every human being at some time of his or her life.

It is instinctive to want to marry. It is a perfectly normal and natural urge to want a partner of the opposite sex with whom to share your life.

Young people do not think seriously about marriage. And when they do think about it, it is too often considered in the light of more and better clothes, a fine home, luxuries and other material considerations.

The personality problem in marriage is, after all, the biggest. If two personalities clash, all the riches in the world will not prevent the union from going on the rocks.

And in the matter of personality, age is important! According to statistics the age at which men and women marry now is higher than it used to be. The explanation for this is prime. Economic conditions force a man to delay taking on additional responsibilities until he is fairly well established in business or a profession; and the American man, at any rate, possesses the desire to wait to give his wife and children as many of the comforts and luxuries as he can. Regarding the Woman, economics also is a factor. Ideal as it is for women to work side by side and in competition with men, the problem of a home and support is not as formidable as it was a decade ago or two.

Both men and women should know something of the world before they settle down to the eternal battle of all — marriage! By this I am not implying the desirability of riotous, licentious behavior. I merely wish to emphasize the enrichment to be gained from a wide acquaintance with people, in studying various types of character in comparing one's own emotions under diversified conditions, in developing self-control, in softening one's prejudices. In crystallizing one's viewpoint gradually through the lessons of experience!

It takes time to do all this. Barring individual exceptions, a woman is scarcely settled before twenty-five or a man before thirty. But marriage should not be deferred too long.

Although habits should have been already fairly well formed, it should still be possible to modify them. Intimate association with a member of the opposite sex exerts powerful counteracting influences. No single man or woman can marry and remain the same. No matter how deep their love, no matter how great the attraction between them, mutual understanding and happiness is bound to be the result only if tolerance is not, or cannot be practiced on both sides.

There is no greater bond of union between couples than children. If children are impossible because of illness or age, marriage is a distinct disposition. Platonic marriages sometimes succeed. If companionship is the prime motivating factor. But even then, firmly fixed habits will disrupt the best laid plans despite the very best of intentions.

It's never too old to marry, really. If your habits haven't become ossified!

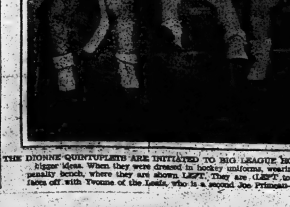
Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Poor teeth, a tendency toward acidity and gas after eating, may be due to the consumption of too much white bread and white flour products, such as rolls, biscuit, cake, etc. Rye, whole wheat and other unrefined breads are not only more desirable but also more nourishing and filling.

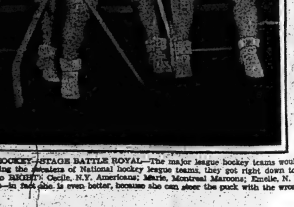
Little Benny's Note Book

Mary Watkins was sitting on a short slide in front of her house, looking perfick in her red coat and red hat and red complexion, and I started to slide with her and she said, My goodness can't a person have a little slide without a whole crowd coming?

Prowing she was still mad at me because Paula Simkins sent her a valentine and I didn't, and I said, Hay, do you want to know something?



I know something, thank you, and that's enough for me, thank you, Mary Watkins said.



Prowing when girls get something in their mind it's liked to stay there, and I said, Well hay, do you know I pritty near bawt you a valentine? Pritty near is pritty far, Mary Watkins said, and I said, Well what I mean, I mean I actually practically did buy you one.

Well then where is it, miss wise ist? she said, and I said, Well that's what I started to tell you. There was a preach of a smell on in Mommy Simmins' window for ten cents with read imidation lace, and I was rite there practically buying it and at the last second I had another ideer and I bawt some sealing creams in the shape of hearts instead and every one I put into one I thawt of you, and it was the best sweetest candy I ever tasted so you can imagine my thawts, and incloded is my favorite kind and so are you, I said.

Well the goodness you mite at least of saved me one piece if it was as good as all that, Mary Watkins said, and I said, I thawt of it, but then that would of been one less piece to compare you with and think of you about, so I didn't give way to the temtation.

O well, if that's the case I guess you can slide with me, she said.

THE DIONNE QUINTUPLETS ARE INITIATED TO BIG LEAGUE HOCKEY—STAGE BATTLE ROYAL—The major league hockey teams would probably give a small fortune to have the Dionne quintuplets as mascots. The Dionnettes, however, have bigger ideas. When they were dressed in hockey uniforms, wearing the sweaters of National hockey league teams, they got right down to business and staged a real match. It wasn't long before Referee Dr. Dafoe had summoned them all to the faces off with Yvonne of the Leafs, who is a second Joe Primeau—in fact she is even better, because she can steer the puck with the wrong end of the stick. FALCONBRIDGE NICKEL

In their current Weekly Letter, Gerry & Thompson have the following to say—"The recent decision of the Directors of Falconbridge Nickel to expand capacity by 50 per cent but one indication of the steadily increasing demand for the metal at large a proportion of which is supplied from Canada. Nickel, an important element in such modern industries as radio aviation, air-conditioning and electrical refrigeration there does not seem likely to be any lack in the demand for the metal in the near future, particularly as the present depression elements are constantly finding new methods of using nickel as an alloy with other metals."

MOFFATT-HALL MINES

Moffatt-Hall Mines will hold a special meeting today at which meeting shareholders will be asked to approve the proposal for a sale of the company's assets to a new company with an authorized capital of 1,000,000 shares of no par value. Shareholders will receive one share for two old in the new company.

The market last week continued quiet on moderate trading with many of the sold-out bulls buying for a settlement as is usually the case when there is a stabilizing reaction, prices continue to advance steadily. It is interesting that despite the recent move-up, the majority of the issues are still grouped near the bottom.

On Saturday International Nickel touched a new high, touching the 50- mark on the local board for the first time since 1929, in selling over the high was 72 3-8 and the low 70, and advance in the price of copper in New York to 9.5-8 cents per pound is a very constructive development for the nickel shares, which is a large producer of copper, the real metal being a by-product of the mining of nickel. The 1935 statement of International Nickel to be made public next month will show the best earnings in the company's history.

INTERNATIONAL NICKEL

Profit and business volume of International Nickel Company of Canada were of record-breaking proportions last year. The official report already published for the first three quarters of 1935 presaged such a showing, and further information of an impressive nature will be revealed when the annual financial statement comes out in fortnight's time.

To fully fulfil the fondest hopes of the most avaricious speculators there will be needed a rise in the price of copper to the present level during last year but there are many reasons for anticipating that the price of copper and therefore it will derive a benefit from the recovery of the recent advance in the price of the metal.

IMPERIAL TOBACCO

The common shares of the Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada are actively dealt in on Montreal, but comes passes on —there being 4600 shareholders at the present time.

INTERNATIONAL PETROLEUM

It is probable that International Petroleum, a subsidiary of Standard Oil of New Jersey will make the highest production in its history this year. The 1935 total of 26,000,000 barrels is the best mark to be made by any company in the group according to G. Harrison-Smith, vice President, its production of crude oil and world wide marketing of products. The 1935 total was the Imperial Oil at operations Canada, Mexico and Peru, Colombia and much of it is sold in Europe.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, Feb. 17 (CP)—Following a display of strength in the early trading, Toronto Industrial Market sold off sharply with New York Market soon after 1 p.m., and losses in the list were registered among the leaders. Net losses for the day predominated at early afternoon.

International Nickel, C.P.R., and Walker's Common featured the early trading at gains of ¼ to 1⅛ and the two former set a new high for years, Nickel touched 51¼ before the slump came and it quickly dropped to 50, still up ⅝ for the day, Brazilian backed up from 14⅝ to 15⅛, off ⅛ from Walker

OLYMPICS ONLY TEAM TO COUNT TWO VICTORIES

Defeat Rochester and Pittsburgh on Successive Nights

TECS BREAK EVEN

Trim Bisons But Not Good Enough to Hurdle Stars

(By The Canadian Press)

Detroit Olympics was the only club in the International Hockey League, which looked back with complete satisfaction at the week's game week-end program. Four teams were in action twice in the session but only Dennie Hopperstead boasted a pair of victories to strengthen their already safe lead in the western section.

The Olympics stepped into Rochester Saturday night and upset the lowly Cardinals 3-1 and then moved back to their home ice Sunday to paste Pittsburgh Shamrocks by a similar score. The week-end was not entirely disastrous for the Irish, however, as they took a 3-1 win over Windsor Bulldogs in Pittsburgh Saturday night.

Syracuse Reds, nose-setters in the eastern group, were pressed to the limit to beat Providence Reds. They were forced into overtime to down Falcons 3-2 in Cleveland Saturday and showed the determined rally by London Tecumsehs to triumph 3-2 at home Sunday.

Tecs Break Even

Tecs were all-out for a win Sunday in hopes of replacing the Stars in final berths, but Buffalo Bisons 3-2 in Fort Erie Stadium duty to keep even with Stars but were not quite good enough to take the crucial tilt. Three goals down half way through the third period, Tecs staged a rally, which fell one counter short.

The veteran Nick Wasnie led Shamrocks in their drive for victory over Rochester in the western section of the loop. He scored two goals in the third session to give hopes of Windsor Bulldogs to force the game into overtime.

Little Babbit McVeigh was another of the league's veterans who starred. Both are Toronto. The former New York Americans winger scored one goal and supplied the other. Kenny with a pass for another Rochester smashing a 1-1 deadlock with Buffalo.

As Cleveland drubbed Stars in overtime, they smashed a three-game losing streak and kept within striking distance of the speedy Detroit club. Lloyd Gross broke up the losing party in the first session on a three-way play with "Speedy" Grosh and "Dutch" Schmidt.

HOCKEY'S BIG SEVEN

(By the Canadian Press)

Charlie Conacher's scoring drive for his third consecutive National Hockey League scoring championship has made the big Toronto winger two points over the week-end to lead the Leafs' point total compiled by Sweeney Schriner of New York Americans. Schriner was credited with two assists against Montreal Maroons, while Conacher was scoring a goal and an assist.

Art Chapman of Americans stayed one point ahead of Conacher, while Paul Thompson and Doc Romnes of Chicago Black Hawks came up to even terms with Chuck. Larry Aurie of Detroit and Frank Boucher of Rangers dropped from the select big seven.

The standings:

	G.	A.	P.
Schriner, Americans	20	17	37
Chapman, Americans	9	19	28
Conacher, Leafs	12	16	28

How to Bowl—No. 5

BEND BACK AND LOSE FAT!

By MRS. FLORETTA D. McCUTCHEON

WORLD CHAMPION WOMAN BOWLER

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fifth in a series of ten articles, written exclusively for Central Press Canadian by Mrs. Floretta D. McCutcheon, women's champion bowler and nationally known instructor.

You were told in Saturday's lesson that it is necessary in a good smooth delivery, to get down to your slide. Otherwise, you will drop the ball on the alley. It's hard on you and hard on the alley.

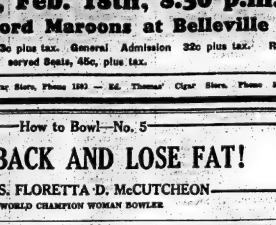
Don't go up and, as you reach the foul line, stop by bending your knee. But as you bring the ball forward with the final step of your delivery, bend the left knee and the back, both, so you are naturally down close to the alley when rolling the ball.

It's an essential in smooth delivery. It's also equally important in getting the healthful exercise that will make good reducing. It's the way to reducing. If you carry excess weight, and to uniform exercise of all the body.

Centre Pin in Third Row

The ten pins, as you know, are set up in the form of a triangle. The right-hand bowler should be aiming for what we call the 1-3 pocket, that is, midway between the head pin and pin just behind it and on the bowler's right. To place my ball there, I aim for the 3 pin, which is the key pin rather than the head pin.

This 3 pin is the centre pin in the third row of pins. For the left-hand bowler, the pocket is the 1-2 pocket, approaching from the left. But the 3 pin is the key pin, whether the bowler is left or right-handed.



Instead of rolling in the general direction of the pins, with a lot of "hope" on the ball and but little direction, aim the ball correctly. Ultimate success depends on the bowling hand, as delivery. Aim the ball you want the 3 pin to go. Make this a line from the foul line to the place where you want to hit. Let your hand, the ball forward point with the thumb along the line of this line. The ball is swinging naturally at the side pendulum fashion, not out even from the side, but yet finishing in front of the body.

Thumb Released First

Release the ball by allowing its weight to take it off the thumb first. A ball released in this way starts turning in the direction in which it is rolling and develops natural tendency to "come in," as the term is. The ball hook is that from the right to left, just as a golf ball with overspin has a tendency to slice.

After the ball has rolled off the hand, be sure to follow straight on and end your delivery with the arm well out in front, thumb pointing at the key pin.

A few years ago, in Quincy, Ill., after one of my classes, a man asked me if I minded watching him roll a few balls. He was one of Quincy's leading amateur bowlers and kept in shape by bowling in the winter.

Notice Mrs. McCutcheon's smooth delivery, and study the points in the accompanying lesson about aiming at pins.

"Hello, Pins!"

I watched him. He had a nice delivery up to the point of releasing the ball. Then he turned his hand palm up. The ball hit the alley with reverse spin, "backing up." I told him all he needed to do was to get over the backswing action at release, with thumb pointed in the right direction in the follow-up. His hand would then be in the position of offering to shake hands. The ball would roll straight for the 3 pin.

He turned his head and said in that way and they "came in" something without a bit of reverse. He was delighted.

"Haven't I been dumb?" he asked. "I've been turning my hand, saying 'goodby pins,' instead of shaking hands with them, and saying 'hello!' "

Battling Out a Schedule Toronto Leafs Down Detroit In Overtime by 3-2 Count

Gain One Point on Maroons Held to Tie By Americs

HAWKS WIN

Advance to Second Place By Downing Boston

(By Elmer Dulmage)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The National Hockey League's twin races towards the playoff and playoff spa have become so close that 80 minutes of labor per game isn't enough any more to prove anything. The boys are working right down the stretch to get in an six playoff jobs sought by eight contenders.

Three out of four week-end games went into overtime and only one of those extra-session fixtures produced a winner, Toronto Maple Leafs nosing out Detroit in a schedule for the first time in three years. It managed to beat Detroit Red Wings 3-2 in overtime at the Motor City.

Montreal Maroons, fighting to hold a slender lead over Toronto in the Canadian section, battled hard in a 4-4 tie by New York Americans and New York Rangers finished in a 1-1 deadlock with Montreal Canadiens. The Canadian section promises to be a real thriller.

Chicago Black Hawks collected the American Division marbles by bronzing Boston Bruins last night before a sheering crowd of 12,000 in Chicago. The win sent the Hawks into sole possession of second place three points behind Detroit, two ahead of Rangers and three ahead of Boston.

Americs Come From Behind

The Saturday-night firing on the Canadian front provided the big thrills, Maroons built up a 3-0 lead in the first period over Red Dutton's fiery Americans, who came back with one of the year's best sustained rallies to get a tie. Lorne Chabot's fine goaltending prevented the New Yorkers from winning.

After Hooley Smith had scored twice and passed to Stew Evans for the third Montreal goal, the Americans settled into attacking stride. Eddie Wiseman cut the Maroon lead to 3-2 with a backhander and Nels Stewart banged in two in the third. Jimmy Ward's overtime goal for Maroons only made Americans work harder and faster, but they earned matters for keeps 30 seconds later.

Leafs Gain Point

The Leafs gained a point on Maroons when Bill Thoms sank an overtime goal, batting in the rebound of a shot by Buzz Boll. Charlie Conacher and Bob Davidson scored the other Toronto goals with Johnny Sorrell and Wally Kilrea scoring for the Americans' section leaders.

Canadiens went into New York last night with Abbie Cox in goal in his ill Wild Cube and a make-shift lineup generally, but the Frenchmen got a tie and lost on ground. After Butch Keeling had clipped in a relief goal, Cecil Boucher and Phil Watson for the Ranger goal, Aurel Joliat did the necessary diving for Canadiens.

But at Chicago the Hawks held a two-goal edge over Boston, climaxing their sweep with an 80-foot shot by Art Gerhett that bounced into the Boston goal over tiny Thomas's stick. It was the longest scoring shot of this and several other N.H.L. seasons.

Phil Clapper scored both Boston goals in the first period and Doc Romnes bagged a pair for Chicago. Romnes passed to Mush Marsh for the other Hawk tally. The outcome was that Marsh and Romnes collected three points each. Paul Thompson got two.

"REDMEN" READY FOR MAROONS

Northern Team to be Bolstered by Players From Havelock, Hastings

After disposing of the Napanee Gibbards in the first round in the intermediate "B" series of the O.H.A. the Belleville "Redmen" I. are of further hockey honours to meet the Campbellford Maroons winners of the East Peterborough League in the second round of the provincial play-downs.

The dates set for this round were announced over the week end by W. A. Hewitt, secretary of the O.H.A. and fixes the series opening at the Belleville arena on Tuesday night, when Maroons will invade the local ice palace strengthened considerably by players drafted from Havelock and Hastings. Manager Thomas was only receiving informed that the winning club in the East Peterborough League is the only team to use the two extra players certificates which naturally allows him plenty of latitude in his players from surrounding teams in order to bolster their particular club. The Maroons will of course be headed by "Buck" Whitton and Archie McKay, Campbellford's star veteran pucksters with Eddie Bush and Bill Blue playing with Mac. Arthur on the regular lines. All of these players are well known locally and are proven pucksters and should give the "Redmen" plenty to worry about before the round is over.

Manager Thomas announced today he would stick to the same line-up that so successfully turned back the Napanee Gibbards, with players practiced over the week-end and reported for duty in grand style. Our series with Campbellford should be a thriller with Smith, at both Harry Ingram and Don Morton are available to turn back their team mates. The latter, who added Skipper Thomas this morning. He winning the East Peterborough League the Maroons disposed of such strong teams as Havelock, Hastings, Lakefield and one Indus-trial team from Peterboro'. The Campbellford Maroons always can be depended upon to provide plenty of opposition for Belleville hockey fans and Manager Thomas is taking no chances on a repetition of the lousiness of this series and is out to win by as large a margin as possible.

PRESIDENT SHIBE ATHLETICS, DIES

Baseball Man For Many Years Succumbs to Blood Disease

Philadelphia, Feb. 17 (UP)—Thomas S. Shibe, president of the Philadelphia Athletics, died Sunday night in St. Agnes' Hospital. The 76-year-old baseball magnate was suffering from thrombosis, a blood disease.

Shibe was stricken several weeks ago while vacationing at Mt. Plymouth, Fla. He was returned to Philadelphia and placed under the care of his physician, Dr. John F. Lee.

He lapsed into unconsciousness Sunday morning and remained in this condition until death. At his bedside were his brother, John D. Shibe, vice-president and secretary of the Athletics, and two sisters, Mrs. Frank Macfarland and Mrs. George Resch.

The Athletics' president had been suffering from a complication of ailments for several years. Last December he was stricken with a cold which aggravated his weakened condition. He recovered partly and left for his annual sojourn in the south with his veteran manager, Connie Mack. However, he had to forgo all activity and was confined to his home at Mt. Plymouth.

Thomas Stephenson Shibe was one of the pioneers in starting the baseball league on a major league career 26 years ago.

Sensing possibilities in the game, Shibe associated with his father, Benjamin F. Shibe, and Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, in buying the franchise. For this interest in the club, Shibe was made president and his father vice-president. To Mack was given the freedom of arranging the team.

At the death of his father in 1922, Shibe was named president, his brother, John D. Shibe, becoming vice-president.

Shibe served with distinction as president. His knowledge of baseball and its intricacies, especially in the manufacturing end, often brought requests for his advice. The same knowledge also gave him renown as a manufacturer of the horse-hide spheres and baseball equipment. He is a partner in the firm of A. J. Reach, Wright and Ditson, manufacturers of baseballs and other sporting equipment.

To him may be credited much of the modern machinery which is used in baseball manufacture.

Shibe personally supervised one of the company's plants—one of the largest in the industry. His office was a museum which contained baseballs used since the sport was originated.

SKATING CROWN TO ALEX HURD

At the Minnesota state capital two-day rush for honors, the veteran Ontario, Hurd, Sudbury star, he last held in 1933 by 105 points to 100 for Hardy.

Dorothy Dowdell of St. Paul added the indoor title to the outdoor one she annexed last fall by defeating Ida 220-yard, 440, 880 and one-mile events. It was one of the most brilliant performances in women's competition Tuesday.

Tuesday, the toronto Friday, in district championship rinks clash in the Ontario tankard with the winners of the Mid-Ontario and Eastern Brier competition as Ontario representatives.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

It will seem kind of queer to skate down the ice and find Harry Ingram and Don Morton at the opposite end of the arena, as will be the experience of "Buster" Whitton and company on Tuesday night when they clash with the "Redmen" at the Arena. For these many seasons back Ingram and Morton have been the backbone of the Maroons along with Whitton, McKay and others. Now we find Ingram and Morton wearing a Belleville uniform and earnestly out to defeat their ex-teammates as badly as possible. It will be quite a sight to watch Whitton, McKay and company trying to get past Ingram by and score on Morton tomorrow night. The Maroons, by virtue of winning the East Peterborough League, have the privilege of choosing the best players from Havelock and Hastings, if they so desire. Such a team will doubtedly prove quite a stumbling block, so the Redmen will have just about as tough a nut to crack as they have experienced this season. The Redmen are now in the second round of the intermediate O.H.A. play-downs with goals to count on the round. The return game will be played at Campbellford on Friday night.

Plenty of sport and reasonable entertainment in the programme for this week. The O.H.A. game tomorrow night will be followed by a double-header in the Inter-Collegiate hockey set-up on Wednesday night and the charity ice carnival, under the auspices of the Victorian Order of Nurses slated for Thursday evening As for the Interscholastic games a slight change has been made in the schedule The Albert College-St. Michael's game will be played as the curtain-raiser this week with the Y.M.C.A. at O.S.D. the following. The big game of this twin bill is the Albert-St Mikes game. One of the best games of the season. "Yorker Jackets" are leading the "Irish" by the slim advantage of one point in their race for the coveted second position, which also carries the right be a play-off berth. As the situation stands when the "Irish" meet the Albert boys they must win or a tie will be good enough for them to remain second with their held on the second berth. While the Albert boys likewise must win this game or be counted out. It is a tough spot for the Irish, for they have already played a one-all tie during their last meeting, but this will be the game of excitement and thrills.

When the Deacon D. C. Iremlins cagers defeated the Napanee "Grads" 73 of 19 Friday night they improved their offensive play over the week previous, when they only scored 72 points. No matter how

If Harold March, who you know better as "Mush," had only been left-handed he would be in the major ranks. Mush is having the time of his life playing with the Jim-Jams. On a squad which numbered ten good forwards this year, Loughlin could call only upon Midget March—who shot from the right-hand side. Jams had to turn up or two of his southpaws into right-handers to help March on his side of the boards.

Bill Tobin, business manager of the club, tells an amusing story of how "Mush" was signed. Tobin was angling for March's name on a Christmas contract, while the young star was a Western Union telegraph messenger boy. The puck chaser turned down a $200 cheque which Tobin offered as inducement. The manager was then hoisted a few March dollars, armed with $,000 $1.00 bills which he proceeded to count out temptingly under Marsh's nose. By the time he got to 4,500 "Mush" was through. He asked for a fountain pen and signed on the dotted line. Thanks to Mark ever since.

Like many other star hockey players, he is a smart golfer, missing the links crown of Saskatchewan still by only a few strokes. His now margin of an 18-inch putt. His inability to sink that pellet still gives Harold nightmares 'tis said.

Soor the opposition, it is quite a task to defeat the Jims in two successive cage games. Incidentally the Jim-Jam cagers are progressing nicely and were runners-up to the championships last night, but Dame Fortune frowned on the individual players are casting eager glances toward the silver shot too often, being too anxous to shine as individual scorers. Those youngsters should realize that victory can only comes through the united efforts of every player, from the last sub to the star performer, and it is team play that wins rather than individual efforts of so many stars.

The St. Michael's senior Intercollegiate basketers muffled an opportunity to display their wares to humours, without sustaining a loss, when they dropped their first game to Picton C. I. by the score of 50 to 28 Friday. The "Irish" are still on top of the Inter-Collegiate heap, and could have assured themselves of the group title with a win.

Not a single item of interest is being put on the programme to be presented at the Arena on Thursday night during the mammoth charity ice carnival staged under the auspices of the Victorian Order of Nurses. Fancy and figure skating by the members of the Belleville Skating Club, a burlesque hockey match between the policemen and an amalgamated team of local service clubs, a fancy school race, trick and clown skating acts, and dancing every minute, promises to make a great carnival which is open to all and everyone from nine to ninety. The motto of the carnival is "Pack all your troubles in your old kit bag and come to the Belleville Arena for a real honest to goodness smile and gala night of fun and frivolity." Special music is being provided by the Belleville Juvenile Orchestra and the project has become a civic enterprise with tickets going like hot cakes. The Arena will be gayly decorated with flags, bunting while special colorings in the lighting will also add to the night's kaleidoscope in various colors. The largest crowd, since the appearance of the Toronto Skating Club in Belleville some years ago, is being prepared for.

Dale Plays The Game

—BY—

Ann Forester

CHAPTER 4

DALE MEETS AN OLD FRIEND

One day in early spring found Dale aimlessly sauntering along a downtown street, She often went downtown by herself. A stimulating literary obliquity furnished a pretext for going to bet when she liked to walk in the crowds like this, losing herself in the personalities of other people. For hours she would wander about, aimlessly window shopping, or taking much time to buy trifles in the stores. Today she had bought a novelty handbag, an edgewood affair, which cost two whole weeks of eating allowance in the old days.

There had been a spring shower. Chains of puddles stretched across the street giving back the cloudy skin of the sky. Dale, like dozens of others, had sought refuge under an awning. She was weighing a girl with a thin sugar face and a shabby young fellow, evidently by appointment, under the same awning.

"Late as usual!" the girl had chided gaily as the boy came up. "And I'm starved. Where do we eat?"

"You mean, how do we eat—" he returned grinning, "—on a dollar and a half?"

"Pooh! That's coolies!" She had been shy about it. "I'll show you how to eat on a dollar and take in a movie, too!"

The couple had moved off, and in ann, never guessing that they were fodder for the wistful gaze of the girl in the expensive fur coat. Once she had been just as contented and happy. Dale thought. Oh, the times she had met Phil like that and taken charge of their frenzied finances. Yes, they could manage. A cafeteria—no! Hadley restaurant!

With a 90c taste d'hote—then a thrifty run picture house. They could sit close, in the warm dark, hand in hand through the thrilling love scenes. Oh; $1.80 was a fortune when one had youth and hope and Phil.

Phil . . . Dale hadn't thought much about him lately. He was beginning to merge into that hazy youth of hers which had taken on the far aluminum of distance. She looked back on that time of struggle now, a time seriously. Days of strain and heartache—but vividly gloriously alive! Even Phil was veiled by the necromancy of distance. In that moment Dale remembered not the selfish Phil Clifford who had thrust her aside that he might climb, but the handsome laughing boy who had swung down the streets beside her, or perched companionably on the high stools of cheap oyster shops. Phil and herself—alone. Together, always with youth gilding smoothly over a polished dance floor.

These was nothing disloyal to Randall in these thoughts, Dale told herself quickly, Phil belonged to that part of her life that Brant had never possessed. Because that part had been a part of her life which did not include Brant when every moment now centered on him . . .

The days when she had known—and thought she loved Phil—might have been the lot of any other poor girl. Cold days had dropped an abrupt curtain on that life . . . and when it woke up again, there was Brant Randall, big and brown and compelling, holding the stage—and her heart.

Dale was weaving slowly through the crowd as she thought this and suddenly startled by someone grasping her elbow. Someone was crying, "Dale! Dale! Well of all things!"

Lil . . . Yes, the old dresser herself, huskier than ever. Her prominent chin was red, and had blue marbles—the fattened ends of her cheekbones—showing under the cheap satin hat.

But if Dale was surprised, Lil was petrified. This, Dale Brant whom she had left drooping in a cheap country hotel! Lil's eyes raked over the slender fur wrapped figure, clung to the smooth sheen of hair glimpsed under the small corset hat. There was a softness to the eyes, a remote nurse to the face which the tired hungry Dale had lost in the other time. There was a genuine sweetness to the mouth which had been sly-roguishly bitter. All these things Lil saw, without quite comprehending them. She understood the obvious cost of the fur coat the smart cut of the kid slippers—these spoke their own story to the veteran, and Lil's grin was worldly wise.

"Well, you sure have made the job I had you settin' out to land you a soft one! I've seen lots of girls went to work in drug stores and hick restaurants but they didn't wear current coats an' imported hats. How many oil wells did you land in, Dale—how many?" Lil Cole, wasn't that its name?"

Dale smiled. "No oil wells, Lil. One husband, that was all."

"Married!" Lil spoke to say they raise 'em like that out there! An' me both enough to come away to Hawaii for! Dale, you really an' truly married?"

"Truly and truly, Lil. I'm Mrs. Brant Randall now." Strange how glad Dale was to have played through Dale's heart at that! Even so long after her marriage the mere mention of Brant's name could do that! Briefly she sidetracked for Lil the events which had happened since Lil had walked out of the stuffy room at the Coal City hotel and left a sullen tired Dale on the bed.

How good it seemed to be talking to someone who understood—someone with whom she didn't have to be on her guard as she was always on guard with Mimi. Lil was her own kind. She knew that world of grease paint and struggle. She need to explain herself with every other word to Lil. Lil knew.

Lil shook her head helplessly when Dale finished.

"Well, kid, you know what you was about an' I didn't! Somehow I always figured you'd make the grade. You're class, Dale."

"Tell me about yourself." Dale argued. "Are you still on the road?"

"Me, I'm about yourself." Dale argued. "Are you still on the road?"

"Tell me about yourself." Dale argued. "Are you still on the road?"

Lil shook her head carelessly. "Especially show people. Only surprise is we didn't bump into each other before. What am I doing? Well, right now I'm resting. Herbert wanted to sign me up for his new review but I got something better in mind so I'm just restin'."

The old brave Dale . . . how it flashed back like that! Dale! The brave, impetuous girl about nib producers trying with each other and the rest, which meant that the rent wasn't paid and one missed many meals.

Yes, under the brave pretense there was a saddened shrinking at the sight of an alley ton who looked many battles. Her kid slippers were run over and there was a run in one ample chiffon stocking. The fur satin hat was obviously a marked down special selected from a disgusting stock table—how well Dale remembered!

The other girl was suddenly ashamed of standing here in silk and furs, well fed—well cared for. Dale had to unite with me, Lil." Dale said impulsively. How much a good lunch can mean when one is out of work!

But Dale avoided the big hotels where Mimi might be dining with the supercilious Cecile, and she steered Lil into the nearest commercial restaurant. Dale hated herself for noticing but her newly sharpened sense of taste told her that ravenous Lil might.

Dale was fully aware of men's glances following them as they shreaded their way through the room to a table in the rear. Appraising glances with scarcely veiled meanings which Dale knew all so frequently encountered and which Mrs. Brant Randall had almost forgotten.

Lil had a wordy bout with the waiter as to where her chair should face and Dale felt her cheeks growing hot. She tried to meet the gaze complacently across the room and felt her heart leap painfully. Over there, dining with another man—was Brant.

CHAPTER 41

PARTING OF THE WAYS

Dale felt herself leaning forward in a girlish gad exclamation on her lips. Her face lit up. Between Brant and herself she felt that little glad flame playing — that flame which always flared into life when she saw him unexpectedly. Brant — look over here—there, he'd almost turned then! But no—he'd shifted his shoulder so it shut her out. He was leaning across to the other man, talking rapidly, holding his attention . . .

And Dale suddenly felt the light die out of her face. felt dead grey ash.

Even from here she could see the unusual flash of Brant's head. Why he was brick red—spreading under the tan of his skin. Even his ears flushed . . . He had sent her. He was avoiding her lest she bring to keep the other man from looking over . . . .

His ankles free of their bonds, Tarzan was upon his feet. He called the elephant to him. Tantor a swaying bough to the back of Tantor and then to the shoulder of Tarzan, who put his cheek close against the bronzed cheek of the great Tarmangani who was his master. Thus by blood in silent communion . . . . .

And now Numa came, making an agile leap from the shoulder of Tarzan, who put his cheek close against the bronzed cheek of the great Tarmangani who was his master. Thus by blood in silent communion . . . . .

England and Norway Collect Majority of Points as Fourth Olympic Winter Games End

Hockey Title Passes From Canadians For First Time

800,000 SEE GAMES

Norway Athletes Best In Skiing And Speed Skating

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 17 (CP)—In the symbolic Olympic flame's cold grey ash today, the fourth winter games were laid to rest and so was Canada's undisputed supremacy in hockey.

The international torch-bearer came in a close and flag-waving pageantry and symbolic speech-making yesterday after the storm-tossed Canadian hockey team stunned the United States 14-0 to give England her first championship in that sport, and Norway's great Birger Ruud secured a way with his second straight ski-jumping crown.

There were a couple of hours or wild excitement at the end as it proved of 130,000 almost risked their frenzy to get out of the ski stadium. Adolf Hitler and other fat dignitaries were present and exits were blocked by heavy-handed guards until the Reichschancellor and his party departed. Two persons were injured, a police child and scores bruised or scratched.

Today, however, the calm of the surrounding Bavarian Hills again was upon the Alpine villages and there were few reminders of the 1,000,000 or more, who had come here for the 15 days of sports. With paid admission estimated at 800,000, the games seemed to have been a financial success.

Foster Amity

Excepting the hockey series, it seemed they had been a success also in fostering amity among the nations. A series of arguments included the series in which Canada dropped the hockey title to an English team, bolstered by six ex-Canadians and handled by a sympathized bench of the Dominion. They ranged from the unconfirmed slightly of the two English players to a play-off system, that sent the Maple Leaf viewers to the final at a disadvantage that proved insurmountable.

The hockey took root last summer, when Jim Foster and Alec Archer of Winnipeg hit the Dominion to join English clubs without abiding by the Canadian Amateur Association's senior rules. The International Hockey Federation met in February and the suspension that occurred in this suspension but at the request of President M. A. Gilroy

LED FINNS HOME—Solo Nurmela of Finland, who started his career to victory in the 40-kilometer ski-running relay race, is shown here above. Finland's hardy ski experts captured the race by the exact margin of six seconds from Norway. Veiko Nurmela, Klaes Karppinen, Martin Lusse and Kalle Jalkanen, running in that order, covered the 34.94 miles in 2 hours, 41 minutes, 23 seconds to earn Finland's first points in the Olympic proceedings. Sweden's team finished two minutes behind Norway to make a clean sweep of the honors of the main events in the event.

FAT GLOVER—Centre forward and leading scorer of Grimsby Town F.C., led the way last year to all other club members by finding the twine behind opposing goalkeepers no less than 34 times in the 43 games he played. Glover is the type of centre forward dear to the Dubbermen's fans like. Speedy both he fears no defence and his hustling tactics when hitting the defence often make opposing foe his prey inside.

of the C.A.H.A., did as a sporting gesture, the suspension were waived for duration of the winter games.

Canada at Disadvantage

Things rolled smoothly, if comically in a couple of instances, for a while. There was the occasion when an excited French hockeyman took a bite of a Hungarian back or ear or something during a moment of hot competition. Then in the preliminary game in which Italy blanked the United States 1-0, the referee and linesmen had a way of flicking the cryptogram off American Goalie Smith. Without his specs he was blind as a bat is supposed to be in daylight. But there were light in vain.

However, when England almost society on the brilliant goal-tending of Foster trounced the Canucks 2-1 in a semi-final match and the title-defenders had to shoulder their way into the finals after a stormy hockey meeting, nerves became taught and what was just a word in the dictionary.

Score Seven Wins

The Maple Leafs, trying to pull the title from the fire and maintain a string of Canuck triumphs dating back to the inception of the winter Olympics in 1920, did the best they could in the last round. They had their opponents to 37 flit their record for the full series to seven wins and their one amazing loss in Goalkeeper's hands.

All the Old Country side had to do down the home stretch was whip the Czechoslovakians, pretty much of a setup and hold the Americans to a tie, which they did Saturday night, when neither team scored. That gave them five wins and two ties. When Dave Neville of Montreal scored against the stirring Americans in the last game yesterday, that cinched the game and England's championship stanzas-couply.

The determined and strong-backed clan Norway sent to the games scooted off with the mythical team title. Hindu's richly earned triumphs in the ski jump and combined downhill-slalom race, Birger Ballangrud's remarkable feat in capturing three speed-skating events and the Norway relay crown that fell to Sofja Henie and her twinkling feet led the way.

Norway Mush the Best

On the unofficial scoring basis of 10 points for a win, five for second and graduated down the line to sixth place, the Norsemen led the 20 competing nations with 146 points, Germany some more with 117, then Sweden with 49, Finland 41, United States 35 1-2, Switzerland 30 Austria 29 1-2, Great Britain 26, France 11, Canada 9, Czechoslovakia and Hungary 7, Belgium 5, Japan and Italy 3 Poland 2.

Five of Canada's points came with the second place in the Maple Leaf hockey crew coached by Albert Pudas look behind England-Lilla Montgomery Wilson, Toronto got three by placing fourth in the Miss's figure skating singles, won by the redoubtable Karl Schaefer of Austria. The other was due to the sixth place in the Pairs skating contested by Louise Dupont and Stewart Reburn, Toronto that crown went to Maxie Herber and Ernest Baier of Garmisch.

To the shouted acclaim and plaps of 40 thousands, Ruud swung down the ski hill Sunday for leaps of 76 and 74.5 meters (246 and 244.2 feet). His form was better perfect and he earned 228 of the possible 240 points. Snowy, stick-nosed under a warm sun made little difference. Second was Birger Ruud, Norway, with Meckle jumps of 240 feet, four inches and his form could not match that of the Norwegian birdman.

Third Mckenzie of Vancouver took 14 place for Canada by scoring 214.6 and was followed by Mood Andersen, Karl Saadnes and Norman Gagne were 34 and 37th respectively. The forward jumps were 212.5 and 72 meters, while Gagne jumped 69 and 67 meters.

Canada's other blade-riders, Jeff Hall of Montreal and Bud Clark, Ottawa, did not compete. With Mckenzie and Haddock they previously placed in the slalom, 18-kilometer and tried in the jump event combined with the latter. Clark acted his best in the 50 Kilometer marathon also but Canadian hearts and limbs could not keep pace with those of the Scandinavians, literally born with skis on their feet.

Ballangrud Wins Three

Of the more than 1,000 athletes, who gathered from the four corners of the globe, none shone with the lustre of the quiet, mild-mannered Birger Ballangrud. Four speed skating races were on the program and he won three of them — at 500, 5,000 10,000 meters — either equalling or breaking Olympic records each time. His countrymen, Charles Mathisen, swung down the ice lane first in the 1,500 meters and Ballangrud was right in his shadow for second place.

Tommy White, a 26-year-old St. Johns athlete, was the Dominion's only racing skater. He could not find a place among the eight winners but the good form he displayed seemed to hold promise for future.

A new star in the making arose in the women's figure skating. It was Cecilia Colledge, a tall English girl from Miss, who made the world-renowned Sonja Henie and Vivi Pede and retrace at her pace, less best to win her third Olympic crown. In the final tabulation Miss Henie had 434.5 points and the coming English star 418.1.

Other attendance Wilson Samuels of Toronto, who carried Canada's flag in the opening and closing ceremonies, was eliminated by illness.

She started out impressively with the red hot ball collapsed after a few courageous minutes bronchitis having sapped her strength.

Jimmy Foster is Individual Star Olympic Games

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 17.—(CP)—In the top flight of individual stars of the fourth Olympic winter games, in line with such international celebrities as Sonja Henie, Karl Schaefer, Birger Ruud and Ivar Ballangrud, stood a Canadian hockey player today. There was no greater star in these games than Jimmy Foster of Winnipeg.

It was Foster, who won the hockey championship for England, who took the title away from his own Canada for the first time in history. It was he, who directly brought about the most amazing upset of the games. No other star in the games worked under the handicap he carried.

If some dazzling young lady had stepped on the ice and thrown away Sonja Henie's figure skating title there would have been a second astonishing upset to take rank with Canada's defeat at hockey. But Miss Henie wasn't beaten—and Canada was.

Seen in England

Jimmy Foster, who started to work in the Canadian Pacific Railway shops at Winnipeg played junior hockey on the side of the Atlantic last fall, when he went to England from Montreal, St. A. and joined the Richmond Hawks. Although he was born in England, Canada has brought up and learned to play goal in Winnipeg.

His had achieved as much in Canadian amateur hockey as any player could expect. He was selected to be a superior netman in 1931, when he moved from Winnipeg to Moncton and joined the powerful Hawks of the Maritime Hockey Association. Canada's title hopes rested with the Moncton team.

In the spring of 1933 the Hawks won the Allan Cup and Canadian senior championship. They travelled across Canada to Vancouver for the finals in which Foster did not permit the western champions, Halcyon Canada, a single goal in two games.

Moncton repeated their national conquest in 1934 with Foster in the nets and whipped Detroit White Stars, United States amateur champions, in a series for the North American championship. England is the second country Jimmy has represented in international hockey affairs.

Fall Under Ban

When he went to England last Fall he fall under the ban of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association but Canadian officials had made representations in his behalf and his application, subsequently applied by the International Ice Hockey Federation, was lifted to allow him to play for England.

And Jimmy thanked Canada by stopping the tournament for England. The 30-year-old Winnipeg ace set up an astonishing record in the seven games his team played. He allowed only three goals to be scored on him, registering four shutouts.

In front of him was a team with little scoring punch, an aggregation that was outplayed by Canada, the United States and Germany. That wasn't beaten because Foster was too good. Canada scored 37 times on him and Germany once. The third goal was scored by Rumpay after the English defence had worked him on the strength of a 5-0 lead.

England scored only 11 goals in seven games, compared to Canada's total of 84 in eight games. Sweden nearly beat England, Japan made a good showing, the United States got a scrubbing but it was England's last line of defence—padded Jimmy Foster—that failed to fall.

FOXBORO GAINS ONE GOAL LEAD

Winner of Round Will Meet West Huntingdon For Championship

Stirling Feb. 17 (Special)—The activities in the C. H. L. are slowly but surely drawing to a close. Last Tuesday saw Glen Ross definitely eliminated from the race being defeated by the league leading West Huntingdon crew.

On Friday night Bethel and Foxboro met in the first game of a home and home series with goals to count the winner to take of the league leader for the 1936 championship. Foxboro came through on good better in the scoring but the odds are still even. Bethel will begin strong until the final bell of the first game, subsided to take place next Tuesday. The crowd at this game was not a large one and many of the fans that have supported the teams throughout the season missed a real thrill. The score was 3-2 quite different from the last time these teams met when the score was 11-4.

The Game

Bethel started in at top speed hoping to run a few fast ones on the start. They held the upper hand in the early part of the first period, with many fine rushes by Simms and Miller. Foxboro was a little slow in getting into their stride. Simms opened the scoring after nine minutes of play sifting through on a lone rush, using Culhane for a threat, when right in on Seeley to beat him only. This goal was an opener for the Foxboro crew and they began to beat down. They pressed hard for the tying goal and had several good scoring chances but Dickey was unbeatable in the Bethel nets.

Starting the second period Foxboro began to rush the fast skating Johnston and Lee, but Bethel watched the close and broke up rush after rush in a classy exhibition of defensive play. Lee drew the first penalty of the game and with the extra man advantage Bethel tried hard to get another goal and in one of these dangerous rushes Kokesh was injured and had to leave the ice for repairs. Culhane got the gate for a minor offence and Foxboro went to town in an attempt to get even terms but the score. They went into the last period on an even basis, both teams played cautiously waiting for the breaks.

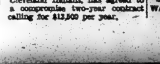
Simms put Bethel one up on a nice rush and Foxboro turned on the steam. They failed to on that one goal lead until there were only a few minutes left to play. Kokesh recovered from his injury early in the game returned to the ice in time to figure in the play, which saw Foxboro the tying goal. Johnston went right through but fell as he was about to shoot and Kokesh batted it past Dickey to make it two all. Both teams opened up again and Johnson finally got the winning goal on a pass from Lee. It was a real thrilling game and the fans went home with the idea, that the series is far from being decided yet. The team to play the league leading West Huntingdon crew for the championship and all the fancy silverware, that goes with it, will be decided in the next game, which is scheduled for Tuesday night when they join that game with a one goal advantage but Bethel are a long way from being through yet.

Line-ups

Bethel — goal, Dickey; defense Cranston and Culhane, centre, Simms, wings Lapiniette and Miller, alternates, R. Dickey, Calvert, Quay and Hall.

Foxboro — goal Seeley, defense Caverley and Ketcheson, centre Lee, wings Kokesh and Johnson; alternates, Chapelle, Quay brothers and Hall.

Referee — Pat Scollie, Stirling.



Mel Harder

HARDEN SIGNS—Though he had announced he wanted $15,000 for pitching in 1936, or "the same as Wes Ferrell got," Mel Harder, 26-year-old ace hurler of the Cleveland Indians, has agreed to a compromise two-year contract calling for $13,000 per year.

Cpl. Scott Act WHO BEAT CANADIANS—Canada went down to defeat in the Olympic hockey series in Germany, and responsibility must be placed upon Jimmy Foster, ex-Winnipeg, ex-Moncton Hawk goal-keeper star, who headed the brine for England. Declared ineligible to play under the Union Jack along with Alex Archer, also of Winnipeg, but later reinstated upon request, from the Canada executive, Foster withstood a literal rain of rubber in England and Canada tussle and turned back every thrust bit con. Canada was beaten 3-1, though the wearers of the Maple Leaf sifted through The British puck-chasers almost all will. They couldn't beat Foster their fellow country man, Foster is shown here in the British Olympic uniform.

Empire Defence Minister To Co-ordinate Services Will be Named Shortly

171 Back-Benchers Urge Government to Define Steps

SHARES RISE

Defence Outlay to Reach $1,400,000,000 in 3 or 4 Years

BY GEORGE HAMILTON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 18 (C.P. Cable) The cabinet faces some stiff hurdles on the great new defence debate that it has had master after meeting but has still made no announcement.

The dilemma is reconciled to the idea, unwelcome though it may be, of an armaments program of around $36,000,000 (about $1,620,000,000) in a three or four years' period.

But there is serious uneasiness among the ranks, both over the present separate administration of the three fighting services—especially after Friday's debate—and the violent of spending huge sums for battleships.

The move favoring co-ordination of the army, navy, and air force is increasing in strength. Rear Admiral Sir Murray Sueter's proposal to create a new post of secretary of defence may be regarded as definitely set aside. Anyway he has been given, rather, to the proposal to name a cabinet minister to control the committee, for imperial defence, which would become subordinate to co-ordinating the services.

2 Monitored for Feet

Indeed it is taken for granted now that a minister will be appointed to this duty. The names of Winston Churchill, Lord Stanley Derby and Sir Samuel Hoare are bandied about for the post. The latter, Sir Samuel Hoare, is the present chief secretary for Air.

MANY MAIL BOXES FILLED WITH SNOW

"The mail is going through" stated Postmaster J. V. G. Truaisch this morning commenting on the fact, the conditions faced by rural mail carriers at the present time, is the most difficult for a time, but most of the roads have been opened up and deliveries are being made with satisfaction. The biggest trouble we are here, is getting the rural residents to keep their mail boxes clear of snow. Many of them have been drifted and filled with snow, and some of the owners haven't taken the trouble to clear them. We are calling their attention to this," added Mr. Truaisch.

MEASLES ATTACK A MAJORITY OF STUDENTS

The epidemic of measles extended to capture a number of Stirling amateur actors who were to take part in the Dramatic Society Drama Festival here this week-end. Consequently they had to withdraw their entry, Merrill Denison's "Brothers in Arms." The same play will be presented, however, by a Napanee group in addition to their production of "Cleopatra" and "Iolanthe."

Communities in Prince Edward County are still hedged with high snow drifts, and rural roads are blocked in many sections, it was stated today at the office of the Picton Gazette in response to an query by long distance telephone. Question of Reduction in Hydro Rates is Discussed

At the meeting of the Belleville Hydro-Commission, Tuesday, the question of holidays of the outside permanent staff was brought up by the chairman, Commissioner G. H. Reid, who stated that he understood that the outside staff receives one week's holidays yearly, while the inside staff receives two weeks' vacation. Enterprise Man Falls Into Fire Pit

◆ POLICE BLOTTER ◆

Activities were none too brisk in and around local police circles during the past 24 hours.

The only disturbance recorded in the city proper, was a complaint received by the city police, that a motorist was being held in custody all night, but liberated at an early hour this morning on order, that he might return to his daily labours. He was instructed to appear in Friday's police court at which time he will be officially charged under the L. C. A.

Only three transients braved yesterday's snow storm and eventually found shelter to remain overnight in Belleville. The trio slumbered peacefully in the cell block last night and were liberated early today.

R. T. GILLESPIE DIES IN WISCONSIN

Former Belleville Cheese-buyer Was Manager of Large Plant

Robert Thomas Gillespie, well known as a buyer of cheese at Belleville for a number of years and manager of the Kraft-Phoenix Corporation at Wisconsin Rapids, Wisconsin, U.S. for the past 13 years, died yesterday at his home in Wisconsin Rapids.

News of his death came as a great shock to Belleville cheese buyers and the farming community in general.

First notice of his death came in a telegram to Mr. John McCarthy, secretary of The Belleville Lodge No. 123 A.F. and A.M. which stated that Mr. Gillespie died yesterday. It was intimated that he would be buried at Wisconsin Rapids. Wisconsin under Masonic auspices. Mr. Gillespie was a member of The Belleville Lodge.

The late Robert Gillespie who was numbered among the leading citizens in the cheese industry of Wisconsin gained his knowledge of this industry through a long term of experience. He was described by experts in this line as one of the art of accepting, aging, curing and marketing the finer cheese.

Born at Roslin, Mr. Gillespie entered the cheese business in this district in his early manhood and was graduated from the Eastern Ontario Dairy School, Kingston, as a full fledged cheese maker. Soon after he carried on the combination of cheese making and buying. Later he returned to Montreal and for some years in the city he acted as cheese inspector for the province chiefly with overseas exportations. Before he left Belleville he was the Belleville Cheese Board where for several years he was a buyer for the late Alex Grant, of Montreal, one of the leading exporters of the industry.

In 1894 the late Mr. Gillespie, offered a more attractive position with the Kraft-Phoenix Company, left for the west and finally settled in Wisconsin Rapids, Wisconsin, acting as agent for the same company. He brought with him his reccommendation of more than twenty-four year's experience in choosing grading and preparing cheese for export market. The plant of which he was in charge at Wisconsin Rapids had storage capacity of between four and five million pounds of Cheddar cheese per year.

In Wisconsin, credit was given to Mr. Gillespie in which he largely responsible for the high reputation Cheddars of that state enjoyed, as he built up the plant to a preeminent position.

The late Mr. Gillespie is still well remembered by those connected with the industry in this section. He was recalled today by Mr. James Irwin, local Dominion Dairy Grader, and Mr. Adam Cook, local cheese buyer, as one the most ambitious, energetic and adaptable men in the industry. To his associates he was familiarly termed "Bob."

Baker's Garage Opens New Spacious Quarters

Entertaining truck owners and drivers at an impressive banquet and programme in their new spacious quarters on Dundas street, Trenton, Baker's Garage was opened under auspicious surroundings last night. Large numbers from truck owners and drivers availed themselves of the opportunity of congratulating themselves more fully with the tire industry, when a social gathering of the latter industry was given by Mr. Carl Kidd, of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, who was the chief speaker of the night.

Clifford Baragar, manager of Baker's service and garage stations occupied the chairman's seat, while Mr. C. N. Baker officially welcomed those present. The program included an Amos 'n' Andy act, morning pictures, including a comedy and a short, and the production of Goodyear tires, also card tricks by Mr. Les Pound, which proved most amusing and mystifying. Luncheon concluded the evening's programme. Mr. Kidd, the principal speaker was introduced by Roy Gibbon, local Goodyear representative.

Door prizes were won by V. N. Smith and Percy Gibson while those present received gifts and souvenirs in miniature tire records and an ash tray.

5 "STOP SIGNS" ARE DESTROYED

Police Believe Destruction to be Wilful And Not Necessary

The wilful destruction of stop street signs in Belleville has become prevalent of late and resulted in considerable trouble and cost to the city. Reports to the police were received to police today. Last night five constructed stop signs on the south side of Victoria Ave., from John St. to Charles St. were either bent over so that they were broken off close to the base. It is believed to have been the work of members of sleigh-driving parties, alleged the City Engineer.

"Every time we hear of a sleigh drive party in Belleville, we can always be assured of numerous stop signs being reported bent over or broken the next morning. The stop sign at the corner of Bridge and Bridge Streets has been either bent over or broken on five different occasions this winter and we do not intend allowing this practice to continue," the police stated. Sergeant Mott as he reported last night's occurrence to the police for further investigation today.

Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard was also detailed to investigate the matter and later reported that a sleigh party had passed the spot as well as the adult driver will be further questioned in order that we may determine the guilty culprits continue until they are apprehended, when remedial action will be taken.

$12,569.61 Paid in Relief For January, Figures Given To Council by Ald. Lewis

Statement Also Given of Cost Administering Relief Last Year

THREE BY-LAWS

Agreement For Bus Service in City Ratified by Council

For the first time in many sessions, the City Council did not have one recommendation to make on accepting those passed at the committee meeting, when the regular session of that body was held last night. The council spent some time in the committee rooms considering a number of questions before they were submitted to the council and consequently the session did not start until nine o'clock and finished was concluded shortly before eleven o'clock. Those present were Mayor Hill, Aldermen Wills, Baker, Mahan, Jennings, Safa, Clapp, Dodsworth, Oakland, Barker, Armstrong and Leyis, Aldermen Baragar and Thompson were absent.

Relief Bill Submitted

The relief bill for the month of January was submitted to the council. Apparently the account was considered by committee at length for, it was not read in council, a motion being passed to accept the same as given but in another column will be shown the specific items that go to make up the total of, $12,569.61. The account is itemized according to the vouchers received through the voucher system.

After hearing a letter from the City Solicitor in which the matter is covered by the building by-law, it was decided that the council had no power to refuse the application to erect gasoline pumps on Dundas street, the pumps in question to be erected by the applicants, subject to inspection of the Fire Engineer and Chairman of Public Works. The application for permit was refused by the City Solicitor and the ruling was received from the City Solicitor.

A lengthy letter from W. B. Deacon, in his capacity as improvement on the waterfront and a resolution passed by the Rotary Club, recommending that improvements was filed. Alderman Safa, stated that his department was doing all in every way to give any information, that would be required in the carrying out the scheme. It is proposed to have a blue print struck and that the work be commenced in the early Spring.

A request for the holding of a Tag Day by the Salvation Army in the City Hall grounds was granted by the council and the date set at May 16. This has been a usual custom for years. A letter was received from the Institute for the Blind requesting the council according to custom the amount of money spent in this city of educating the blind was affected with blindness was received and on motion of Alderman Armstrong was referred to the committee on estimates. At that time the grant will be considered. The Alderman expressed themselves in favor of the work done by this institution.

Contract Awarded

Charles J. Mott, city Engineer, reported on the standing of Elmer French with respect to his contract for moving the garage now on the city's present location in Foster Ward. The City Engineer also stated he was still owing to Mr. French $650.00 but that against this amount there were various items amounting to $180.40. The whole matter was referred to the City Solicitor and the Chairman of Public Works for the necessary action, and authorization for the paying of these accounts.

G. M. Hill was sold a lot at the northeast corner of Simcoe street and Dundas Street for the sum of $500.00. It is proposed by Mr. Hill erect a suitable building on the property in the near future. Deeds in the hand of enquiries. Alderman Baleman asked if anything had been done on the motion submitted at last meeting by him requesting the City Solicitor to prepare a by-law for the city. Alderman Lewis read from a report made by the City Treasurer showing the relief administration had cost the city last year a sum of $8,258.23 made up of the following items, salaries $5,097.25, Stationery and printing $149.14, Railway Transportation $37.75, Bank interest $1,277.94, rents in excess of that allowed by the government, $246.57, compensation, doctors' bills, and hospital accounts for Harry Baylis, $1,369.00, same for H. Cerbull, $227.10, same for A. VanAlkyne, $11.35. Alderman Baleman then asked for the name of the owners of the property that were receiving the excess rents and Alderman Lewis promised to supply the information at the next meeting.

Tenders Passed

Turning to the gas question, Alderman Baleman enquired if a statement recently issued from the Ontario Shore Gas Company was an audit or a book statement. Ald. Wills asked "did the City of Sutton sign the statement". Alderman Jennings who is chairman of gas answered in the affirmative. Then Alderman Wills declared "it is audit or a book". A motion that 10,000 letter wonders be purchased by the Printing and Stationery Committee from the lowest tenderer was passed.

Three by-laws were introduced and passed through the various stages. The agreement between Bell Telephone and the City of Belleville, for the operation of a bus service in the city was ratified and a by-law was passed covering the same. A by-law to give a quit claim deed to associated Quality Canners for a piece of property near their plant and one to authorize the closing of a part of Elizabeth Street, was passed without discussion. Alderman Arnott was in the chair in the committee of the whole and on by-laws.

STEEL INDUSTRY SUBJECT OF TALK

R. C. Manning and Tom Boyce of Toronto Tell Rotary What it Means

Steel and what it means to Canada was shown to Belleville Rotary at the regular weekly meeting Monday in word and picture. Impressive pictures of the steel industry in Sydney, Nova Scotia, Sault Ste. Marie and Hamilton were shown in pictures on the screen and described in word by R. C. Manning, of Toronto, Secretary of the Canadian Institute Steel Construction, who with Tom Boyce of Toronto, an important executive in the Canadian steel industry, were guests of Belleville Rotary. The steel in the Belleville Arena and Collegiate Institute and Vocational School was fabricated and placed in position by the firm represented by Mr. Tom Boyce. Pictures of steel fabrication plants in different parts of Canada were shown, the whole thing giving a comprehensive idea of the importance of the steel industry to Canada and to society as a whole.

Millions Paid in Wages

Ten million dollars are paid out by the city in wages in the Canadian steel industry and as it takes six tons of ore to make one ton of finished steel, it can be seen at once that the contribution of steel in the building by transportation companies is considerable.

By word and picture Mr. Manning led his audience through the process of creating steel, from the iron ore to the finished product, and frame buildings in all parts of Canada, many of them constructed of 100 per cent Canadian steel. In addition steel three dollars go to Canada's national debt.

The various steel steel ore carriers and unloading devices and blank sheets in picture, demonstrated the progress of science in handling heavy objects quickly and efficiently.

Views of the steel mills in operation were shown and the various processes leading up to the finished article with the chief metallurgical and chemical precision of all processes were described in an interesting manner.

Views Shown

Many views of bridges and buildings in course of construction with finished buildings were shown, also views showing including the new Bank of Commerce building in Toronto, tallest building in the British Empire.

The tremendous importance to Canada of the steel industry was emphasized by Tom Boyce, Mr. Manning's description, illustrated by the pictures, and was a revelation of the advance made in manufacturing and building enterprises on a large scale in Canada during recent years.

Canada no longer has to depend upon the United States and Hogland and Scotland for steel for construction, the immense plants of the Canadian Steel Industry are noted for efficiency of equipment and high standard of capability in all lines.

An average steel plant covers at least 100 acres and many miles of railway tracks to facilitate the movement of large amounts of ore.

All in all the presentation of Messrs Manning and Boyce was impressive, showing as it did the massive-opener of the growth of industry in Canada and the part it values to the nation in payment of wages, freight, and purchase of materials, etc., in the country.

Sandy Burrows made the introductory remarks and Hamilton said the usual happy things afterwards voicing the appreciation of all present. President Dean Boyce also added his quota of approval.

MACDONALD WINS SEAT IN EDINBURGH—The Scottish Universities recently returned Ramsay Macdonald, former Premier of England, to parliament in the by-election caused by the death of Mr. Noel Skelton, Mr. MacDonald is shown here with Sir Alexander Grant, Lord Provost of Edinburgh University just after his election was made certain. He was previously defeated in general election.

YOUTH FREED FOR LACK OF EVIDENCE

Was Charged With Aiding Girl to Escape From Ontario Hospital

Cobourg, Feb. 18—Charges against Elmer Kidd of aiding an 18-year-old girl to escape from the Ontario Hospital here were dismissed yesterday because of insufficient evidence to establish Kidd had known she was a hospital patient. He was remanded until Thursday on a charge of breaking custody.

Walter MacKenzie testified he met the girl Dec. 10, on the street, and said she told him she had lost her job and wanted to go to her sister in Toronto. He said he did not know she was a patient and offered to ride with her. Failing to catch a freight that night, they stayed in a shack overnight and went to Toronto the following day by Kidd. They went to Toronto, where the girl's aunt told her to return to Cobourg. Kidd then returned alone. Provincial Constable W. J. Gould located the girl and Kidd in the shack Jan. 15, the girl wearing the boy's clothing. She was returned to the Ontario Hospital, and Kidd was brought to police office. When Kidd was arrested, he broke away from police, but was later recaptured.

Trenton and District

Trenton, Feb. 18—(Special)—At the inquest looking into the death of Joseph Alexander Munro, aged 20 of Colborne, who died in Belleville General Hospital on the night of February 9, from injuries sustained, near the western end of Trenton, while proceeding the same direction the Coroner's jury gave out the verdict of death resulting from accidental causes. J. W. Farley who was the first to render medical assistance to the boy, testified that he had several lacerations about the head, and that Dr. Kennedy of Belleville who performed the post mortem stated that the cause of death was from fractured skull, from hemorrhage and fluid on the lungs. The fluid on the lungs was from the brain hemorrhage. A local woman and a transport driver of Toronto testified that they had seen the boy on the night of the accident". Other witnesses to testify were: S. E. Mason of Picton, who informed the Holway Bros., gas station attendant of the object sprawled on the road. K. Demore, Collocott bus driver of Oshawa, who took the injured boy to the office of Dr. J. W. Farley and Chief Constable W. Bain who investigated. The Coroner's jury was composed of E. Wigmore, T. Taylor, G. Goodsell, C. Allore, E. Begin, N. J. McNair, R. Westfall and E. Couch. (Coroner) Dr. F. A. McQuade. B. C. Donnan acted for the Crown.

The local man who was charged with assaulting another local man at the Magistrate's Court last Monday appeared here today and as the complainant is still in the hospital the case was enlarged for a week. A local man was found guilty of being intoxicated in a public place and was fined $15.00 and on default of payment will receive 30 days in Belleville gaol. A local merchant pleaded guilty of speeding and paid $6.50 fine. Two local men were charged with being found in a public place intoxicated. One pleaded guilty and was fined $15.00. The other pleaded not guilty and as the Crown lacked evidence was remanded.

The man who pleaded guilty in the latter case was charged with assaulting a local man, and he pleaded not guilty of assault and as the Crown lacked evidence his case was enlarged till February the 24th.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (except Sunday) and Sunday morning by The Ontario Intelligencer Printing House Limited, Belleville.

WHAT POLICE HAVE DONE

The annual report of the Belleville police department for the past year shows 583 cases dealt with by the court, which is an increase of 59 over the previous year's figure.

Offences are what are largely to be found in any centre of this city's size, though the amount of serious crime is fortunately quite low. It is to be noted that intoxication brought 169 persons to court, which is quite a figure. Motor vehicle act infractions were fortunately not high. There were 59 cases of breaking and entering but police in most of these cases succeeded in cleaning up the thefts and secured convictions of many offenders.

The great army of men wandering up and down the country keeps on its tireless unending march of a day at a time from police station to police station for shelter. Some 3,473 persons were on the tramp during the year through Belleville. At least that total received shelter.

Those who like to think of the thoroughness with which the police sift cases and with which the courts administer justice have but to realize that out of 593 cases, there were 84 cases discharged or dismissed, and eight withdrawn. Some of the disposals of cases were—188 paid fine and costs, 108 were committed to jail without option; 97 committed to jail in default, 42 cases of suspended sentence, 5 sentences suspended on paying costs, 10 bound over to keep the peace, 4 ordered to leave the city and a few other items.

Canadians of course constituted the great majority of those brought to court.

The age of the offender is interesting. Under 16 years of age were 75 cases, and between twenty and thirty 122 cases and in the next decade 149. The younger persons still hold the reputation for creating most of the work the police have to perform.

The record of recovery of stolen property averages quite well with the police in other places. During the year the police recovered lost and stolen property to the amount of nearly $13,000. It must be admitted however that thefts were in this total a number of motorcars.

Altogether the report made by Chief Constable Kidd to the police commission is a very satisfactory one. Belleville is law-abiding as the lack of disturbances shows. There are those individualists who offend the laws and these give the police a considerable portion of their work to do.

But a report like this cannot really tell the thousand and one things a police department does for the sake of law and order and for the welfare of the individuals. Many of these have been rendered by the custodians of the law, warnings to youths have brought good results. The police force is not only a deterrent to crime but it encourages and helps many in a constructive way.

POLICE AND THE CAMERA

If one opens a camera eye for ever so brief a space of time, something is going to be photographed. So it has been found by the police. A movie enthusiast had a small camera in operation at the time of the Royalist riots at a funeral. The police seized the camera, developed the film and have a clear picture of participants in the affair. Arrests have been easy with the telltale view.

Montreal Gazette, pointing out that the Regina riots were caught in a camera picture which showed a man beating a constable, with a shovel, remarks "Perhaps it would be advisable for the police to take cameramen with them whenever and wherever disturbance is anticipated. Pictures are witnesses which do not commit perjury."

It would not surprise people to realize some day that this may be done. Police are using scientific adjuncts and aids in their work, so that the moving camera is not to be looked upon as something which cannot be used with advantage by the police. Indeed it seems strange that it has not been used before in such cases. Still pictures are now in use by police.

For a clue as given in a camera picture at once puts the police in possession of primary information of great value. Perjury as many may know always describes another man picture. But the camera can. It gives the police something to work upon, and that is all that most police departments require.

CHARACTER FIRST

Transfer of emphasis from "book knowledge" to character in teachers has been urged in the city of New York. Dr. George J. Ryan told the Jewish Teachers' Association that such a shift of emphasis would produce an even greater general school system. He declared that personality and character count more than the book knowledge on which teachers are now rated.

We should give as we would receive, cheerfully, quickly, and without hesitation, for there is no grace in a benefit that sticks to the fingers.—Seneca.

THAT AUTO HORN

Of all the useless noises which
We've heard since we were born:
We cite, among the very worst,
The raucous auto horn.
'Tis heard by day, 'tis heard by night,
'Tis heard at break of morn;
Just when we'd like a little rest—
There goes that auto horn.
And motorists, when making calls,
To use our doorbells scorn;
Instead, they sit there in the car,
And toot upon the horn.
We've lost our poise, and peace of mind,
Our nerves are frazzled-worn;
Pleas Board of Health, get on the job,
And squelch that auto horn!

ROUGH AND TOUGH BUT A FIRST CLASS NEWSPAPER MAN WAS HENRY J. SMITH managing editor of the Chicago Daily News since 1929, who died Saturday, February 8. His definition of NEWS was "News is a revelation of things which few people know and a crusade for the benefit of millions who would not otherwise know about those things. News is an unrhetorical essay on life, it is poetry without form and art without artistic intention. News is a record of the good and the bad, but hardly ever of the indifferent. News is an implement wielded by a profession which is no respecter of persons, but tries to be a respecter of human conventions, according to the standard of a given time."

He believed implicitly in the use of the newspaper as an educational medium and in the ability of readers to understand, assimilate and appreciate news as an educational force. The newspaper of the future, he said, would have to be founded upon a willingness to inform and educate. Henry Justin Smith served the Chicago Daily News for thirty-five years and attained national fame, contributing much to the prosperity and high status of the paper. He lived a useful life and his death was news in every daily newspaper in the United States—and sometimes a man's worth alive can be judged by the length and warmth of his obituary So let us live and strive to make the world better, ourselves worth while and extend a helping hand to the other fellow who is down and almost out. Then our demise may be news, sad news for many, but glad news for the many friends waiting just over the river which some call Death but which we would rather believe is Everlasting Life.

HEROES ARE NOT ALL BORN ON THE FIELD OF BATTLE. GLORY may spring from the lancet of the surgeon quicker than from the military sword, and a record of the trials, the story of heroism which has few parallels. Levi E. Folk died a few days ago at Columbus, O., aged sixty-six. This is the man, who, while a member of the Army Medical Corps in the Spanish-American war, volunteered to submit to experiments by Dr. Walter Reed to determine the cause of yellow fever, the most dreaded disease in the tropics until conquered by medical science and the sacrifice of heroes like L. E. Folk, and various medical men. Folk was isolated in a hut and slept for two weeks on bedding on which yellow fever patients had died, as a test. He did not take the disease. On January 18, 1901, he submitted to mosquito inoculation and contracted yellow fever on January 23. After his recovery he was bitten several times by infected mosquitoes to test his immunity. He was germ proof. Mosquito extermination stamped out yellow fever. Several years after his retirement the United States government awarded Folk a medal and a pension of $125 a month.

Parliament Hill Hears

By WILFRID EGGLESTON

Harry Bruster, former member for a Saskatchewan riding, now engaged in making a study of the election machinery for the present government tells a story about Sir Josiah Stamp which seems to be peculiarly appropriate this session.

Sir Josiah, eminent economist, well known to many Canadians, addressed a luncheon audience at Glenedon Hotel during the tour of the Interior Parliamentary Association, to which Mr. Butcher was a delegate. Sir Josiah remarked that a certain Business College in England advertised that they would teach any business in the world in three months for a fee of £50 ($200.)

One chap went to the manager of the College, and, calling attention to the "ad" said that he wished to be taught how to be the General Manager of a Railway Company.

The Manager was somewhat taken aback. "I'm afraid that's a tall order," he said. "But," he added, brightening, as a thought struck him, "in two months we can teach you how to become a Member of Parliament, and then you can tell all the general managers of the railway companies how to run their business!"

Judging from some notes of that empire parliamentary tour, which Mr. Butcher was kind enough to loan to me, the opportunities and privileges of the delegates were almost beyond description. Last year's delegation from Canada included Senators Dupuis, Black and Lacasse, Hon. R. D. Moran, C. N. Dorion, Dr. Beauchesne, Clerk of the House, and Premier MacDonald of Nova Scotia. And here are a few of the highlights of the tour:

Sessions in historic Westminster Hall . . . address by Premier Baldwin . . . reception by Lord Mayor of London at the Guildhall . . . air review at Duxford, their enclosure adjoining the Royal Box . . . visit to Cambridge . . . presentation to Their Majesties at Buckingham Palace . . . guests of the oldest guild in London . . . tea with the Prince of Wales . . . a tour over the British Broadcasting Corporation's building . . . guests of the Australian Tayloral Company . . . visit around the Fort of London . . . military review at Aldershot, one of the Silver Jubilee events . . . address by Rt. Lord Tweedsmuir . . . visited Swansea, Birmingham, Cardiff . . . taken along Manchester Ship Canal . . . guests of the Lord Mayor of Manchester . . . saw Queensway Tunnel and Liverpool Cathedral . . . at Royal Garden Party, Buck House . . . over the old Scottish Parliament House . . . through Ingham Palace . . . over the old Scottish Parliament House . . . through Lindisfarne Priory . . . A. C. Campbell and John W. Dafoe, both of whom were in the Press Gallery 30 years ago, were reminiscing together the other day. Mr. Campbell said that whenever the Liberal star appeared to be in the ascendant, there was no lack of ambitious young men desirous of some prominently associated with the party. There had been a Young Liberal Club in Toronto in the eighties, he said, which was in danger of being swamped by young men of the background and tradition not too politically Liberal but who were anxious to get aboard a ship that was going some place.

The Young Liberal Club, however, thought it was a bit thick when an elderly gentleman, with long whiskers and quite hard of hearing, made application to join.

He was challenged as to his eligibility, and was quite testy about it. "Does anyone disbelieve me?" he asked angrily. "Can an old man be frail? Do they know what I have done for the party? Why . . . "

The occasion called for tact. Mr. Campbell attempted to explain. "No," he broke in, "nobody doubts your loyalty, but, you see, this is a Young Liberal Club."

"My dear fellow," retorted Old Whiskers, triumphantly, "I was a Young Liberal long before you were born!"

Two hundred ardent supporters of the Junior Hockey team journey to Toronto to back up the boys in their return game with the team of St. Andrew's College. It was a fast and interesting game and resulted in a score of 4 to 3 in favor of St. Andrew's. However they failed to overcome the lead obtained by the Belleville boys last week and they are out of the finals. It would have done every heart good to have seen the old Bellevillians by the score throw all restraint to the winds and likewise their hats in the air. Indian Doctor to be Brought to Trial In Grisly "Devil's Beef Tub" Murders

Explosion Kills Details of Sunken Destroyer Murder Case

By Central Press Canadian

London, Feb. 18.—When police at Moffat, Scotland, found over 300 yards of human bodies stuffed into the recess of "The Devil's Beef Tub" there, they were confronted with a crime which might easily have been the inspiration for one which has shocked the whole of England and Scotland.

In Lagonda Bay, Indian doctor is charged with the murder of Dr. Buck Buchner, 30-year-old Indian physiologist. He is charged with the murder of his Scottish wife, Isabella, and their pretty 25-year-old nurse, Mary Jane Rogerson.

Though the bodies were found the remains of the human bodies in 30 parcels scattered over a wide area in the ravine in Dumfriesshire, it was the difficult task of scientists to prove that these fragments were the bodies of the two women. Buchner is charged with both slayings.

The hideous details of the crime were brought out in the preliminary hearing in Lancaster police court when Buchner was committed for trial on the charge of murdering Mary Jane Rogerson.

The investigation had extraordinary difficulties in piecing together the meagre clues to prove identification. One of the new tricks was a film photograph of the skulls and bones through photographs of the missing women. They were found to conform in every contour. Dr. Bernard Spilsbury, famous medico-legal expert, is one of the many scientists who will aid the prosecution to prove identification and seek out any trace of a scientific nature which might be used as a clue to the crime.

Cut On "Rule Expert"

Another cut was to a detective, "Young John" Glaister, professor of forensic medicine at Glasgow University, who was the expert sent to examine the fragments and has taken charge of the work of piecing them together.

The scientists encountered exceptional difficulties in their task with murderer removed every trace of personal identification and even with the eyes and destroyed the bones which would help to fix the age of the individual. But Glaister, who had made years of study of human hair, has identified the hair with beyond reasonable doubt. Glaister is able to say from examination of a single hair, whether it came from a male or female body, which part of the body it came from and whether it had been cut or pulled, whether the person was partially bald, fat that his defence

One of the most sensational and grisly murders since the days of Jack the Ripper and the Crippen case has shocked Britain from end to end. Committed for trial is Dr. Buck Buchner (above) UPPER RIGHT) an of a British mother and a French mother, who is charged with the murder of his wife, Isabella, and their pretty nurse, Mary Jane Rogerson, aged 20. It was last September that two girls found fragments of human bodies in three "Devil's Beef Pot" ravine near Moffat, Scotland. Later, Scientists were called in to piece together the hideously mutilated bodies. One thing which aided the grand reasonable doubt that the bodies were Dr. Buchner's wife and the nurse, both of whom had been missing for several days, was the photograph the skulls in life size and compare them with photographs of the deceased to coincide as illustrated ABOVE in the case of Mrs. Buchner. The three children (LOWER RIGHT) are those of the Buchner's, now living in Scotland in the belief that their parents have gone away, are shown LOWER LEFT with their nurse. LOWER RIGHT is Mary Jane Rogerson, the nurse. Dr. Buchner, a gynaecologist, vigorously denies any part in the crime, though circumstances seem in the preliminary hearing that bloodstains were found on the Buchner home in Lancaster. Dr. Buchner explains these by stating he had cut his hand performing an experiment. INSET, Sir Bernard Spilsbury, famous medico-legal expert.

A Canadian echo of the sensational case centered when police of Lancaster asked Winnipeg police to locate a family named Fiddler, thought to reside in Manitoba or Saskatchewan and known to have been friends of Buchner and his wife.

The sickening crime first came to light last September when two girls on a hike saw scattered objects on the moor. They found two limbs and looked like parts of human bodies. They notified police.

At the preliminary trial, the bodies became known as "Body No. 1," and "Body No. 2." The first consisted of a head two arms, two breasts, a heart, two lungs, a liver, two feet and two legs. No torso was found. The second consisted of a head, two arms, two forearms and hands, two thighs, right leg, a left leg, a foot, a thorax, a pelvis. Of the heads, the hair had been removed along with the ears, nose, lips and nose; the teeth had been drawn and the eyes shrunk.

Postal Blood Stains

A charwoman called at the hearing stated that shortly after the disappearance of Mrs. Buxton she had noted that the bathroom had been stained. "A very dirty yellow," Carpels had been ripped off floors and placed in the backyard, together with a mattress that was littered around the waiting room, the consulting room. Other witnesses told of seeing the doctor building a fire in the yard to burn rubbish.

Dr. Buxton explained blood stains by saying that he had cut his hand in performing an experiment.

Evidence was also introduced to show that Dr. Buxton was suspicious and jealous of his wife and that there was, at one time, according to witnesses, "no choke the man, life out of her."

Human Needs Put Before National Credit Is Stated

Housing Problem Fully Discussed in The House

Ottawa, Feb. 18.—(CP)—Housing legislation enacted at the last session of Parliament deserves a fair trial and will be continued by the present government. At the same time the different departments of Government will explore every possible means of providing employment on productive public works.

The House of Commons received this assurance last night from Premier Mackenzie King at the end of a full day's debate on Housing and unemployment. The former was a private member's day in the session and a resolution by F. L. (Doc) Bruce (Ont.—Toronto-Broadview) calling for a National Housing program coupled with a plan to provide employment opened a discussion which covered a wide field.

Public Works on a large scale were not a cure but only a palliative from present economic ills, Hon. Norman M. Rogers, Minister of Labor in the Bruce motion, declared. The government would at all times place human needs before National Credit. At the same time it was fully aware it could not spend itself into prosperity because it would only result into chaos, he said.

Mr. Rogers said the whole policy of the relief camps was wrong and the government was planning to close them as soon as possible. The average number of men accommodated in the camps was 11,000. The standard of relief provided was not high. With the same conditions the Government in 1933 could have placed 100,000 men. Between Jan. 1, 1934 and 74,000 in 1935, paying them $16 a month and allowing farmers to board them in return for work.

Withdrawn Resolution

At the close of the sitting Mr. Church withdrew his resolution, on the suggestion of Mr. Dunning although he warned he would return to the subject again. He expressed disappointment with the attitude of Mr. Dunning and Mr. Rogers. The latter's statement would be a disappointment to the people of every province of Canada. He said he would prefer to have the resolution voted down than to withdraw it and have it come against it anyway.

A long series of unbalanced budgets due to heavy expenditures for unemployment relief, declared Mr. Rogers thought. The Government had to have an eye to a proper balance between the spending and the investment of private funds in productive enterprises, both those of private and corporate investments.

Public spending was not the way to discourage private investments or to frighten private investors in Canada, he declared in unemployment, than it would provide employment, than it would provide.

Mr. Rogers made his first speech in the House and it drew fire from J. A. Jones (Labor—Winnipeg North, as well as Mr. Church. The Winnipeg member said it was a speech, which might have been made by a good Tory. The Minister had shown too much concern for private interests and it was primarily necessary to put the unemployment, than it would provide.

The House will devote today to the estimates of the various several departments, including Agriculture, Mines and Interior.

Justified Expenditure

If the building industry could be speeded up only to the extent of employing 100,000 persons, the expenditure would be justified, said Hugh Plaxton (Lib.-Toronto Trinity) in opening the debate on the motion in the cost of administering unemployment relief, the cost of direct relief would more than disappear, he said, in the saving of government money on building.

Business men and owners of property were "sick and tired" of mess and timidity in withdrawing from building, he declared. He was said Mr. Plaxton. If Canadian industry could be revived it would move to shorten working hours and reduce unemployment. During the campaign, he declared, promised to continue assistance to the gold mining industry and to encourage marketing legislation designed to aid primary producers.

LIKELY TO BE NIGHT SESSION

Premier Hepburn Will Return to His Post Tuesday

TORONTO, Feb. 17.—(CP)—During the absence of Premier Hepburn, who receives second reading in the Ontario Legislature today, the House will sit tonight for the first time this session. Announcement of the possibility of night sitting was made today by Premier Hepburn after conference with Attorney-General Nixon.

Almost since the start of the session because he had to testify in the libel action of extortion trial of Mr. Hepburn, the latter has been back to Toronto over the week-end. He held a discussion with cabinet members in his hotel room today.

Mr. Hepburn said he would not return to the Legislature until tomorrow since he would be in his hotel clearing up considerable work that accumulated in his absence.

Replying to a query about his health, he said he was feeling "pretty well".

CARRYING PLACE

Carrying Place, Feb. 18.—Thursday evening's driving snow and sleet storm left the motorists struggling in heavy drifts with sidroads particularly piled high; and despite the best efforts of road workers the week end came with many a car left stranded in its garage. Cutters and sleighs came into their own again, and the many families who visit Trenton on market day or who go there for the necessary supplies either purchased the bus or hitched up the horses for the four, five or six mile drive to town. Truly those who were driving the old fashioned sleighs winter have received full value for the wish. Newcastle toll of conditions in other parts of the province much worse than they are here.

In spite of the storm, however, mail, bus and bakery service have been maintained on the usual schedule so that few have suffered serious inconvenience as a result.

On Thursday evening snow and wet were both a few hours late, and the baker who attempted the passage from the post office to the Carrying Place corner was more than five hundred yards before he was forced to give up the fight. A sleigh was secured at that point and the bread supply for the week end was taken to its destination. Failure to apply a common saying, slightly altered, "the bread must go on." A similar condition on the roads on Thursday evening were forced to turn back on a three-day journey nine distant. Later in the evening they returned with a team of neighbours and dug the stalled motor out. School attendance suffered on Friday, a number coming from a distance were nearly all driven in by their fathers.

Far from keeping people at home, Thursday's storm seems to have had the courageous to those who braved the drifts and attended Community Night at the Carrying Place Hall. Quite the largest attendance of the season, and one of the most enjoyable that filled the hall to capacity made the event a memorable one. The programme was in charge of A. H. Norrington, in the chair, the opening hymn was sung. Mrs. C. Weller playing, and Lee Green, with the Scripture lesson. After the reception to the union of the new members asked to have their names added to the roll. The programme was then given by Mrs. Ross Clarke, Barry Norrington sang and recited two humorous items. Mrs. Black gave an interesting talk on the study and work of the Red Cross every-day life. The president gummarized the many current events of the day, after which a group of school children, Jean Weller, Madeline Davis and Jean Clarke sang. Mrs. Clarke sang. Ad interesting reading, The Bird Feast, was then rendered and presented by Mrs. Weller and Mrs. Green. A solo by Mrs. Weller was then given by Mrs. Green. Refreshments were served later by Mrs. Green and Mrs. R. Young, Mrs. P. Green and Mrs. R. Young, Mrs. Green and Mrs. Young. Community Night was then declared the storm to attend and was warmly welcomed. Just as the meeting was about to close Mrs. Lonenio of Trenton with a friend made their appearance and played and sang a number of selections with Mrs. Lonenio at the piano and guitar.

The meeting closed with most of those present hurrying to get home before the drifts should become impassable. The programme was arranged by Miss Lucille Weller and Mrs. Lee Green.

The church wardens are now receiving applications for the week end as task is a comparatively small one it is expected that the work can be done. It is provided a fund of $15,000 has been voted for the special fund.

Mr. and Mrs. Norrington attended Trenton on Monday afternoon and evening the annual meeting and banquet was held in the Rings and Prince Edward regiment. Private Burris is now recovered from his recent foot injury and is able to be around freely and to do light work.

The three small daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Baker of recovered from recent heavy colds and are able to be around.

GUARDS MOUNTED AT CITY OFFICES

No Reason Yet Given Except That Nothing be Tampered With

Toronto, Feb. 18.—(CP)— Resumption of the adjourned Royal Commission inquiry into Toronto police situation yesterday found policemen guarding a number of city hall municipal offices on the order of Max Clavir, suspended Justice of the Peace.

Clavir was suspended Saturday, and a night-and-day guard has been maintained at his office since then. Over the week-end all City Hall Police Court offices were locked up and guarded, it is learned, "so that nothing is tampered with," officials said.

Norman E. Newton, K.C., would not reveal the reason for the guards. He intimated the commission might receive today reports on the investigations that led to Clavir's suspension.

Nice Tribute to Canada's Team

—The Manchester Guardian pays a nice tribute to Canada's Olympic Hockey team that last the Olympic title for the first time since the International Hockey Competition began in 1924.

The Guardian says Canada had really the better team and could probably have beaten Germany three out of ten. Moreover, it continues, the British team is composed of several players, who were born in England but have learned their hockey in Canada and who only recently returned to England.

"Hence it is unfair to speak of the triumph of British ice hockey. Canada, in the main, has under its own name but was it under British."

HALLOWAY

Holloway—On Saturday Feb. 15th a wedding of interest took place when one of our most popular girls Miss Vera Rose and Mr. Elmer Wilson of West Huntingdon were quietly married at the parsonage, Foxboro, by Rev. Mr. Horton. Miss Vera Wilson, elder of the ground and Mr. Keith Bush of Sidney were attendants on the young couple. Immediately after the ceremony they left for a trip to Detroit and Flint, Michigan, stopping at the Quinte Hotel, Belleville for breakfast luncheon. They travelled in the colored crepe with metallic trimming and wore a black coat with red fox collar, with hat, muff and other matching accessories of black and the shade.

On Tuesday night previous about twenty-five of Vera's girl friends assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Reid for a social evening together and presented her with a Cabinet of Silverware. Townsend making the presentation and Mrs. Percy Kelly read the following address:

Dear Vera,

Your girl friends have gathered here this evening in honor of your approaching marriage. We look forward to your departure with regret and yet we are glad you are about to have a home of your own, and we wish you and Elmer a very happy there. We all feel that you have made a good choice and our wishes will be with you wherever you may go. As a small token of our appreciation we ask you to kindly accept this small gift knowing that it will help to keep you mindful of that it will be an ever reminder of those friends who have assembled. Please accept it Vera with our best wishes.

Signed on behalf of your friends, Nellie Reid, Marie Townsend, Committee.

On the following Thursday evening the bride received the congratulations of the weather, about from the community assembled in the hall and presented Vera and Elmer with an Aladdin floor lamp, after which a young couple stepped in the centre he called on Mrs. Percy Kelly to read the following address while Mr. Clayton Reid made the presentation:

Dear Vera and Elmer—

We, a few of your many friends having learned of your approaching marriage, have gathered here on this occasion to wish you success and happiness during the journey of life which you are about to begin. We also wish to express our feelings on our part that we see you leave the community in which you have lived will be greatly missed. You have taken an active part in church, institute and residence circles and activities and we are glad that your new home is to be so far away, but that you will be able to attend the least and most of the meetings, where you will always be welcomed. Elmer, we congratulate you on the choice of a partner for life and we are sure that if you only do as you have done you will get along quite well together. To both of you we extend best wishes for success and ask you to accept these gifts as a slight token of our esteem and a reminder of your friends at Holloway.

Signed on behalf of the community,

Embroy Hough, Harold Wilson, Coleman Townsend, Clayton Reid.

After a few numerous readings from the chairman, he again called upon Leila Hough to read the address from Woman's Institute, Mrs. H. Townsend making this presentation of a purse of gold to the bride-elect. The address read as follows:

Dear Vera,—

We, the Chatterton Women's Institute feel we cannot let this occasion pass without some small token of remembrance. Vera, you have always been one of our most members and you will be missed a great deal, but we hope in the future you will come and join us whenever possible. We thought we would not to accept this gift, wishing you a long and happy married life. Signed—The Institute.

Both very suitably responded to the different addresses and presentations appreciation. "For they are jolly good fellows" was heartily sung and refreshments were then served. Among other miscellaneous gifts received from friends was a cabinet of silver, a mantel clock and other pieces of glass and aluminumware.

TORONTO POLICE IN CITY TODAY

Investigating The Find of Burned Bag And Tin Boxes

Believing to have found a connecting link with the charred cloth bag and charred tin boxes found outside the highway ditch east of Belleville on Monday morning, Provincial and Toronto police today are endeavoring to link the burned articles with a robbery that occurred in Toronto on Sunday night.

Today Detective William White-law of Toronto, conversed with District Provincial Police and believed identified the burned cloth bag and the charred boxes as articles taken from a Toronto Metropolitan store when cash in the boxes was stolen on Sunday. The amount of the robbery was not announced, however.

On Monday morning an unnamed man informed the O.P.P. that he had seen two men, travelling in a Quebec licensed automobile, burn a cloth bag alongside highway No. 2 east of Belleville. Upon further investigation by District Provincial Police, a burned cloth bag and scorched tin boxes were found. The tin boxes are those money boxes in which the cash in the burglarized store is kept overnight, Detective Whitelaw and the Provincial Police were informed by the investigating the unnamed man this afternoon and expect a police break in the case. CONDEMNED MAN SEEKS KING'S AID

British Subject Sentenced to Hang In California For Kidnapping

MacLean's mission ordered to die Feb. 28 for his part in a San Quentin penitentiary break which resulted in the death of a convict. He is the stepson of Donald MacKay of Montreal.

Following his interview with Eden the white-haired Scot conferred with Associated Press:

"My object is promised to investigate the case. Apparently, all we can do is seek clemency for MacKay. But if there is politics involved in the death sentence, as appeared to Holmes's attorney, I will bring the matter before the House of Commons.

"There is no chance of freeing him from California despite his British citizenship.

San Francisco, Feb. 18 (AP)—A letter from Holmes to convict implicating King Howard VIII to save his life sent through the mails today.

The writer was Alexander MacKay, a British subject who with Joseph Kirkly, is under sentence to be hanged Feb. 28 for participating State Parole Board members during a prison break at California's San Quentin Prison thirteen months ago. MacKay, who claims he is informant of the robbery for which he was sent to prison, signed his letter Alexander MacKay, and is the stepson of Donald MacKay of Montreal.

Washington, Feb. 18 (AP) — An attempt will be made in the United States Senate Court to Aid Alexander MacKay, California convict now under sentence to die Feb. 28, for whom the British government intercession with California officials.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied by Bigger and Crawford by Financial Service.

J. M. Consolidated

The machinery for the mills is now being transported to the J. M. Consolidated Mines property in Patricia. It is expected that the mill will be running in about two months' time. Although stated at 1,500 tons a day capacity the mill will be capable of handling 1,800 tons a day. Underground developments are proceeding, with satisfactory results being obtained, new ore being opened up in the 525-foot level. Last month the company concluded financing arrangements with Richard Rodeen Bay, a subsidiary of Lake Shore properties. J. M. Consolidated sufficient capital to finance all requirements beyond the production stage.

Waysides Closed Temporarily

According to a report from the West, the Waysides Mines has temporarily closed down, due to shortage of water. Operations will be resumed as soon as the water situation permits.

A wide and embracing bull market in stocks appears to be in the making, if board room gossip is to be credited. Many participating in the demand and rise. The Buying was so general that it is superfluous to name particular issues. Under the circumstances, however, the stocks reaching the best prices since the bull days of 1929 are Nickel and Nickel was the leader in this respect.

The demand for the shares of International Nickel can be attributed in large measure to the rise in the price of copper. The special is by reason of the production of nickel and consequently the company is one of lowest-cost producers of the metal. Moreover, a continuation of the rise in the price of copper will mean substantially larger earnings for Nickel. Nickel is the principal beneficiary of this fact by the investment and speculative fraternity.

Since the commencement of the depression in 1929, this company has made steady progress in the production and marketing of its products on a most advantageous basis with the result that despite the curtailment in production of the Turner Valley field as a whole, Royalite Oil has greatly extended. Financial position of the company is sound and its strong cash position has enabled the company to carry out important development and extensive replacement facilities without recourse to financing. The company has considered attractive both from the viewpoint of yield, and prospective price appreciation.

New York advices state that what makes the current market movement so impressive is the manner in the lack, despite a wider public following, or the thin-waisted type of stock that usually figures at the end of a broad rise. A market rise of this kind is extremely healthful and this already has drawn out the public in large numbers, carrying it beyond the range of market experience. At the same time, though the rise has been rapid, reactions have checked and lengthened through the process, thus preventing the need for protection against another type of psychological reaction is apparent.

Foundation Company of Canada

Some quiet buying of the common shares of Foundation Company of Canada has made its appearance of late. The stock is regarded as significant in certain quarters where the affairs of the company are well understood. The management have been able to keep their affairs pretty much to themselves as it can be estimated the company has a backlog of between $40,000,000 of contracts. Foundation Company has a single capital structure as there are 400,000 shares of common stock outstanding. Working capital is ample and good dividends could be returned should further profits be secured.

The Market Reaches The Highest Level in Five Years

The highest levels since 1931 were reached in the security markets last week, and while there was some reaction on Saturday, the trend is apparent in dealings the latter part of the week that the upward movement remained bullish. Predictions were heard throughout the Street that the rise would continue, and in view of the persistent rise of recent weeks, but at the time of going to sign of it, instead, there have been quite substantial to individual groups at the same time that others were carried forward. Moreover, the movement has not been spotted shares, some of which have been inactive for a long time, but which have now come into activity and are being sold as high as their present prices in five years.

Standard Statistics Co. Inc. "Nothing that has happened in the recent past or that is in visible prospect for the future affects the favorable market attitude previously expressed. Intermediate reactions will be encountered from time to time, of course, but holders of soundly selected stocks on a longer term basis should not become uneasy during such trading conditions. "The following stocks previously listed have been purchased: Universal" American Power & Light, Atlantic Refining, Cities Service, Collins & Aikman and Continental Oil.

Barron's (The Trader)

"Stocks are being marginal, brokerage debits now despite the $33 billion in credit. SCHRINER LOOKS TO BE WINNER

At Present Leading Scorer in Second Year of Big Time

By ELMER DULMAGE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

David (Sweeney) Schriner of Calgary, sophomore sniper who brought a level head and no color whatever to the National Hockey League, stands today to win the scoring championship in his second big league season. In addition he seems the natural successor to Frank Boucher as the N.H.L.'s ranking gentleman.

Working quietly along his left wing, seldom bringing the crowds to their feet with any show of individual brilliance, Schriner has compiled 16 goals and 18 assists for a total of 32 points, that puts him well ahead of all other point collectors in the league.

At Chapman, also of New York Americans and Cecil Dillon of New York Rangers are five points behind Schriner and Cowley Conacher, 1934 and 1935 scoring champion, is six in arrears. Calgary's latest-found star appears to worry him immediately.

When Americans square off tonight in New York against Montreal Maroons, Schriner will have a chance to consolidate his position. New York fans haven't decided yet whether Sweeney is "great" or not, but they know how deadly accurate he is when the puck gets to his stick at close range.

Other top scorers, Paul Thompson and Doc Romnes of Chicago Black Hawks, tied in the averages with Charlie Conacher, will wheel their artillery against the Leafs in Montreal and point at Canadiens Detroit Red Wings visit the Bruins at Boston in the third game of the night.

Maroons, only a point ahead of Toronto Maple Leafs in the Canadian section, defend Hawks' Locations to assure themselves of their margin. The Leafs are idle till Thursday, when they play Canadiens in Toronto. Saturday night they entertain Montreal.

Rookie Colville Has Great Love For Canadiens

By GEORGE MAGUIRE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Feb. 18 (CP)—Disintegration and the slow but sure rebuilding of a once mighty hockey machine it to Rookie Mac Colville at least, the most colorful picture that can be presented in the Major Leagues.

Young Colville, now making his rolling checks a hard goal to pass along the right wing of New York Rangers of the National League, has idolized Montreal Canadiens since skating and banging a puck home from school to Edmonton a decade ago.

At that time Canadiens were the real threat in the league and they earned their soubriquet of "Flying Frenchmen." Howie Morenz, Aurel Joliat and Johnny Gagne on the other.

Then too, there was flashy defenseman Sylvio Mantha, George Hainsworth in goal and Pit Lepine among the classy reserves.

Colville has stepped into the pit of melancholy, when he heard the news reports from the Canadian camp: "Mantha's out. Lepine and Mondou" among others.

"Isn't that too bad," mourned Colville. "Just think of Lepine at his best, what a player, even when he was overshadowed by Morenz. Pete holds the modern scoring record of five goals in a game. Now there is only Joliat left of the old brigade and in another year or so it will be his turn to go.

"You know I was looking over some old clippings here in town I was back home and it shows the great Hainsworth team only lost less than any other to get together why Hainsworth signed for a bunch it was the best money in the league and at home more money than any other club over a four year period.

"Of course they are coming back and they are always tough on our club this season. We have never beaten them by more than one goal. Maybe with these new kids, McGill, Deadlock, Drouin and those down on the farm, they will be back on top in another couple of years and again be the class of Northern for kids to idolize, I hope so."

HALSFLEISCH CALLED UP

New York, Feb. 18.—(CP)—New York Americans called up Jeff Kolfleisch from the Providence Can-Am hockey club last night in the fear Al Murray may not be able to play against Montreal Maroons on Tuesday night in National League game. Kolfleisch comes from Niagara Falls.

GROOVE YOUR DELIVERY

By MRS. FLORETTA D. McCUTCHEON

WORLD CHAMPION WOMAN BOWLER

Mrs. McCutcheon shows proper and improper form in delivery

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the sixth in a series of ten lessons in bowling, written exclusively for Central Press Canadian by Mrs. Floretta D. McCutcheon, former champion bowler and nationally known bowling instructor.

We have been talking a lot about delivery because delivery is the foundation of proper bowling. The ball you roll is going to depend on how you swing it in time with your leg as you start down the foul line. And just as a good golfer tries to "groove" his swing, you should groove your delivery.

That is, see that you start from the same position up to the foul line in as nearly the same manner and at the same speed, and end as closely to the same spot as possible each time.

Practice Starts At First

In fact, if the beginner bowler would concentrate on his delivery the first couple of months and forget about scores, the scores would be much higher, because often in trying for scores the backs of delivery are formed that are hard to break later on.

In this connection, I might mention shoes. Modern bowling alleys provide the two types of equipment. Some good bowlers like to own their own bowling balls, but this is not necessary. The only equipment that is needed. Beginners can learn to walk up to the alley in any kind of shoes. But later on, when they go up faster, high-heeled shoes are very bad. So is a rubber soled shoe. While at first you invary of walk up to the line, later, when you have mastered co-ordinating your swing with your steps, you approach the foul line a little faster and should end your approach with a slight slide.

Allowance For Slide

For this correctly made bowling shoes are a great help. They are made with leather soles which allow for a slide but keep you from slipping. A great distinction that but one that every bowler will understand immediately. The cost of bowling shoes is slight. While you can bowl in any low-heeled shoe, still if you have the idea of equipping your footing, a certain tension is unavoidable. When you wear bowling shoes you simply forget about your feet and you find yourself in much easier balance.

One evening in the Radio City Palace, New York, a Park Avenue group, in evening dress, stopped by the alleys after the theatre to bowl a game or two. The manager of the party were in high-heeled shoes naturally.

Then they apparently knew their bowling, and appreciated the difficulty of high-heeled shoes. The two girls simply stripped off their shoes and bowled in their stocking feet. Not so good as suitable shoes, of course, but better than high heeled slippers.

Amateur Hockey Stench in Nostrils of Honest Sportsmen Says Official at Olympics

Threatened by Crooks Not Good Enough to Become Honest Pros.

SYSTEM WRONG CLAIM

No Hint of Anti-Semitism Apparent at The Games

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—(CP)—Treasurer Gustavus T. Kirby of the United States Olympic Committee is home today from the winter games in Germany, firm in the belief that amateur sport must be guarded by "crooks not good enough to become honest professionals."

First official back from Garmisch-Partenkirchen, where the games ended Sunday, the sturdy Mr. Kirby found himself surrounded by newspapermen on the boat steaming into the bay yesterday. He did not disappoint them, lashing out there always is room for amateurs, but I'd like to say right now that the stench in the nostrils of honest sportsmen.

"I am not criticizing American hockey in particular, though it is not like Caesar's wife.

"But the English played Canadian-born ringers in the hockey contest theory, that they were born in England, and "once an Englishman always an Englishman."

Sixty in Range

"There are more than sixty Canadian players in Europe. All of them are supposed to be amateurs, but I'd like to ask how they make their living—Lord only knows."

Mr. Kirby said the use of Canadians on the English team opened up the whole Olympic field to that sort of thing. He foresaw a possibility that Australian and Canadian tennis players might be called in for the British Davis Cup team. He pointed out British interests track and field men from throughout the Empire for her team to the summer Olympics.

The Committee Secretary said no hint of anti-semitism was apparent at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germans had cheered Ralph Rose, Jewish centre of the Teuton hockey crew, probably more than any other player. He found Reichsfuehrer Hitler a "sturdy citizen, who looked like a factory foreman dressed in his best."

Mr. Kirby said the Americans failed to do better because they were outclassed by Europeans. Of the 1936 games he said many of the trained every day "just like a musician," and "this program was carried out almost the year round.

"It was his opinion, that winter sports were becoming more popular and that perhaps by 1940 when, he expects the winter games to be held in Japan, the United States will have 100 candidates to choose from for each sport instead of ten as at present.

ONTARIO SPIEL IS WELL ON WAY

G. B. Hanson Rink of Kingston Among The Undefeated

Toronto Feb. 18 (CP)—Curlers from all over the Province—men and women in the rinks, "Jimmies" and "Sweeps"—and swear it is the greatest sport in the world—put on their tam o' shanters and sweaters today, packed their brooms and prepared for the second day of the ninth annual Ontario bonspiel, play over which all work on various trophies on the ice of five Toronto clubs.

First round play for the Provincial York trophy, key event of the spiel, was finished yesterday with victories advancing Brantford-Ellis-Byrne competition and losers playing preliminary games for the North American Life trophy. Today Royal York losers meet in the preliminary round of the Seagram trophy hunt. Yesterday's winners in North American play are Brantford-Ellis-Byrne competitions meet later today.

Although many games were close in Ellis-Ellis-Byrne play yesterday, only two extra-end games were needed to decide matches. A Ellis section rink, skipped by Geo. Hanson, won an extra-end battle from a Toronto Strathcona four, 15-14. The Toronto skip was F. W. Bowlby. The other extra-end struggle was won by A. V. Silk's Shelburne rink, 16-15, over another Kingston entry skipped by W. J. Drysdale.

MAGEDOMAS ON SCORING SPREE

Defeat Queens 8-2 to Continue as League Leaders

Brockville, Ont., Feb. 18—(CP)—Brockville Maroons were on a scoring rampage last night to defeat Queen's University 8-2 in a rugged Ontario Senior City Hockey League game here before a crowd of 800.

It was the fourth defeat of the schooled Queen's soffered at the hands of the Magedomas.

Only the smart work of "Still" Gowsell in goal saved the Collegians from a worse trimming. His work was especially brilliant in the second period, when Brockville's combinations clicked perfectly, only to have Gowsell step valiantly aside.

By 8s six Brockville comedy-dated its hold on first place in the standing with 32 points, 13 ahead of Lakefield. Peterborough Air Force holds third place with 17, one point ahead of Kingston. Queen's and Rideaus are tied in cellar position with seven.

Maroons scored two in the first period and nicked Queen's for four in the second. Queen's finally rallied to score until after Brockville had bagged its seventh, which came shortly after the last set for gan.

Then Sellery and Patterson shower in one each for Queen's and near the end Lowrey tallied for Brock's.

Gowsell's work in the second period was especially outstanding. He dumas their lines working smoothly peppered him with shots.

Mckibbon stood out for Brockville, banging three goals and getting two assists.

"Queen's had fire of the seven penalties, all for minor offences.

BY RAY COLLETT

Around Detroit hockey circles, they're calling Ebbie Goodfellow the all-time all-American all-everything else hockey player. Ever since he joined the burly product of the Ottawa Valley tops anything the Motor City has ever had. He graduated to the N.H.L. via the Detroit Olympics and if ever the Norris club got a prize package it was Goodfellow.

But as a forward Ebbie is through; definitely. He will be seen solely on the rearguard where he has performed at times this season. Coach Adams figures this won't hurt his scoring record much and the move the big lad likely to go down in hockey records as one of the greatest defencemen ever sent on the ice. Since he started in 1930-2 he has been among the leaders in scoring. Art Ross, King Clancy, Reg. Noble, George Hainsworth, some of the best defencemen the game ever knew, all started their careers as forwards and have made the grade proud to take the same trail, with honors.

Standing nearly six feet high and weighing around 190 pounds, Ebbie has the frame for the job. Fleet, quickly in emergencies, a great rusher and packs a terrific shot. Add to that a well-developed willingness to mix it with all and sundry and you have the right kind of stuff to go to the Detroit pie. Detroit has plenty of excuse for singing as their popularity theme song. For he's Only Only!

"WHITE HOPES" READY FOR BELL

Many Long on Courage But Short on Experience

Toronto, Feb. 18—(CP)—"White Hopes" of all shapes and sizes, from all parts of Canada, will be lined up right in public for the first time when lined up today beside a weighing machine in the first official step in the unique heavyweight boxing tournament involving pro and amateur.

There will be 30 or more big fellows, nearly all of them inexperienced in the ring, when the Canadian section of Jack Dempsey's testimonial heavyweight event is staged in Toronto's Stadium Tuesday night. Some 15,000 paying customers will be seated in Maple Leaf Gardens to see the fun, so successful Promoter Frank Ahearn and Tommy McClure in promoting the first portion of this novel show.

Weighing-in today was important because the boys will be classified according to weight. On the first draw, One group will take in those from 175 to 190 pounds and second from 190 to 200 pounds and a third all over 200.

Every fan in Toronto has failed to produce a favorite or a "name" from the list of 1935 Golden Gloves champions and rumored heavyweights who have been contacted.

When the "Redmen" skate out onto the ice to meet the Campbellford Maroons in the second round of the Intermediate O.H.A. playdown, opening at the Belleville Arena tonight, it will be the first time in three years that Belleville intermediate squad has advanced into the second round play-offs in three years. If the "Redmen" can hurdle over "Buster" Whitton and company they will then advance into the third round, which usually is just one step away from the provincial semi-finals. As is usually the case however, the eastern team experiences more difficulty in its own realm than when competing against squads from afar. The Campbellford squad boasts of a few tried and proven pucksters in Eddie Bush, Buster Whitton, Archie Creed, Jack Carrington and Blue, while the remainder of their roster is made up of last year's Juvenile stars, who have advanced to the superior class of intermediate. As goals count in this round the "Redmen" will need at least three or four goals of a lead to take back to Campbellford on Friday night. The night's tussle should not be missed by any hockey-loving fan, as a bang-up game can always be assured the two previous encounters Campbellford squad moves into town. Joe Smith of Kingston will referee.

Tomorrow night at the Arena the final double-header in the Senior Intermediate group will hold the centre of attention. The two contestants are either St. Michael's or Aberdeen, both of Toronto. Dale Plays The Game

—BY—

Ann Forester

"Well, it used to make me hot under the collar, Dale. You was always too soft. Phil's not a good lookin' beau. He had his eye out for the main chance all the time. You knew he left Roberta cold! Yes, sir! Used her to land a soft job in the movies and then gave her the air. Well, that did my heart good. She sure acted nasty warming him away from you —though it was the best thing ever happened to you—

"Lil—people will hear you—!"

"Oh, they don't know who I'm talking about—" boomed Lil cheerfully. "Hey—" with sudden concern. "You sick, Dale? You look so sort of white an' funny lookin'—"

"No—no. I'll be all right. It's just the air in here—"

"Want to go out, honey? I'll go if you say—"

It would have broken Lil's heart to have to give up a meal but she was going to be game.

Get up and walk by that other table! Oh, her trembling legs would never carry her! Through Dale. She spoke: "I'll be all right when I've eaten. Order what you want, Lil."

What she ate—what she said—Dale never knew. Though she never looked over at the other table she was aware of Brant across the room. He, too, would be aware of an urge of haste, afraid to look over this way. Afraid to have the man with him look over. Ashamed of her. Of his wife.... Oh, dear God, don't let her cry....

Bits of Lil's conversation seeped through the hot confusion of her thoughts.

"..... so I told Davis where to head in. 'Look, honey,' I says, 'I don't have to take none of your lip,' I told him. 'I was holdin' down better jobs than this when you was runnin' around in diapers.' I see, an' no wonder little man, the you is goin' to tell me what to do, I see. An' Dale, I wish you could've seen the little rat's face—"

No doubt that the surrounding tables were vastly interested in Lil's remarks. It acted like wine on the loud trumpet. Lil surely had an audience; attention to her, was always admiring...So she held forth now, in her best vivacious style, indiscriminately scattering the pearls of her shrewd wisdom to whom there was listening swine. But after a while Dale's abstraction penetrated. Lil got the idea that all was not well. Her round blue eyes clouded.

Dale suddenly leaned forward and began chattering animatedly. Brant was getting up to go. How angry he looked! His face was all flushed, his lips pressed together. Humiliation and anger—he was dogged in Dale. Oh, it was despicable in him to pretend not to see her. After all, she was his wife! If it wasn't for her would Brant be in this restaurant at all, respectably well dressed? Suppose she had lectured in the rooms of Coli City —when Brant was a drunken derelict —Oh, no! Don't put it like that never put it like that—as a debt! Oh, what were she and Brant doing to each other? Between them they were making a debt of love..... Cheapening a beautiful thing....

There was relief when Brant had gone but there was also sick depression. She whipped herself to answer Lil but the effort was too much. A pall or silence had fallen when Dale said the hill and rose.

Out on the sidewalk the old trouper turned on Dale.

"Look-e-here, Dale, what was the trouble?"

"What trouble, Lil? There wasn't any—"

"Bolony, dearie! Come through to Auntie Lil. There was somebody in there you didn't want to see, wasn't there?"

"Lil, what do you think I am!"

"I think you're a darned good kid who wants to do the square thing an' is havin' a heck of a time doin' it! Now look here, honey, I'm going to talk turkey to you. This was a mistake, this lunch—"

"Oh, no, Lil—"

"Yes, it was, kid." Lil wagged her head sagely. "I see it now, I don't know who you saw in there but it was somebody you know now. And that's a thing you remember, that's now is now, and there was, then is past for you, Dale. I shouldn't never have spoken to you."

"My friends are always my friends, Lil!" Dale's voice trembled.

"A swell sentiment, kid, but it doesn't pan out. You gotta remember you're in a different world now, Dale. You gotta forget the past."

"Lil, don't! You were my friends. You were good to me. Dale was almost crying.

Lil's round blue eyes were wet. "I'd still be, if you was down on your luck, kid. But I can't be sure of. Oh, no!—don't do a sob act, I didn't bring my rubbers! Want to know what, I think, Dale? I think you're sittin' down in a game, an' you're goin' to need every trump you can draw because you're playing with people who are sharks!"

Playing the game..... the same symbol Sandy had used..... It silenced Dale as nothing else could have done.

"I'm the nail on the head, didn't I, kid? You see, Dale you're sittin' pretty an' you'd be a fool to muddy the water for yourself."

Dale and Lil stood for a moment unheeding the crowd which streamed all about them. But when they parted, Lil refused her address.

"No, sir, I'd only be a stumbling block in your way. Don't try to mix oil an' water, Dale. You can't do it. You're a swell kid—"

Lil was walking away. Her big figure in its pathetic finery was a blur of tears before Dale's eyes. The next minute the kaleidoscope pattern of the city had shifted, hiding Lil De Vos.

CHAPTER 42.

MRS. KENDALL'S DINNER.

Mrs. Kendall was giving a large dinner that evening. Dale was sitting before the mirror while the maid—quiet, deft fingered Swedish girl whom she shared with Brant—arranged her hair in soft loose waves. When Dale heard the door or Brant's room open she dismissed the girl.

"That's all now, Gerda. If I want you again I'll ring—"

As the girl left, Dale slipped into a negligee of brocaded white silk and walked to the door connecting the two rooms. Her heart was pounding with anger and still a sort of breathless fright. She was shrinking from another quarrel—anger—harsh words, but it had to come, she told herself; she and Brant couldn't go on with this festering underneath....

Brant had taken off his coat and vest. His collar things were laid out on the bed. His tall figure turned as Dale entered and across the space of the room cold grey eyes held angry brown ones.

Dale spoke first. Her voice was less but it held a little quiver.

"Why did you pretend to do that today.... pretend not to see Jack?"

Brant's voice was as cold as his eyes. "Your choice of company left me no other choice."

"But, herself, flushing. "You think that was a manly thing to do? Pretend not to see your own wife?"

Something like a grey flame flared in Brant's eyes and died. His voice trembled now with the strain of control he put upon it.

"Had you been alone I would never have thought of such a thing! I repeat, your choice of company left me no other choice—"

Dale's detachment, never strong, broke and she cried hotly, "Oh, it was a contemptible thing to do! It was ashamed—ashamed of you! I never thought you were like that—"

Each word, Dale knew, was a lash on Brant's proud spirit, but her own pride had been wounded today and smarting sense of shame drove her on.

"There might have been some excuse for a man who had never known hard luck! But you—whom Sandy helped..... would have acted so to Sandy? And that girl was as good to me as Sandy was to you! I never thought—you of all people!

Dale stopped, choked with angry tears.

Brant's face had whitened as she spoke. Dale didn't realize the extent to which her words struck in. Brant was not naturally a snob. He had been struggling all day between business caution and a secret sense of pride and manliness. The humiliation of being in the wrong now made him angry at Dale.

"I'm sorry," he said stiffly as his wife struggled for breath, "but I was forced to refuse to upset a carefully planned business scheme in order to save the feelings of some tramp you've decided to play Lady Bountiful to! That man I was with was Senator Cavendish. He's one of the biggest men in this city. I'm trying to get him to come in on a business deal with me. A deal, I might add, which will mean as much to you as it will to me. Can-

By day Ia gathered and brewed herbs, and at night she sat at the feet of her patient, intoning weird prayers, the origin of which reached back through the countless ages to vanished temples. She was strong with every artifice at her command to drive away the sickness.

When, upon her knees at his feet, she prayed, or when she chanted strange rongs in an unknown tongue, accompanying them with mysterious gestures that were part of the ritual, Coli was sure that the fever was worse and that he had become delirious again.

The privations that Coli had endured had weakened him. He was stricken with fever. While La cared for him, Jad-bal-ja, the Golden Lion, hunted for all three. Though at times he made his kill at a distance, he never failed to carry the carcass of his prey to the woman.

And so the days dragged on, and while Coli lay helpless, Zveri marched toward Italian Somaliland and Tarzan, recovered from his wound, followed the trail of the expedition, and from his shoulder little Ntima scolded and chattered through the day . . . .

The tears of tears..... bright but eyes looking back at her..... be a slip quivered.....

She went down stairs without waiting for Brant. Her own reflection, like that of a stranger, glided out of the hall mirrors as she passed it. For this affair Dale had chosen a dress of ivory moire made in period style. Its long tight bodice clasped her body like a lily's sheath. The quaint fullness of the skirt dipping irregularly on the sides emphasized the slender shapeliness of her legs. Her sole ornaments were a shoulder garland of camellias and the string of pearls Brant had bought for her in San Francisco

Stirling and District

Stirling, Feb. 17—A large number of guests attended the very successful Valentine party held by the ladies of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Friday evening. A very delightful supper was served and followed by entertainment in the form of a programme of musical numbers and readings. The hall was very tastefully decorated in keeping with the season and a very pleasant evening was spent by all present.

BELLEVILLE ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1936

ITALY, AUSTRIA, GERMANY FORM 3-POINT PACT

Italy Makes Answer To Anglo-French and Franco - Soviet Pacts

Austria Centre of New Understanding Says Despatch

RAPID PROGRESS

Movement to Upset Spread of Soviet Principles

Florence, Italy, Feb. 19 (AP)—A high authority disclosed tonight a three-point agreement among Italy, Germany and Austria is in process of formation.

The proposed agreement obligates Hungary.

(This disclosure indicates a new agreement nearly similar to the old triple entente which, before the Great War, allied Germany, Italy and the Austro-Hungarian Empire.)

The three points of agreement were outlined as follows:

1. Germany and Austria will lower their tariffs considerably in each other.

2. Germany will guarantee Austria's independence.

3. Italy will permit the free development of Pan-Germanism in Austria as long as the movement does not destroy Austria's independence.

Development Revealed.

This new development was revealed shortly after Fulvio Suvich, Italian Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and Egon Berger-Waldenegg, Foreign Minister of Austria, had concluded a conference here.

Rome, Feb. 19 (AP)—Establishment of an Italo-German entente as an answer to the Anglo-French understanding and the Franco-Soviet pact was believed today to be an immediate possibility.

It was believed here Rome and Berlin are ready to reach complete understanding concerning Austria which will put them free to fully operate on the broader terrain of European politics.

Following numerous Italo-German contracts in recent weeks, the famous slogan "guard the Brenner Pass" has disappeared entirely from the Italian Press.

Meeting At Florence.

Fulvio Suvich, fresh from his conference with Ulrich von Hassell, the German Ambassador, and his colleague Baron Berger-Waldenegg, the Austrian Foreign Minister, at Florence today:

It was reliably reported the basis of the Rome talks was a reconstruction of Austria's position relating to Germany and Italy respectively would be discussed during the meeting.

March Toward Entente.

Signs of the swift march of Rome toward an entente with Berlin were summarized as follows:

1. Italy has taken up all of Germany's attacks against the Franco-Soviet pact, including the charge it violates the Locarno Treaties. Details of German rearmament directed against France and the Soviet Union receive prominent publication space in the Italian press.

2. Italian contracts have taken on more concrete form in connection with the trips of Ambassador von Hassell to Rome and Berlin, the trips of Gen. Alio Pelle-grini, chief of Italian aviation, and recent conferences between the new Italian ambassador to Germany, Bernardo Attolico, Chancellor Adolf Hitler and Air Minister Gen. Wilhelm Hermann Goering.

3. In the wake of these intensive diplomatic activities the slogan "guard the Brenner Pass" has been erased from newspaper columns while a few weeks ago were repeating it almost daily.

The new course appears to be proceeding on the basis of certain German assurances to Italy concerning Austria.

4. The press has laid heavy emphasis upon the fact the Reich has shown more "comprehension" for Italy's position than Italy's former allies.

Anti-Soviet Action.

5. Rome, on its own account, is determined to counter any European orientation which will increase the influence of the Soviet Union in the Danubian basin where Italy intends to preserve its role as protector-in-chief, according to a Rome report.

Any solution of the Danubian problem which directly or indirectly implies the participation of the Soviet Union, even if it be only through a League of Nations guaranty, will be regarded with suspicion in Rome.

6. Premier Mussolini, it was believed, considers the present moment ripe for consolidating his international position diplomatically following the recent victories on both the northern and southern fronts in

AMPUTATES ARM TO FREE WORKER

Member Jammed Between Crane and Steel Girder

Lowell, Mass., Feb. 19 (AP) — A surgeon, standing on the swaying tip of an extension ladder, reported the amputation today of John McCoy, Lowell Gas Light Company worker, whose arm was jammed between the control cart of a traveling crane and a steel girder 30 feet above the ground.

He was conscious throughout the operation, Dr. N. Gilmore Long, the surgeon, said. He is now in a critical condition at a hospital.

McCoy was operating the traveling crane early today when it bumped its track, 30 feet above the ground. The car fell twenty feet to a steel girder. McCoy was thrown to the side and his arm was caught between the car and the girder as he fell.

He swung by the jammed arm for an hour while workmen and firemen tried to free him.

Dr. Long climbed a fire department extension ladder and amputated McCoy's arm at the shoulder after attempts to pry the worker from the wreck failed.

Bruno Hauptmann Again Sentenced to Chair

ETHIOPIAN CHIEF DENIES VICTORY SOUTH OF MAKALE

Patrol Skirmish Gains Claimed by Ras Mulugheta

MULE PASSES AID

Cannon Cannot be Taken Through Narrow Defiles

Addis Ababa, Feb. 19 (AP)—Ethiopian War Minister Ras Mulugheta telegraphed to the government today a denial of Italian claims of a victory south of Makale on the northern front.

Ras Mulugheta said there were several patrol skirmishes last week in which the Italians lost "heavily" and the Ethiopians suffered 31 killed and 75 wounded.

Marius Brophil, Irish Red Cross representative who returned recently to the north, was summoned to the palace where he signed a statement, to be published soon, designed to show the Italian claims unreasonable.

Brophil said he pointed out only quite petite gains were made when the Addis Ababan and the paths were impassible for transport of heavy cannon. Such cannon, he would be impossible to dislodge Ras Mulugheta's main army from the summit of Amba Aradam.

Bruno to Die Week Mar. 30 Judge Sets Date Third Time

Defense Figures and Governor Hoffman Hold Midnight Conference on Methods to Determine Guilt or Innocence

Trenton, N.J., Feb. 19 (AP) — Bruno Richard Hauptmann's electrocution was set today for the week of March 30.

The warrant was signed by Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard as he sat in a chair in his sick room.

It was the third time an execution date has been set for the convicted murderer of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr. The first date was the week of March 18 last, set on the night of Feb. 13 by Justice Thomas W. Trenchard. That was within a few minutes of his conviction by a jury of eight men and four women after a six weeks' trial in Flemington.

The warrant was automatically stayed when the defense appealed the case. The Court of Errors and Appeals upheld the verdict on Oct. 9 and after a further delay caused by an attempt to get a review of the case in the United States Supreme Court Justice Trenchard on Dec. 13 fixed the week of Jan. 12.

Second Reprieve Unexpected.

On Jan. 16, 29 hours before Hauptmann was to walk to the chair, Governor Harold G. Hoffman held a brief conference with Attorney General Wilentz. Wilentz emerged and was reprieving Hauptmann until Feb. 13.

Virtually his only hope of a further delay in the execution lies in a second reprieve and this is regarded as unlikely. The governor himself has said he will not take such action again unless Attorney General David T. Wilentz requests it. The Attorney General held the flag reprieve was his last and said at the time it was granted he would oppose another.

The new warrant for Hauptmann's death was signed by Justice Trenchard's sick room in his home across the street from the State House by Assistant Attorney General Joseph A. Katzen.

Midnight Discussion.

A new order for the electrocution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann was drawn today as informed sources disclosed a midnight conference between two defence figures and Gov. Harold G. Hoffman.

The governor, who once reprieved the German, met Chief Defence Counsel O. Lloyd Fisher and Attorney Samuel Leibowitz at a Newark hotel, these sources said.

Their conclusion, it was reported, could be heard all over the hall."

The Governor and Leibowitz talked to join the defence, were said to have disagreed over the manner in which the case of Hauptmann was to be determined.

Leibowitz, noted New York criminal lawyer, was represented as favoring a public hearing before the governor, the reports said, though a smaller approach would be more effective.

10,000 GOLD COINS SEIZED IN VAULT

Believed to be one of Several Depositories of Financial Records

New York, Feb. 19 (AP)—A mass seizure of secrecy cloaked the action of federal agents today as they investigated a cache of 10,000 $20 gold coins, seized in a vault deep in the Federal deposit vault in a New York bank.

Although Secret Service agents here refused to disclose the name of the depositor of the gold, now worth about $338,600, officials in Washington said the safe deposit box had been leased in the name of Leib Josefowitz.

The box was opened yesterday at the Chemical Safe Deposit Company.

An official of the Safe Deposit Company said Josefwitz and two other members of his family, whose names he could not recall, removed the vault through an agent.

The family, he said, is native of Lausanne, Switzerland, and none of them ever had personal access to the vault.

According to William H. Houghton, in charge of the service, members of the family recently "cabled a similar vault in Switzerland and his ultimate objective is believed to have been Germany.

Officials here and in Washington declined to comment on reports agents had also found $2,000,000 on deposit under the name of Josefowitz.

Treasury officials believed the gold found yesterday to be only one of several deposits of the family, reputedly an extremely wealthy European family, hoarding the gold here for safekeeping in violation of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934 and the Emergency Banking Act of 1933.

Master Captain Costomenis, Captain John Atwood, native of Shelburne, lost his vessel off Plum Island, Mass., when the fishing craft Ingomar split her hull.

Cast adrift in the fog and battered by huge waves the Halifax trawler Lunenburg, Captain Lewis, members of the family recently "cabled a similar vault in Switzerland and his ultimate objective is believed to have been Germany.

Officials here and in Washington declined to comment on reports agents had also found $2,000,000 on deposit under the name of Josefowitz.

Treasury officials believed the gold found yesterday to be only one of several deposits of the family, reputedly an extremely wealthy European family, hoarding the gold here for safekeeping in violation of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934 and the Emergency Banking Act of 1933.

Walls of Snow Ten Feet High Piled Up Near Listowel

(By The Canadian Press)

Airplanes May Scatter Food For Hamlets

Toronto, Feb. 19 —(CP)—Every available piece of equipment in the service of the Ontario Highways Department was pressed into use today and most battled in bitter cold to clear snow-filled roads that completely isolated many sections of old Ontario.

In some quarters the suggestion was made that the Provincial Air Service might be called upon to bring food to scattered hamlets, which have been without supplies for miles but E. M. Smith, Deputy Minister of Highways, would make no statement.

Mr. Smith would, however, said he imagined if there was a delay short of food that would be the last resort in the battle against the storm.

Oshawa Faces Milk Shortage As Farmers Unable to Reach City

Intense cold flooded Ontario today on the trail of a blizzard that left the highways manlied in deep drifts.

As plows cut their way slowly over the high-banked roads, the weather still held well below zero and the forecast generalized "decidedly cold" for tomorrow.

Parham's residents, twenty miles north of Kingston, were cut off in a stinging 50-below wind. Six below was Hamilton's reading.

Concern was felt for Oshawa's milk supply from farms. There was no indication of an immediate clearance of roads that would let farmers into the city. Bakers turned back after a futile effort to get bread into Port Perry, near Oshawa.

Plead for Help.

Near Omemee, 20 miles northwest of Trenton, farmer Percy Reid saw snow piled 20 feet high on the highway in front of his home. The drift was just under the telephone wires. It took a horse and cutter more than 10 hours to make a 30-mile trip through the snow of the highway.

Throughout Norfolk County were piled the Silkbelt that almost paralyzed for hours. County students attending Simcoe high school either trudged miles over the snow covered wastes to their homes or found accommodation for the night in the town.

Trains Stopped.

For the first time this winter, departure of trains was delayed from south through Brantford. The mail train left Brantford but could not make its way back. Trains were stopped.

The trains into Stratford were an hour or more late. A tractor plow attempted the cut through to Milverton but gave up after a few miles against the 15-foot snow. Freight trains were cancelled on the Toronto-Bound-Orangeville railway line.

In other parts of the province the railway companies either cancelled their trains or ran far behind schedules. Plows were used on the main but did little to relieve the situation.

MORE THAN AVERAGE NUMBER WORKING

Employment figures this month have been fairly consistent with those from previous months, a number being given work on outside jobs. It was reported at the local Employment Service of Canada office today, that the past week or two between thirty and forty men have been given work by the local Canadian National Railways on snow shovelling and track clearing. Some of these men have been taken from the local employment office in response to requests being made to the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company, Gerrybrite, has also engaged a large number of laborers.

NOT AS COLD AS TWO YEARS AGO

In spite of the chill complaints of shivering citizens, who look upon the present as the coldest winter, one, that has been experienced here in some years, it is behind the times the basis of official records at the city hall today that below zero temperatures recorded for this winter have not exceeded in depth or number those recorded for the month in the district two years ago. So far this winter, it was shown, fewer registration has been officially marked at 19 below. Two years ago the mercury dropped to record was 39 below zero. Since December 4th of last year, 27 days have been marked by the local office as below zero none having the depth exceeding 19 below, 1934, a total of 23 days all of which were below zero were marked.

Previous to election of new officers, Mr. Mason was voted a resolution of thanks for the able manner in which he had carried on the affairs of the Ward during the past year. A vote of confidence in the administration of the Liberal Government under the leadership of Rt. Hon. William Lyons Mackenzie King was also passed. Members of the Ward pledged themselves to the loyal support of the Liberal party, and to the gallant member, Mr. Thomas Cameron, M.P. Following the usual business of the meeting, a discussion of political questions of the day was heard.

FISHERMAN AFRAID TO LAY NETS

Fresh fish are scarce at this present time because fishermen are not taking any chances on raising their nets, it was reported today by one well known member of the fraternity. During present weather of cold weather we're leaving the nets in the water. The minute we take them out they'll freeze, snap off like bits of wood when they're knocked," he stated. Fear that a large percentage of fish in local waters might die from suffocation was also voiced by the local resident. Days and weeks of sub-freezing weather has spread a thick coating of ice over two foot thick in the bay and surrounding water.

REV. G.A. STONER GIVES ADDRESS

Joint Meeting of Young People Is Held At St. A. Citadel

The regular meeting of the Salvation Army Young People's Legion was held on Monday evening, Fifty-two young people were present at the Christian Missionary Alliance Young People's Society and were invited to join with the Legion for the evening's service. Miss Irene Young, Chaplain of the Legion, opened the meeting with the hymn "Saviour Like a Shepherd Lead Us" and offered prayer. She then read the Scripture from 1 Peter 3-12. The president, Mr. Eric Taylor led the young people in the singing of several choruses.

A welcome was extended to the visitors and Miss Gertrude Cretney, welcomed the distinguished visitors, the members and their friends and invited Mr. Charles Dolan to act as master of ceremonies for the evening. At the conclusion of the program Mr. Domenico expressed sincere appreciation to the speakers, the artists who took part in the program, George O'Brien, chairman of the banquet committee, George Lee, lecturer, and the ladies, who so efficiently prepared and served the delicious banquet. The tables were attractive with silver baskets of yellow daffodils. During the evening favours of toiletries were presented to the young guests through the kindness of Dolan's Drug Store and gifts were also presented the men.

Fine Musical Program

Mr. Dolan in his usual happy style, made the evening one continuous round of merriment with his anecdotes pointed at various members. The musical program was opened by a vocal solo by Harold Davidson, one of the city's promising young singers, who contributed "Moonlight and Roses" and "Prairie Moon." Mr. Harold Barrett was also soloist and the rich beauty of his voice was never more pronounced than in the rendition of "I Love Life" and "Friend of Mine," which encore he kindly acceded to.

A new musical group, the Mohawk Mountaineers, Donald Green, Thomas Wilkinson, Walter Taylor, and Irving Kroch, added to the entertainment of the evening with their cowboy songs, and were warmly applauded after their appearance. Pat and Tony di Genova gave instrumental selections that were greatly appreciated.

Tribute to the mindfulness and sympathy of Mussolini, characteristics which have endeared him to young and old in the city, was paid by Mr. Dolan as he called upon the pastor to speak.

Rev. Mr. Domenico, V.G., gave a thought-provoking address on the causes of the present conflict in spite of the campaign being waged by the Knights of Columbus against it, which is prevailing in Russia reports by unbiased observers indicate is Communism at the present greatest enemies of humanity recorded in history.

"Communism," the speaker said, "denies the existence of God. There is no God, therefore there are no ten commandments. Consequently there is no sanction for morality. Why should children obey their parents? There is no reason why they should if there is no God. So Communism strikes at the root of everything that is vital to civilization.

"Communism destroys the God given right to private property legitimately acquired; the rights of God are absolute and God has given certain rights unto man. In short, the false philosophy of Communism destroys the fundamental principles of the rights of man, family and state and leaves the citizen to a mere economic tool to be utilized and cast aside."

Magistrate Baller

Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., who is no less associated with the many high offices in the Knights of Columbus, was called upon to speak and he commended the officers and committee in charge on the splendid evening's program. It was an augury for the future welfare of the local Council, which is one of the oldest in the history of the Knights of Columbus in the Province of Ontario.

Rev. Father John Knox, S.J., always a welcome visitor in Belleville, was a guest at the banquet last evening. Father Knox, who stepped off on his way to Montreal to visit Monsignor Nicholson, expressed his great pleasure in being present and outlined the reasons for always being delighted to come to Belleville. He spoke of his acquaintance with Monsignor Nicholson dating from a meeting overseas during the war, so for very personal reasons it was a great pleasure for him to be here, and secondly, from his first experience of knowing the good people of Belleville during his two weeks' mission with the parish, his reasons were sincere.

Father Knox then referred to the Knights of Columbus, having first met the Knights as an organization through the good work they did in the interests of our soldiers from Canada during the war. Their work in co-operation with the Catholic Women's League was one of the lovely features of those tragic times.

Church an Organism

Every Catholic realized, the speaker said, that the Church is an organism, a living body. When new needs arise the Church meets those needs. In these latter days two organizations have come into being within the Church; one of these organizations is the Knights of Columbus. The second body is particular, as Monsignor Nicholson pointed out, is Catholic action against the menace of Communism, which is held out as a panacea for the solution of some of our present problems. The Catholic Church has the solution if the world would only hearken to the rule of Peter, in the person of Pope Leo XIII and of Pope Pius XI, now happily and gloriously reigning. We feel confident in the great campaign of Catholic action, the Knights of Columbus will be as they always have been since their inception, in the front line.

Greetings from the Supreme Knight of the Order for North America, Martin H. Carmody, were brought to the gathering by Dr. W. Collins, K.C., Past State Deputy, who had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Carmody in Toronto the previous day. Mr. Carmody extended the good wishes of the supreme body of the Knights of Columbus to Belleville and their friends.

The banquet and entertainment was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.

SPECIAL NOTICE
Greetings of Supreme Knight Given by Past District Deputy Collins

A happy evening's entertainment was arranged by Belleville Council, Knights of Columbus for members and their friends last evening, when they were hosts at a banquet held in the Council chamber of the order. A program of addresses, witty after-dinner speeches, and music made an evening that will long be remembered with pleasure by the many guests present.

Grand Knight Frank Domenico the visiting president, took charge of the program. The opening hymn was "Jesus Has Lifted Me," after which Miss Gertrude Cretney, with a splendid vocal number, "Jesus Saviour, Pilot Me," was sung by the group.

Some inspiring testimonies were given by a number of young people and several short choruses were sung, led by Miss Cretney, Mrs. Ray Lowe also delighted the audience with "The Stranger of Galilee."

Rev. Mr. Stoner, pastor of the Christian Missionary Alliance, gave a splendid address which touched the hearts of all present. His text was taken from Luke 18-20, "Yet lackest thou one thing." Mr. Stoner in an impressive way told the story of the rich young ruler who although he had everything he wished for yet he was far from happy. Something vital in his life was lacking. Though he was a ruler, a noble, honest and sincere young man he was not satisfied. Christ hath said "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled." This young man in his hunger for righteousness sought what people will say of him and runs through the dusty road to meet Christ, bowing before his cries, 'Good Master, what must I do to inherit Eternal Life?' He received what he asked for and his sins but was only willing to do right as he thought he could have his own way. Because he would not make the sacrifice Christ asked, to give up his own will away sorrowful. We, too, can find in Christ a larger measure of satisfaction if we give up our all to Him. Two things are lacking in the lives of many people today as they were in the life of this young ruler: (1) Salvation; (2) a wholehearted consecration. God is demanding this of each of us.

The speaker brought his address to a close with the words of a well-known hymn "Have You Any Room For Jesus, The Man That Hast Thou Given For Me."

The Misses Gertrude and Dorothy Cretney sang as a duet, "Jesus Saviour, Pilot Me."

Miss Young offered a vote of thanks to Mr. Stoner and all who helped with the programme. This was seconded by the President of the Legion, Major Arnold. C. G. expressed his appreciation in a few well-chosen words.

The old hymn tune, "Missionary" guided beautifully the words of the hymn "Bringing Sheaves Rejoicing Bringing Treasures." Miss G. Cretney closed the service with prayer.

FORMER PREMIER HITS GOV'T ON HYDRO ONSLAUGHT

Says Attack Is For "Political Purposes Only"

HEPBURN IN HOUSE

Macaulay Takes Exception to Statement on Succession Duties

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—(CP) — With Leader's Day in the Throne Speech debate concluded, the Ontario Legislature today turned to consumption of the debate on second reading of the Provincial Income Tax. F. M. Dewan (Lib., Oxford) was slated to lead off the day's discussion.

Opposition Leader George S. Henry launched the Conservative attack on the Administration yesterday in an address that occupied the entire afternoon. He charged Premier Hepburn evidently would force conversion on the country if he had his way, criticized bond deals with the Wood-Gundy Company of Toronto, and charged the Government with making an onslaught on Hydro "for political purposes only".

Premier Hepburn countered at the adjournment last night with an attack on the former administration the grounds of "wastefulness and inefficiency" and defended his own administration particularly with regard to cancellation of the Quebec power contracts.

"If the Conservatives erred in cancelling the contracts, it erred on the side of the common people," the Premier declared.

Mr. Henry hinted at a public accounts committee investigation of the Government's bond dealings with the Wood-Gundy Company.

He charged the Government had handed over bonds to the company without calling for tenders and said he was seriously considering whether the Legislature should call Harry Gundy head of the firm, before the public accounts committee "to tell what he made out of it."

First Day in House

It was Premier Hepburn's first day in the House since the session started. He had been in London testifying at the extortion trial of Henry Walker. The Premier was greeted with loud desk banging when he arrived in the Legislative chamber.

Sharp clashes with the Opposition leader and Leopold Macaulay (Conse., York, South), marked Mr. Hepburn's speech.

"The former Government, he said, had planned for capital expenditures, which would have cost $2,000,000 but his administration had slashed these. One was the $1,250,000 mental hospital at Smith's Falls which Mr. Hepburn described as "a bribe" to the constituency.

There were various examples of inefficiency in the Government service, he went on. In one case a chief clerk in the Highways Department had been hired short on his accounts. F. Martin Turnbull in the Treasury Department had stolen money just before leaving was given $300 "for services to the Department".

The Premier referred to the Government's collection of succession duties. Discussing the Harold B. Ritchie estate he said the Hon. Peter Smith, K.C., a partner of Leopold Macaulay had not disclosed all the necessary details. Mr. Macaulay angrily jumped to his feet taking exception to "a dirty, low-down insinuation."

"Fed" by Ferguson Charged

Turning to the Government's action cancelling the Quebec power contracts, Mr. Hepburn charged the English Press, in its attacks on the Government in this matter, had been "fed" by Hon. Howard Ferguson, former Premier and Canadian High Commissioner to the United Kingdom.

From Mr. Henry came the declaration he had never heard anything cheaper than we're getting here this year."

Mr. Hepburn returned to the power contracts. He said the one with the Ottawa, Montreal Power Company, with which I. W. Killam was interested, and the Ontario and Empire was associated, was entered into "to bolster the financial position of 'The Mail and Empire'."

The Premier said he had subscribed to a policy of province-wide debt conversion at Ottawa. The same thing was being done in Ontario under the Ministry of Municipal Affairs. Mr. Hepburn stated he knew the Federal Government was loaning money to the Western provinces at 2½ and were "hopelessly insolvent".

The Government, he concluded, would proceed to give honest and efficient administration. It was the only alternative to the power interests, St. James Street "nor the Canadian clippers of the country. It had been elected by men of humble income.

CARMEL

Carmel—At the Young Peoples meeting held in the church on Wednesday evening, February 12th. A debate "Resolved that Home Missions present a greater challenge than Foreign Missions", was the most important feature of the evening's programme for the Y.P. Union. The affirmative was upheld by Miss Martin and Mr. Cole from the Stonewall Y.P.S. The negative was supported by Miss Marion Waddell and Mr. Harold Brimnell of Carmel. The Judges were Miss Evelyn McIntyre of West Huntingdon, Rev. Mr. Johnson of Bishop and Rev. Mr. Derrick. Mr. Waller Meyers acted as time keeper. After a long consideration the judges decided in favor of the affirmative.

The opening service included quiet music by Miss Peta Hetherington. The devotional part was conducted by Mrs. Wanda Sine while following with prayer by Miss Hazel Horton and the Scripture lesson read by Miss Margaret Reynolds.

Mrs. Sine gave a very interesting reading. After the devotional the President, Miss May Reynolds, gave a very hearty welcome to the visiting members of the Stonewall League and other visitors.

Mr. Major, member of the Stone Church, gave a reading which was very much enjoyed. Miss Marion of Walkridge, favored with a piano solo. After a few games were ended, the pastor, Mr. Merrick closed the meeting with prayer. Miss Hazel Horton leader of the social part, entertained with a few witty games, after which the ladies served refreshments.

Mr. Martin on behalf of the visiting League expressed in a few well chosen words their appreciation to the Carmel League for such a very pleasant and profitable evening together.

In spite of the heavy snowfall the 37 highway is kept in excellent condition by the road men.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Simmons, Jack McCabe and Miss Fay and Nadean Scott of Belleville, took tea at Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Scott's Saturday evening.

Mr. W. Pitman is confined to his bed with measles.

Mrs. Herb. Howes is ill.

Mrs. Chas. Reynolds is attending her house duties again after her illness for the past two weeks.

Kiwanis Owned Grounds Favored By the Members

Frank and open discussion on a scheme to establish a Kiwanis playgrounds in this city took place at the weekly luncheon of the Club on Tuesday at the Queen's Hotel and it was decided to have the committee appointed continue their work and report at a subsequent meeting of the Club. It appeared to be the unanimous opinion of the club, that the organization would not be a cheque writing Club and that the playgrounds, if established, would be under the complete control of the Kiwanis Club.

The first speaker was spoke after Harold Belden, chairman of the committee had given a report, stated that he did not believe the club should pay for the upkeep and equipment of the playgrounds now in Belleville unless the club was given control of the management. It was learned, that the Board of Education owned the land on which the two playgrounds are now situated and that the Board would not turn over either property to the Club. The Board, it was learned was willing that the club should put in new equipment if they saw fit and they would pay for the maintenance and salaries of the supervisors but the Board wished to have control of the hiring of these supervisors. "This would make us a cheque writing organization and I don't think, that is the proper procedure," said Eddie Shapiro. "We have a sum of money on hand and I believe the object in collecting this money was to have a playground for the kiddies, owned and controlled by the Kiwanis Club", George A. Lee also was in favor of a fully owned playground and referred to the playgrounds at Oshawa where Kingston as examples of what could be done by an organization.

Favored Kiwanis Owned Grounds

Ernie Reynolds was also in favor of a fully controlled playground by the Club and stated, that the East end playground was quite unsuitable territory, particularly from a sanitary standpoint, and the member was also favor of acquiring a tract of land for a playground, that would be modern in every respect. Other members voiced the same opinion but discussion was ended, when it was decided to further investigate the proposition and report back.

Bill Cook reported on the activities of the Xl-Y league stating to the members there were 17 teams in all classes in competition and that the league was progressing rapidly to their satisfaction. Herb. Fox was named as convener of the Bantam section, owing to Bill Anderson not being able to make the hours on which the teams play. Ross Bitzer requested, that all committee chairmen of the activities of the Institute and Club, report their activities, so that the Achievement Report for the month of January can be submitted. J. O. Herity, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, who was so ably broadcast, speaking in Toronto on Abraham Lincoln, was congratulated by Club on his effort and Mr. Herity replied briefly, stating that it was a new experience and his feelings at facing a "mike" and unseen audience were most trying. Report on dance was given by general chairman, George A. Lee. It being shown that a small profit was made but as the chairman explained, the object of the dance was not to raise money but to entertain the many friends, who in years past had assisted the Kiwanis in their work.

Mr. Treuner, blind organist and Field Secretary for the Canadian Institute for the Blind was a guest of the club and delighted with a piano selection and also a solo in a most pleasing manner. Mr. Treuner also explained to the club some of the club were expressed by the President, Frank Domenico was in the chair for the luncheon.

LIFE-SAVING

145 awards were made in 1935 by the Royal Canadian Humane Society, it was revealed at the annual meeting in Hamilton. Altogether the honor rolls of the society embrace the names of 2343 persons who acted the part of heroes and heroines in the history of the society. No less than 3689 lives were saved.

Such a side of life is one that cannot be too much regarded. Many of these heroic persons do not relish the light of publicity though their acts are an inspiration to thoughtfulness for others.

PULPIT DISCUSSES DEPENDENCE

"We cannot be independent without learning successfully to be interdependent", said Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick at Riverdale Church, New York, pointing out the dangers inherent in dependence and in pension plans. "It will not do in a pulpit like this, and before the people who know where the next meal is coming from to talk about independence apart from the economic conditions that surround us. Is there anything that so quickly knocks a man's self-reliance in character into a cocked hat, crumples him up, takes the heart out of him, until he knows how to look anybody in the face, as to find himself and his children dependent for the roof they sleep under and the food they eat? The real suffering today among people so circumstanced is not physical but mental.

"And on the other side, when millions of our people get used to economic dependence, stop rebelling against it, accept it, begin crying to the Federal Government, as to Santa Claus, 'You must support me, give me bonuses; give me $200 a month when I am sixty as long as I live;' fix things that no matter what I do, I shall always be secure; then what have we done to self-reliant character among our people? The outstanding problem of the modern world is somehow to adjust independence and interdependence."

The worldly man wastes his life by permitting himself to become the slave of the things of which he should be master, Rev. William O'Connor declared in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York. The choice between worldliness and other-worldliness is the issue all must face. Reasonable enjoyment of the good things of this life does not constitute worldliness, he said, naming Christ's enjoyment of good health, a loving home, attachment to His native land and pleasure in the companionship of His mother and friends during His life on earth. Father O'Connor defined worldliness as a misuse of these things for selfish ends and set-up gods from the heart and consciousness of Jesus Christ".

He said that the worldly fear death because they lack any other standards by which to judge what comes after, while the indifferent Christian's fear is rooted in a sudden consciousness of sin, which overwhelms him as death approaches. "The world's fear for this life does not know or greatly care what may come after. The one thing it hates and fears is death. If we love the world, too, we shall share in that fear, but to hate it would be to stand in our own judgment and that will be because of our consciousness of our sin. Anything else we could explain and face God serenely. But sin cannot be explained, defended, or excused. The world may laugh at it and consider it of little importance, especially if it be secret or undiscovered sin. But in the sight of God, it is very important that man should have chosen his own pleasure instead of His commandments."

Dean Gauss of Princeton University charged in an address to Newman Clubs that the universities of the nation had placed a premium on wealth as a measure of human welfare by promising higher income to those who attend their courses. "We of the universities have brought this curse upon ourselves, because we have said if you came to our college you would earn more money than those who did not come." The drive for wealth had gone beyond the full dinner pail and had arrived at the full strong box.

Better churches were held to be the world's need by Dr. Frederic T. Steele at Cuyler Presbyterian Church. Better Christians and better interpretation of the living stream of God and His Gospel than any of the preachers have been able to give, he said, were necessary. Speaking of the Christian church he said it was "the oldest, strongest and most remarkable of human institutions. It has gone through enough reverses by persecution, poverty and oppression to have wrecked it time and time again; worse than these enemies have been deplorable evils within itself, when wealth and temporal powers have seduced it and when corruption of the vilest has invaded its most sacred precincts. But it has still lived on. Our religion is not something which is passing, that will soon be out of date. Instead, we are on the threshold of a new advance, of better and truer understanding."

The secret of giving affectionately is great and rare; it requires address to do it well; otherwise we lose instead of deriving benefit from it.—Corneille.

THE SLEEPING PORT

All through the summer, when the world is green,
Our river brings us ships that come and go,
Laden with life from every foreign land,
Making us long to sail where strange winds blow.

But now, when winter shrouds us deep in snow,
Our sleeping port is dead and cold and drear;
The music of the ships is lost awhile;
The port is silent now, but spring is near.

And when it brings warm winds to cast their spell
And set our mighty ice-bound river free,
The ships will come again and wake our port
From winter sleep—the ships we long to see.

FOUR DEAD, thirty injured in a fire on Lexington Avenue, New York City, most of the victims being dancers who disregarded first warnings of fire menace; eight killed in a New Jersey hotel burning—comes as a shock to folks who considered that fire hazards to life and limb had been reduced to a minimum through modern fire escapes and safety devices. Not so long ago a commercial traveller lost his life in a hotel fire in Brockville and the evidence disclosed that the safety regulations insisted upon by the government had not been lived up to, nor had the inspection been what it should have been. These things always loom large after a disaster and are perhaps too soon forgotten. Regulations are drafted and made law, and seem to provide sufficient safeguards. Inspectors are appointed to see that the safety regulations are complied with—and it is always the human factor which is weakest—either the man who seeks to evade compliance with the regulations and considers them non-essential, or the inspector who permits the negligence to pass unreported. The appalling tragedy at the Iroquois Theatre fire in Chicago several years ago with hundreds killed and injured could have been prevented or life and limb protected by compliance with commonsense precautions—the excursion steamer Slocum blew up from a defective boiler, and sank off Hell Gate, New York City, and many lives were lost because the life preservers were filled with sawdust instead of cork and every sensible precaution had been ignored—casting a fearful weight of blame upon the government inspectors who passed the vessel as fit and safe for passengers. The only thing needed to complete the horrible picture of the sinking Slocum—the steamboat inspectors who passed the defective boilers and sawdust life preservers to be blown up with the boilers that they passed as safe but which were as thin as paper, and endeavor to console themselves that with the sawdust life preservers which they passed, without inspection.

IN THOSE GRAND DISUNITED STATES it is possible to join a brand new political party for a dollar down and so much a month which will promise anything from fifty dollars a month free gratis, up to two hundred dollars per month, to be spent every month or be deducted from the following month's handout. Some folks are so enthusiastic about the two hundred per month and not examining the conditions closely plan motor car trips far and near, savings accounts and all that. The Townsend plan which applies to California only, as yet, although it is trying to get national recognition in Congress, promises two hundred dollars to all over sixty years of age, male and female, on consideration that the money be spent every month within the state. Aberhart, Alberta reformer, is the only one thus far of the gift promisers who has been placed in a position where he must make good his promises, or else. He is sure having a heck of a time keeping the voters quiet for they refuse to be paid off in conversation. Aberhart made the mistake of getting his party elected.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

Telling His Knell

For the 18th time the exasperated guest rang the bell marked "Porter" in the seaside hotel. At last there came a shuffle of feet and the aged porter appeared.

"Now, sor," he admonished, "it ain't no use goin' on summonin' me like that when I've got other jobs to attend to."

"Summoning you?" explained the guest wearily. "Good heavens, I gave that up long ago. I thought you were dead and I've been tolling for you."

SUBSIDIES' CUTS BRINGS PROTEST FROM G. McGEER

Described By Vancouver Mayor As False Economy

BILL STANDS OVER

Motion Coming to Equalize Payment of 1930 Pool at Sixty Cents

OTTAWA, Feb. 19.—(CP)—Liberal ministers will hear from Gerry McGeer as the Parliamentary session moves along if they try to effect too many economies in British Columbia services. A friendly warning from the Mayor of Vancouver and a hint of his advocacy of advanced monetary principles were given the Ministers today as they continued to seek House approval of Departmental votes.

Shipping subsidies provided the first ripple of discontent, one of the few Liberal members of the large Liberal majority in the Commons last night to be moved to object to the item of $142,000 in the grant to assist the service from Vancouver to Japan. Mr. McGeer described it as false economy and clashed with Hon. W. D. Euler Minister of Trade and Commerce.

The subsidy for the Atlantic service to Great Britain was also cut $250,000 and this drew a protest from Hon. C. H. Cahan (Cons. St. Lawrence-St. George) Montreal, but Mr. Cahan was mild compared with Mr. McGeer.

Mr. Euler charged Mr. McGeer with indulging in heroics and the Vancouver Mayor retorted that he was only beginning and if the minister was worried by what he said last night he was going to have a "rather bad time in the future."

Economy Reason Given

Economy was the reason given by Mr. Euler for reducing the subsidies and Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Finance, said it was the Government's duty to the taxpayers to carry on services at the least possible cost. "Never was I satisfied the cut in subsidies would mean no impairment in services.

The Pacific Ocean was the world's greatest theatre of potential activity and danger, said Mr. McGeer. The leadership of the British Empire in Pacific affairs was being challenged, particularly by the growing power of Japan. Other Nations on the Pacific were assisting their merchant shipping and their ports. It was up to Canada, for its own sake and as a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations to compete with the National activity of other communities.

"If the Government pursued the course of orthodox economy it would also repudiate its pledge to create currency and credit in accordance with public need.

Bill Stands Over

The ship-subsidy item was not passed and stands over for further consideration. It was the subject of discussion by stating he was opposed to subsidies as a matter of principle but realized present conditions made them necessary. He believed they should be cut down to the minimum and that the proposed cuts were little if any. He convinced, otherwise he was quite prepared to retrace his steps.

British Columbia was in the fore in yesterday's debates as the House spent the private members' hour debating the Bill to redress freight rates on grain moving from British Columbia proposed by Thomas Reid (Lib., New Westminster) for the fifth successive session. The bill elapsed before a vote on second reading was reached.

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture, had better luck with his estimates than Mr. Reid as he obtained approval of the House for a vote for health of animals and administration of the Meat and Canned Foods Act after a peaceful discussion.

Abuses disclosed by the Price Spreads Inquiry were recalled by Hon. H. H. Stevens, lone Reconstructionist, when Mr. Gardiner if any steps were being taken to stop the deceptive labelling of canned goods as to quantity and quality.

Mr. Gardiner said officials of the Department were considering the matter. Mr. Stevens thought these officials should be brought to task for lack of aggressiveness. He suggested Mr. Gardiner speed them up and remarked that when he was Minister of Trade and Commerce the attitude of the Department of Agriculture had prevented him from getting action.

Good news for a number of Western farmers who delivered wheat to the pools in 1930 was contained in an announcement by Prime Minister Mackenzie King. He said the Government would introduce a bill to permit it to equalize payment on 1930 pool wheat at 60 cents a bushel.

In that year the price of wheat dropped sharply after deliveries had started and the initial payment by the pools had to be reduced to around 90 cents a bushel. The Government will make payments to farmers to bring their returns up to 60 cents.

Representations have been made to the Government to increase tariffs against baby chicks imported from the United States but Hon. Gardiner told the House: The Government has made no decision. Before the reciprocal Treaty the Canadian tariff against chicks was 30 cents each a prohibitive duty. The Treaty reduced it by 15 per cent which amounted to a cent and two each. Canadian poultrymen, the Minister said, had suggested a rate less than nine cents.

Utica, N.Y., Feb. 18 (AP)—Several thousand persons hastily evacuated the main business section today when a series of illuminating gas explosions set fire to two buildings and buried manhole covers high into the air.

A policeman and a fireman were seriously injured. Several plate glass windows in Genesee and Bleecker Streets, Utica's main business thoroughfares, were smashed.

JAP BOY PLAYS COPS FOR SUCKERS

Fakes Being Lost to Get Inside Police Station to Satisfy Curiosity.

New York, Feb. 19 (CP)—New York police were pretty certain today they had their collective leg pulled—and by a five-year-old Japanese boy at that.

Little Thomas Kodama looked very small and alone standing on a beating Broadway corner yesterday. He eyed and eyed a policeman until the latter took him to the station house, convinced the youngster was lost. Then the kindly Gaelic Thomas went to work.

He wanted to know how brass buttons were sewed on to coats, who the fugitives were sometimes when crooks were locked on the walls, whether policemen had to use their revolvers and nightsticks often, how they managed to eat if they were on duty at meal time, and, first of one and then another, whether he liked any cop rapscallion what his name was and where he lived.

Other questions tumbled from his tiny mouth—more than you could shake a checker-board-and-beat-the-desperate police reached Thomas' mind.

She picked him up at the station although she'd certain he knew his way home and hadn't been lost at all. She had a suspicion Thomas had played the police for the Japanese equivalent of suckers, with his progress at learning what American bosses looked like from the inside.

Public Utilities in Kingston Now Taxed

Kingston, Ont., Feb. 18 (CP) — Now water, light and power are to be taxed. The assessment roll, which has increased from $5,000 to $30,000? This is the result of the assessment of the public utilities, found had happened to his tax bills for the last few years—electrical gas and water, when he received the accounts. Mr. Folger said that for the first time buildings of these three services have been assessed.

In the past only the land occupied by the utilities had been assessed. The new roll were received too late to make an appeal to the court of revision.

The commission decided to refer the matter to the city solicitor.

Selecting A Perfume

By HELEN FOLLETT

One hears now and then about the beauteous lady of the silver screen who compounds the perfumes she uses. Tut-tut at that. Don't try it little one. Some ladies may be heavenly, and then again they may not and the fastidious male will be under a frightful strain.

The cosmetic chemist who specializes in perfumes knows very well that one sweet florettied odor can absorb and kill another one equally delightful. Scents fight, even the noses of them. Anyhow, why should any woman fancy that, without professional knowledge and experience, she can be successful in this most difficult business?

When selecting a perfume, don't sniff too many samples. The senses need soon goes into a state of collapse, is no good at all. Tip the bottle until there is perfume on the stopper, touch the stopper on the back of the hand, wave hand in air until the alcohol is gone, then take a whiff.

Perfumes of all perfumes are blends. As there are not enough flowers grown on the face of the earth to supply the perfume demand, synthetic products are used. They are not necessarily often of excessive as essential oils.

Permanent wave experts have developed ways of overcoming the difficulties of curling dyed hair. Yet there are certain chemical dyes that make the permanent impossible.

The wise woman will let the operator know what sensations she has been using. A test curl will be made. Then will follow the setting.

A woman feels very grand and special when she has a powder that especially mixed to match her skin. But if she seeks long enough she will find one already prepared, and for less money.

In the cosmetic laboratory powders are passed through bolting cloth again and again. Revolving sieves are used which finally reduce the powder to elements so thoroughly distributed, and the product is as soft as fluff on a butterfly's wing. It's easier than kneading powder in different sizes like a bowl, mixing with a spoon and taking a chance on results.

92ND BIRTHDAY IS CELEBRATED

Mrs. Samantha H. Dix of Stirling Hale and Hearty at Age

STIRLING, February 18.—(Special).—During the past few days gifts and remembrances have arrived from all parts of United States and Canada for Mrs. Samantha H. Dix, who celebrated her 92nd. birthday on Saturday, Feb. 15th. Friends of the neighborhood gathered at the home of her niece, Mrs. Walter Parliar, where she lives and works daily at her favorite hobby of needlecraft, for a party given in her honor, and a delicious supper and all the trimmings.

Mrs. Dix, who is entering upon her 93rd year, of a life, that has been happy, eventful, and service able to the community in which both she and her parents were born. Her hearing and sight are particularly keen for a lady of her years, and she modestly exhibits some of her latest creations in needlework to those who visit her, most of which is done without the use of spectacles. At the present time she is busily engaged in knitting mittens. Among the most unusual gifts she has received for this occasion is a winter bouquet, which was sent direct from Los Angeles, California, by a niece. After showing the gifts to the reporter, whom she was delighted to talk to, she reviewed with remarkable accuracy all important events which had taken place during her life time in the community of River Valley, where she was born and raised. She can recall days when only narrow roads existed, where now the highways are. She spoke of an amusing incident, which took place when she was a girl on a trip to Belleville with her parents in the town was so close to the road that her mother's Sunday hat was ruined by overhanging branches. She had the crown of her lovely big hat completely flattened. Mrs. Dix with a smile, in those days the nearest school was in Stirling Village, where she walked daily.

She visited Great Peal

During her eventful life this charming lady has travelled a good deal, spending a good many years in United States, living in Cleveland Ohio, and Chicago, Ill. She attended the World Fair held in Chicago in 1893, "Forty years ago. "I am just a country girl, but I always liked the city.

Last fall this remarkably active woman had an encounter at close quarters with an aggressive goat. An experience which, she relates with much amusement. The goat, which belonged to a neighbour was destroying the hedges in the garden and Mrs. Dix went out to drive it away. She didn't drive very good, she laughed and I was busy for a time until the lady next door came to my assistance. She asked, why she didn't run. But why one, I had driven a goat known better than to turn their back on them. She escaped without injury, and now recalls the experience as a great joke.

Mrs. Dix was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerad T. Hanna, and one of a family of nine, who lived in a large old fashioned house, the foundation of which still stands on a knoll near one that is now known as Sager's Corners. The baby of the family, Mr. Wm. Hanna who is well past eighty still lives and is quite active. Only the two remain out of the nine.

During the war of 1861, Mrs. Dix, then a girl was a resident of the United States, was an active worker in the Women's Relief Corps. At the present time she is also interested in the affairs of Belleville District 39, Rebekahs and a charitered member of the River Valley Women's Institute, River Valley Branch. Speaking of all the modern inventions in the various fields of science, she believes all work in this line is constructive. "But we should not forget to use them to do our thinking for us, develop our own intellect and think for ourselves is the keynote for the advancement of all humanity."

With these remarks of real philosophy she rose to offer a hearty handshake and expressed the hope of again enjoying the company of her guest.

As we leave about to leave she told us of an old friend, who had written a poem, to her honor on the occasion of her birthday. The writer was Mrs. Roy Bush of River Valley.

A BIRTHDAY

The days come and go in this earthly life,
One by one they dawn and are gone.
Some are full and free and happy,
Others are worried and long.
When time takes a backward in thought,
There is Hewitt one day that shines,
The day of our birth has a magic touch,
Old bless the day, that is mine.

In youth and old age it 'specially shines,
I wonder, what makes it so bright ..?
It's the memory, love and respect of new friends,
And those, who have gone from our sight.

When ninety-two years you have travelled
What a lot of life you have seen.
And if there's one pleasure we can bring you.
It is "joy" As it always has been.

Your life stands out like a beacon,
To your many friends here and
When we think of your love and
And the smile that you always bear.
God's blessing we ask for your
In the days that are left of your
And may they be happy and use-
Ful and not overcrowded with

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"In Person"

Ginger Rogers At Her Merriest and Sparkling Best in Romantic Comedy

Marking her promotion to the top rank in films with a performance that puts the utmost entertainment value out of a rich romantic comedy role, Ginger Rogers appears to her first starring picture starting tomorrow in "In Person" at the Belle through to the finish.

"Tuned" is swift, light, designed for universal appeal. Miss Rogers' role exactly fits her distinctive talents.

From the pen of Samuel Hopkins Adams, "In Person" concerns an ambitious young stenographer-secretary who suddenly transformed into a quaking lass when she is snubbed by a crowd of admirers. Donning disguise and seeking a new career, she journeys to Reno Brent, a perfect stranger, to have as his guide, and his mountain home, she falls in love with him, but simultaneously reverts to a confirmed celebrity.

Her frantic efforts to lure Brent into marriage, while he tried to change her into a normal human being by remaining indifferent, provides unexpected comedy in an ultra-modern version of "shot-gun" wedding.

Although "In Person" presents Miss Rogers in a dramatic role primarily, it is not without considerable dance. The peppery player exercises rhythmic talents, displays a ton dions of fans through her ace performances with Fred Astaire in three Lavish-Field musicals, "Out of Sight, Out of Mind", "Got a Her Lease on Love" and "Don't Mention Love To Me."

George Brent plays his role to the hilt, giving a convincing characterization as the tamer of the shrew. Alan Mowbray as a screen leading man, evokes some lusty laughs. In other excellent performances are seen Dan Hinds, Louis Mason, Spencer Charters and Grant Mitchell.

"The Melody Lingers On"

Melody, romance and drama are blended into a soul-stirring symphony in "The Melody Lingers On," announced as the second feature attraction on the same program. Josephine Hutchinson and George Houston, Hollywood's newest screen pair, head the cast of this heart-tingling drama with music, based on the novel by Lowell Brentano.

Ann Preston, a carefree young American girl, studying music abroad during the World War, meets and falls in love with Sinvini, a famous operatic star on the verge of the fame. Their romance is shattered by the grim hand of war and when years ago I started Fruit-a-tives. They are mild and gentle in action, and they gave me wonderful relief. I am now 58 years of age, enjoy life once more. Mrs. F. Williamson, Montreal.

Containing extracts of APPLES, ORANGES, FIGS, PRUNES and HERBS, Fruit-a-tives are scientific sweet tonic laxative-forming drugs. They strengthen and tone the whole system. Their tonic effects help bring lasting relief.

FRUIT-A-TIVES MATURE'S FRUITS AND HERBS

AT THE CAPITOL

"I've Been Around"

Mammoth Stage Show, "Follies Parisienne".

Not all the dancing legs and girlish-like figures are on Broadway these days. Some excellent evidence of that fact is presented today at the Capitol Theatre where the "Follies Parisienne" opens for today only. For rally an hour a troupe of singing and dancing girls will perform before the Capitol's footlights in a fast moving presentation that is plenty lively in its presentation, including a beauty chorus of French models.

And the beauty chorus really has a claim to the title. Including a stage band, the group numbers 18 persons. These are divided among several branches of the usual stage presentation. Most of the members are left to the ingenuity of the producer, but they will bear in the nimble art of high stepping.

The crowning attraction of the show is held by Miss Elizabeth Graves who introduces a darling and sensational flame dance. Elizabeth is a creation of her own and will soon take its place alongside the famous fan dance. Elizabeth is a very talented and charming young lady who has held the spotlight for time before her flame creation becomes a widely imitated dance.

The remainder of the bill holding the spotlight, here are some of the features presented by those who take their place. No stage show, and not many other types of musical or entertainment features, is complete without its crooner. The crooner with the show, Ted Claire has an exceptionally pleasing voice and he chooses songs that let him arrive at every where. The show also boasts of a comedy trio of eccentric dancers and comedians who add a fantastic dancing. Helen Beard, toe tap dancer; Ruth Graves, sister of Elizabeth Graves, a very pleasing dancer and Jack Lee, a snaky odyssey.

On The Screen

The Capitol's second hit "I've Been Around" with Chester Morris and Rochelle Hudson, a love story unique in its comedy and humour.

Kingsford- and Ferdinand Gobs chalk. "Gymnastics", an American novelty, presents an oddity which can be exhibited on the same program.

ITALY MAKES HER ANSWER

Ethiopia.

Note Published

Government made public extracts of a French note, handed to Italian Ambassador Vittorio Cerruti at Paris yesterday, in addition to the text of the communication handed to Italian Ambassador Vittorio Cerruti at Paris yesterday, in which it was announced that France squarely with Britain Italy's protests over the Mediterranean mutual assistance agreement.

The note said the French government affirms it is fully in accord with Britain" in support of its declaration. France, Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia to pool their resources in event of unprovoked attack in the Mediterranean.

Premier Laval, in making the vast appropriation decreed yesterday for extraordinary colonial military defence expenditure, the Fascist government took new martial measures.

One was creation of Italy's first aerial division, with the Duke of Aosta as its commanding general. Five other generals were elevated to leadership of aerial squadrons, in addition to 300 major promotions.

POLICE BLOTTER

Last night's blizzard drove no less than 14 drunkards to the police station seeking shelter and a warm night's lodging. Activities in and around local police circles were slowed down to a walk due to the blizzard which made it too cold for serious crime to be foremost in the minds of those so inclined, Inspector Chief Kidd today.

Gordon Taylor, South Front Street, his wife and a teen aged girl were all taken into custody on a serious charge yesterday afternoon, while the four Taylor children were given over into the custody of the Children's Aid Society. The trio were arraigned before Magistrate Ponton today and held in custody on a nominal charge of vagrancy until Monday. A more serious charge is pending, police authorities revealed today.

Inspector S. Hunter, of the Motion Picture Division of the Provincial Police stationed at Brockville, was in the city today on his quarterly tour of inspection.

Board Room Gossip

As suggested by Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

GOD'S LAKE GOLD

January output reported at $58,-000, the best month mined since operation started at the property in the God's Lake section of Manitoba. During the month the mill treated 4,448 tons of ore, a daily average of 143.5 tons, or 5.98 tons per hour. December figure owing to shutdown of the mill for a day for minor repairs.

PAYMASTER

According to Toronto gossip, figures for the first ten days of February give average millheads of $7.75 per ton as against $7.50 per ton figure of $7.00. Output in the first ten days of this year totalled 4,-223,700 from 3,058 tons treated, while production in the whole of January was $74,878 from 10,382 tons.

With the level of stocks at the highest average in five years, it is little wonder that many people are taking advantage of the market. Then again, the substantial rise has created a tremendous buying power which is finding employment in many sections of the board.

Let us see how this purchasing power is used. An investor holding 25 shares of International Nickel in 1929 found himself with an equity of roughly $100 at the low point that year. In other words, if he was forced to raise cash, as the majority were at the height of the depression, his stock would only bring him in $100. Today, the same security is worth over $1,300, an appreciation of more than 1100 per cent. Today, not only is he able to sell 25 shares of Nickel to purchase other securities, but luxuries and necessities as well. When this is applied over the entire list, the importance of the market rise becomes apparent.

The average trader still remembers the 1929 break and consequently is not overstepping his means. Cash buying and very little pyramiding is evident. The ratio of brokers' loans in Montreal as of January 31st to the value of all shares traded on the Montreal Stock Exchange and the Montreal Curb Market during the period was only 0.32, as a result of a decline in brokers' loans and an increase in share values. At the end of December, 1933, the ratio was 0.38, and as of January 31st a year ago the ratio was 0.52.

The declaration of a 50-cent dividend by Hiram Walker on its common stock was in line with expectations. The only point in question whether this was on a quarterly basis. In view of the excellent earnings shown for the last few post-two years, it can be assumed that the directors will see their way clear to maintain the present dividend. The stock, however, is willing to yield close to 6 per cent. Directors of Distillers-seagrams should, in a sense, follow the lead of Hiram Walker in the matter of dividends.

Stocks are heavily margined, brokers' loans having increased $23 million increase in loans last week. Thousands of security buyers are reflect the improvement.

Altogether, the underlying position of International Nickel is at the moment, without over-estimating coast-military factors in combination of the elements of a sound investment. These, in any case, may very well be defined as a rising price-level, an efficient organization, large earnings and ample financial resources. Some people will immediately say that Nickel is too high at present levels because the return on your money is not very good. This is true, however, that the price is discounting a further elongation of earnings and dividends on an appreciable scale. The stock, as a market leader on two sides of the Atlantic will always have a speculative following.

GOLD MINING PROFITS SHADE

Two of the important Canadian gold producers, Lake Shore, Porcupine Mines Co. Ltd., and Teck-Hughes, Ltd., have reported substantial rises and ninth in gold production across the border, report profits for last year slightly below those of the year before. Dome Mines had a net profit of $1.13 per share, after depletion and adjustments, comparing with $4,050,000 the year before. Until final figures are available per-share balances cannot be calculated.

McIntyre Porcupine Mines for the year ended December 31, last, had a net of $2,520,000, equal to $3.31 a share, against $2,-800,000, or $3.68 a share for the same period the year before. The last quarter showed $1.13 a share, or two cents better than the December, 1934, quarter.

SUICIDE VERDICT GIVEN BY JURY

Unsigned Note Found Near Body of Late Wilfred Creasey

Death by suicide was the verdict submitted at the Coroner's inquest enquiring into the death of Wilfred Creasey, who was found hanging dead in the chemical building at the Consumers' Gas plant on Feb. 9th last. The adjourned inquest was held at the police court house last night before Coroner Dr. F. G. Walkridge with Crown Attorney D. L. Wilkinson conducting the examination.

Identification having been previously established by Geo. H. Creasey, brother of the late deceased, Mrs. Cretney, widow of the late Mr. Cretney, was the first witness called last night. Mrs. Cretney stated her husband was in apparently good health, that she knew of no reason why he should take his life and never had any fear. She complained of head illness and an eye condition since having had a fall some years ago. Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company, Mrs. Cretney stated, had her husband under and continually complained of headaches. Breathing difficulties were caused by the escaping fumes from the chemical plant.

Mr. James Cretney, father of the deceased, stated his son was in apparently good health, but that he had complained of head illness. Dr. Thompson, Belleville, who had attended the deceased, stated he had never had his attention drawn to any ailment. Good forgive me." Dr. Thompson identified the note in Creasey's jury read: "that the late Wilfred Cretney came to his death by suicide by hanging himself in the chemical building of the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company plant at Cortyville.

"Redmen" Earn 5 Goal Lead In Second Round Playdowns Defeating Campbellford 7-2

Locals Carry Too Much Speed and Hockey Ability

THIRD PERIOD ROUGH

McKay Draws Major Penalty While Many Bumping Duels Seen

Counting home on an early game advantage the Trenton "Redmen" gained a five goal lead over the Amalgamated Campbellford squad in the first game of the second round of the intermediate O.H.A. playdowns when the "Redmen" play-downers whipped the Maroons by the score of 7 to 2 at Lady Eaton last night before some 700 fans. Overshadowing their comfortable lead the first two frames the locals carried the play until the last stanza when the Campbellford took matters rather considerably while in the third period two penalties were handed the pestiferous Maroons rather rough as the old Campbellford team animosity flared up with the result that numerous penalties followed heavy checking.

The "Redmen" moved out into the first period speedy goals in the initial frame and were leading 2 to 1 at the end of the first canto. Applying their scoring pressure the "Redmen" added four more in the second period while the Maroons middle frame while the Maroons were kept off the score sheet but in the visitors' favor the only goal lit the last period, as the "Redmen" seemed satisfied to play for victory on their previously gained advantage. F. Lambert, centre and Bartlett each counted two goals for the locals while Bush and Hagerman were the marksmen for the Maroons.

Morton Sized Out

For the visitors Morton in the nets, stood out as he was called upon to turn the visitors back on the early stages single-handed, but his teammates returned to their defensive formation the Maroons pressed in the last period. "Buzzer" Whitton, Maroon defenceman, was penalized three rounds or sojourned in the single-handed business with "Redmen," while on the offensive Whitton not having the same degree of previous ability through executing passes. Mickie Bush, Lambert and Rogers also starred in good efforts for the Maroons.

The local squad played a steady game with the second line of S. Lloyd, flanked by Harry Morgan and Jimmie McGuire, turned in some good hockey, especially in the last period when the Maroons in they back-checked the locals in the pinches. The starting line of Rogers, Carl and Pete Morgan carried too much speed for the visitors. The locals in their colorful maroon and white uniforms, Campbellford wearing red sweaters and white pants, the "Redmen" considerably both offensively and while checking. McKay, Bartlett and were frequently last night and showed improvement in relieving on the defence.

The Play

Belleville checked the Maroons hard from the colder and outset forcing the latter shoot from outside the defence in the early stages. Carl Morgan gave away with a pass on Kennedy, in the Maroons' nets, from where Bartlett counted the first goal but only to have "Cy" Barrage rare in and tie the count a rebound shot. Whitton was rebounded through once, but Morton saved and on a return play Jack Rogers beat the combined efforts of Whitton and Bush from a close range. Jimmie McGuire broke savvy single-handed and smashed through the entire Maroon team for a beautiful goal, but Eddie Bush came back to circle the Belleville net and beat Morton. Pete Morgan and Carl Morgan combined the length of the ice on a nice two-man play to have Pete score on the period effort. Pete Morgan on a solo effort, McDonald on a nice combination play from McGuire, Barrage on a double pass from Carl Morgan and Jimmie McGuire's rink-length solo rush gave the "Redmen" four goals in the middle stanza.

Hagerman, practically from the face-off, scored the only goal in the last period, as the game livened up slightly. Penalties were few this period and two fistic encounters flared up. Carl Morgan and Whitton tangled, but when McKay took a look at Morton the latter of both teams entered into the fracas, but the general bedlam was finally quelled by Referee Smith, with McKay drawing down a major penalty. The "Redmen" now enjoy a five goal lead to take back to Campbellford Friday night. Of the Maroons' lineup Kennedy, Hagerman and Voyer hail from Havelock while Carl Morgan the Roger brothers come from Norwood.

8-END SCORED IN TORONTO SPIEL

G. B. Hanson of Kingston Is Still in Undefeated Class

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP)—Ontario curlers who got away to a fine start this spring and bring out grit stuffs wondered today what was harder to score—an eight-end or a hole-in-one. Most of them believed one was at rare as the other.

Necessity for the wonderment started yesterday at the ninth section of Ontario tankard play. Norman Rolph's Turnpike Granite rink caused a sensation by making an eight-end score against Strathcona quartet skipped by D. Riddell. The possible came on the fifth end of a second round North American Life Trophy match.

Rolph's men won the game 17-8 to make the battle more weird Riddell's four came back with a single in each end. The eight-ender before Granites made their splurge was 1-0. There wasn't light on another eight-end in the week's spiel.

Eight out-of-town rinks remained undefeated at the spiel and entered the third day of a week-long stand. The eight included two from Hamilton Thistles, and one each from Kingston, New Liskeard, Shelburne, Brantford, Brandon and Midland. Four Toronto rinks, three from the Toronto Club and one from Granites, were also unbeaten.

One Hamilton Thistles foursome skipped by W. R. Wells took its fourth straight victory by winning from Peterborough curlers 23 to 12 in a second round Birks-Kiltie Ryrie Trophy affair. The other Hamilton rink, T. Morrow, won 11-10 over Dr. F. T. Knight's Toronto Strathcona team.

Hanson Undefeated

A Kingston rink, skipped by George Hanson, continued an unbroken string of victories when it won 11-6 over Andy Grant of Royal Canadians. The match was also a second round Birks affair.

The only northern entry to remain unbeaten—R. H. Stephenson's New Liskeard band—edged out a 9-8 win over F. R. Michael's Oshawa foursome in the same competition while Shelburne, skipped by A. V. Silk defeated the strong G. G. Hall entry from Kitchener, 11-10.

Brampton, led by G. R. Parr, kept in the win column at the expense of another smart Kitchener quartet, skipped by F. G. Hall. The score was 9-8. Midland, skipped by W. L. Mackenzie defeated Sam Endicott's Hamilton four 11-10. Another eight-led by Sam Burns, defeated P. A. Lawrence's Walkerton man, 12-7.

Other results in the Birks competition found W. A. Watson's Barrie rink defeating a four of Toronto, skipped by D. B. Carlyle, 10-6. Fred Morris and Ab Yule's Toronto Club drubbing H. Meredith's Barrie rink, 15-8.

Entered in the advanced Royal York Trophy play Dr. Morrow's Hamilton Thistles defeated the Uxbridge rink, while the other Thistles team, skipped by W. Walker, takes on Thamesville, skipped by F. H. Roberts. The smart Shelburne rink skipped by Ross Watson meets Toronto Granites and the Kingston four meets a Toronto quartet. New Liskeard will meet T. Graham's Toronto and the Palmerston team by conciliating with an Oshawa rink.

BISONS WITHIN POINT OF TECS

Buffalo Defeats Cleveland While Tecs Beaten By Rochester

(By the Canadian Press)

Frank Mahfoor summed up plays-off chances as the Buffalo Bisons today and decided they looked better than for many weeks. His Club, as a result of last nights 4-0 shutout over Cleveland Falcons in Fort Erie, were within a point of London Tecumsehs, second place team in the Eastern section of the International Hockey League.

The fast travelling herd backed up by stellar net minding of Alex Wood, took advantage of a lapse by Tecs, who were beaten 3-1 in Rochester by the lowly Cardinals, in the other tilt of the evening. The brisk Olympics moved further in front in the Western Group by downing Windsor Bull Dogs 3-1 in Detroit.

It was Kivanis night at Fort Erie's Peace Bridge Arena, and the Bisons put on one of their best shows for Dud Sinden and the Atlantic lodgemen attending. Art Bentley gave them an added thrill when he scored on a penalty shot granted when Freddie Robertson tripped Tiny Teasdale. Later Bentley scored another goal on a pass from Scott Rath.

Farmer Leads Cards

"Whitey" Farrant, former Toronto amateur led the struggling Cardinals in their game home stand before a record crowd of 700 fans. He banged two or the team's three goals, the other marker going to speedy Orsh. Owen Lennon saved the Tecs from a shutout with a consolation goal.

The smallest crowd of the season—1,400 fans—saw Olympics continue their merry pace, hawing little trouble in disciplining the visiting Windsorites. Only Earl Robertson's brilliance in the Bull Dogs' nets saved them from a worse beating.

Six penalties were handed out, all for fighting. Conny King and "Mud" Brunsteau were featured in one bout, Fred Hergarts and Don Smillie in another and Hergarts and Ron Moffat in the final tussle. Brunsteau and Hergarts also received three minutes' spotlight, nicking the winners' goals.

30 WHITE HOPES ENTER TOURNEY

All Receive Medical O. K. and Ready For the Gong

Toronto, Feb. 19 (CP)—Canada's "white hopes," some 30 of them, were all through with their training today with nothing left to do but wait for the much-ballyhooed tournament, that starts early tonight and ends sometime Thursday morning.

Anywhere from 170 to 205 pounds, in all shapes and sizes, they got their medical O.K. yesterday. They'll be thrown together at every weight in the final round, then it's every man for himself. The final winner, if he hasn't had enough, can fight in Jack Dempsey's New York window. He may even get in front of the Louis' annihilating fists. That's the purpose of the fistic carnival.

There's a huge bevy from Prince Edward Island and one from Manitoba. Quebec has two and Ontario, St. The Apex Athletic Club, promoters of the show, expect 10,000 to see the fun. The 10,000 expected some mayhem and maybe a little bloodshed. Some may or no other they'll get comedy.

In the crop of 30 hopefuls, there's a big boy from Prince Edward. He's Bill Mallich of Brantford, Ont., heavyweight champion. He was knocked out in his final pro venture. The winner will have to fight at least four, maybe five times. For that, he can stagger to the ticket window, he'll collect $500. The losers should collect plenty of bruises. They get no pay.

N. H. L. STARS

New York scorekeeper who wrote down 51 scoring points in Montreal Maroons and Americans played an 8-8 tie.

Sweeney Schriner and Harry Oliver, Americans, big guns in the American attack. Schriner strengthened his position as the League's leading marksman with two goals and two assists.

Hooley Smith and Baldy Northcott, Maroons, whose scoring was just as effective on the other side.

SCORING BEE

Maroons and Amerks Battle to 8-8 Tie in New York

Detroit whipped the Bruins in Boston 2-1 last night and increased their lead over American section rivals to four points. Slender Sweeney Schriner leads the goals and assists column with New York Americans held Montreal Maroons to an 8-8 tie. He was six points up in the scoring derby. That's what the yell-ing was about.

The events were considered to be potentially dull. Instead, they were disastrous, too, because chunky Larry Aurie fractured his collar-bone in a collision with Eddie Shore and may be lost to the Wings for the rest of the season. Hooley Smith and Adams looked about for a winger to work with Marty Barry and Herb Lewis on his Montreal Maroon line.

A New York crowed watched the scoring spree in the Garden, producing 16 goals and 51 scoring points. The party was just what the doctor ordered for Lester Patrick, American left winger, who has a three year contract as playing-coach-ship held for two years by Toronto's Charlie Conacher.

Three goals were scored in the first period, eight in the second, three in the third and two in extra time. Neither Lorne Chabot, brought out of retirement to play goal for Montreal Maroons, nor Lorne Chabot the New York cage enjoyed himself at all.

Increased Lead

Schriner collected two goals and two assists to bring his scoring total to 27 six more than that of Syd Howe, Detroit Olympics, who was credited with three assists. But Calgary Stampeder still has a commanding score in this festival.

Baldy Northcott, veteran Maroon centre, bagged two goals and three assists, to lift himself among the leading scorers. Hal Starry Oliver of Americans got one goal and four assists while Hooley Smith Ebbie Goodfellow, Maroons, whose scoring was just as effective on the other side.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

The "Redmen" experienced little trouble in gaining a five goal advantage over the Campbellford Norwood-Havelock-Maroon amalgamates last evening when they won by the score of 7 to 2. At the end of the second period, of a rather listless game, the locals were out in front by the tune of 5 to 1 and it almost looked as though they coasted during that last period, although the Trenton squad did manage to peek into the Campbellford goal-tender's calendar. A scattered lingering crowd has been noted of late in the playing of Jimmie McGuire, who has quit playing the man and is playing head-up hockey and Eagle is on his job every night. He's on the ice Last night he netted two goals on solo efforts, both counters being worthy of note. The "Redmen" have been over a much better advantage previously this winter, but perhaps the latter half of the game can be purposely attributed to the poor display of hockey contributed by the Maroons. As a whole the Maroons were no match for the locals, but one exception prevails, that being the work of Buster Whitton, who starred.

Tonight's opening Senior Interscholastic game between Albert College and St. Michael's means much to both teams as a matter of fact it means eliminations for the loser, as naturally both teams will be at full strength and ready for the fray. The "Irish" teams were speed and display a better stick-handling squad, but the Albert boys have the pack and never quit trying. They check-back well and the Collegians have to watch out for the penalty box and tend to check lightly if they expect to earn the coveted play-off position versus the B.C.I.V.S. The winner of this game meets the winner of the play-offs. Incidentally the Collegians play the C.D.S.S. Ibs. in the second game of tonight's double-header in the school gym. The standing of the Senior Interscholastic group as they take to the ice tonight reads:

"SPOT BOWLER" HAS EDGE

How to Bowl—No. 7

By MRS. FLORETTA D. McCUTCHEON

WORLD CHAMPION WOMAN BOWLER

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the seventh in a series of articles on bowling written especially for General Features Corp. by Mrs. Floretta D. McCutcheon, woman champion bowler and nationally-known bowling authority.

All your bowling is done back of the foul line. You can't do a thing to your left, right or center. No moment is leave your hand, except to talk to it, and it seems to pay very little attention to the few words I've been giving it.

But here let me talk about one of the major differences in the manner in which people bowl. Some bowlers approach the foul line, others saunter up to it, and still others walk with a definite percentage to watch the start of the line they will be all to take. This is known as "spot bowling" and is easier, by far, and more accurate.

Golf Gives Example

The bowler who watches the pins is of course, trying to send the ball down the 1-3 pocket, and feels that in order to get co-ordination between hand and eye he should look where he is trying to place the ball.

Well, he should look where he is trying to put the ball, but the mistake is trying to put the ball into the 1-3 pocket, when in reality he puts it down on a spot beyond the foul line, from which he wants it to roll into the 1-3 pocket.

Suppose the golfer so exactly like looking at the cup in trying to sink a long putt to pull. No golfer does that. The bowling ball is a rolling ball and the ball takes that line of travel which the ball takes that gives it the correct finish, 60 feet away.

Your Type of Delivery

After you have bowled for a time, if you have reviewed your delivery, you find you begin to roll a certain type of ball. It either tends to hook, which is a ball that left, with a hook, or it backs a bit to the right, which people roll a straight ball.

But no matter what kind of a ball you roll, there is a certain spot on the alley from which your ball is going to roll best to that 1-3 pocket. It won't be the same place for every one because different people roll different balls.

Your aim should be to find this "best" place on the alley for your ball and when you do lay your ball down on it with as nearly the same speed and delivery as possible. When you begin to do this you are bound to roll some very nice scores.

Draw Imaginary Lines

Few people are able, however, to approach the foul line and do this with their eyes fixed on the pins, 60 feet away. They are apt to vary from one to twelve inches in the spot where they put the ball down, in pin bowling.

But if instead of fixing your eyes on the pins you begin to draw imaginary lines from the place at which you are aiming down to a spot on the foul line, and then start your delivery with your eyes on the start of that line, on the foul line, you will find you can place your ball with great accuracy on a spot an inch wide.

Mrs. McCutcheon, LEFT, Pupil Jane Davis and Mrs. McCutcheon's daughter Barbara, RIGHT, watch the ball hit the 1-3 pocket.

HOCKEY'S BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

Bobby Schriner and Hooley Smith emerging from the season's greatest scoring splurge in which Maroons and Americans indulged in an 8-8 tie, landed in the big seven today. Schriner, Boston Bruins' high scorers, Charlie Conacher and Bill Thoms of Toronto, idle while fire-works flared at New York, were dropped.

Northcott collected three points and Smith five, bringing their season totals to 28, one more than Conacher, Toronto Maple Leafs' big gun part in the same affair, came within two points of the leading Boston's league lead. He has 27 points.

The standings:

	G.	A.	P.
Schriner, Americans	16	21	37
Conacher, Americans	9	22	31
Dilkes, Rangers	17	11	28
Thompson, Maroons	16	11	27
Thompson, Chicago	13	15	28
Romnes, Chicago	11	17	28
Northcott, Maroons	11	17	28

Tonight in the Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto all of the young Canadian heavyweight hopefuls will get their chance in the Jack Dempsey New York window. Conditions. The idea of these "white hope" tournaments is to try and unearth a champion who will eventually be good enough to meet Joe Louis, Detroit Bronz, if he gets that far. Into camp. These tournaments are being held at strategic points all over the continent and are doing the trick. Stimulate the interest in heavyweight boxing, so as to primarily find a suitable opponent for Louis to defend his title against.

As though the promoters will have to look for a climber to unearth a boy, who can take Louis' measure and then go on and take care of the hopefuls to enter the ring in Toronto tonight is George Richards, the Toronto wrestling-fighting Jewish lad, who displayed his grappling prowess in a local ring not several occasions last year and who always a favorite. Richard is entered under the Apex A.C. colors of Toronto Boxers from many parts of Ontario and also from Quebec are entered into the Toronto competition which ranges from 170 to over 240 pounds. They will fight in classes until the final champions are determined. Back in Ile tomorrow morning, we'd imagine.

The school relay races to be conducted during the charity V.O.N. carnival at the Arena on Wednesday night are creating considerable stir among the students of the various schools entered in the competition. Seven schools are entered in the event which will be run off, with the winners of each group meeting in the final race. Although it would not find one conducted in a way back of it all, we are of the opinion, that a few more novelty acts will be included in the carnival programme and may be termed as a surprise to all, even the committees in charge. The prize list will run at least $30.00 for the three carnival, which should attract a large number of visitors in fancy and original dress. Judges from outside of the organization have been procured and a fair deal is assured all contestants in the costume parade. Miss separate events will be presented prior to the dress carnival parade, including the big hockey game between the policemen and the firemen, which promises a fine sale of tickets at least 2,000 will witness the spectacle.

To be distributed among the teenaged teams throughout the city, a shipment of hockey sticks was received by Jr. "Sheik" Burrows, O.H.A. executive member, recently. The sticks are to be given away and will be passed out to teen aged players of the local Jr. C league. This practice of supplying hockey sticks gratis to juvenile puckster is considered a good one by the boys of the O.H.A., but this is the first time Belleville Scholastic has ever received any recognition, due, doubtlessly, to the fact, that but few teams are present on the executive board of the O.H.A. Some 40 sticks in all have received and will be given the Ki-Y League players within the week.

The local Deseron A.C. juvenile basketball team is practising religiously for their coming C.A.B.A. play-downs. The Deseron league were returned winners of their group by defeating Napanee twice, while the Kingston Collegiate dropped out of competition after watching the Deseron's in action down in Napanee last week. Apparently [illegible] Deseron squad have been tough for the Limestoners. In the "A" group Napanee and Deseron however, Reigopolis College, Kingston and Napanee "A" are tied for the leadership.

Dale Plays The Game

—BY—

Ann Forester

The effect was female and lovely and a flash of jealousy lit Mimi's eyes as Dale entered the drawing room. Mimi, herself, was fit bate green tonight. Her hair, closely cut, was so sleekly plastered to her small shapely head that it appeared to be lacquered. A single emerald large and oval glistened from her small hand like a baleful green eye. With her long eyes and small white face Mimi seemed some beautiful malicious water sprite of Oriental mythology. And yet, amid—she had the effect of shaking Dale feel that she herself looked slimer and dirtier.

While Mrs. Kendall and Mimi were busy receiving their guests Nance dragged Dale about making pert introductions punctuated with sudden shrill laughter.

Brant had come down. Dale noticed how the corpUs set her eyes. In spite of her anger a little pride had been born in her heart—how tall and good-looking he was as he stood talking to an elderly army colonel. His tanned face—so copiously dark by contrast with the white shirt front, and his strikingly grey eyes set him apart from the other men. Dale saw how utterly eyes had flown to him as soon as he appeared. In spite of Brant's poise, in spite of her own assumed composure, Dale felt that Mimi knew they had quarrelled. She was certain of it in a few minutes later when Mimi came up to her and spoke in such a tone that, to Dale, standing nearby with his back turned, could not fall to hear.

"How charming you look tonight, Dale!" said Mimi. "So sweet and pure. Are you impressionist, Mabra, the Old Maid, my dear? All you need is a wreath of flowers in your hair....."

Dale felt herself flushing to her forehead. How damably Mimi possessed the subtle faculty of belittling by praise! The white gloire, chosen with such care, had suddenly become ridiculous. It had become a costume—unforgivably dramatic.

"You stage people are so clever," purred Mimi in her sweet husky voice. "You make all the rest of us seem simple—almost rude dressed. What a daring thought, to wear evening dress to this sort of affair! You quite shame our poor little dinner frocks, dear."

Mimi and her bright, insincere smile passed on leaving devastation in her wake. In panic, Dale's eyes passed hastily over the other women. Her heart sank. It was true. Every other dress in the room had an assumption of sleeves, were it only a ruffle or a drape. Only her own was boldly, uncompromisingly evening. A little thing, but a tragedy to a woman. Dale, with her shoulders revealed by the severe lines of her dress, felt crude—naked. In an agony of super-sensitiveness she read criticism in the faces about her. Head it in barely raised eyebrows—in small suppressed smiles.

Brant—was he ashamed of her? Dale stole a glance at him as he sat across the table from her, talking interestedly to a woman with a plain, patrician face. Brant—as he had sat across from her in the little desert shack, khaki shirt open at at his firm brown throat.....how Brant, lean and brown, holding her fast in his arms while the storm lashed about the cabin.....

"You give me no chance to forget it, my dear!" Brant had said, speaking but now—oh, how bitter his voice had been. Dale bit her tip to keep from crying.

Mimi leaned across the table, gaily chiding.

"Dale, darling, what is that naughty thing I heard you saying to make you sit fussed! Truly, my dear, your face is turkey red! Shame on you, indeed!....."

Yellow haired and red faced..... Honey in an absurd evening dress!..... If only Gerda could bring her a scarf.....something to cover her bare shoulders. The cancellier—oh, they had been a mistake. In the heat of the room they were beginning—they were turning brown.....A vulgarism among the patricians. Dale Evans—no should have stuck to her grease paint.....How she hated Mimi! She could leap across the table, fall on that sweet treacherous face, spread it purple with her fists.....Dale's heart was pounding, her whole body flaming with murderous rage as she smiled brightly back at Mimi across the table.

CHAPTER 41

WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN

Reconciliation followed, of course. Dale's nature was too frank, too ardent, to live in an atmosphere of frigid politeness. How could she pretend a surface serenity while her heart was aching and her body ached for the warm clasp of Brant's arms? How utterly she belonged to him now! Dale thought with a flash of mingled joy and fear. A flash that went from bliss—a smile—she would follow to the ends of the earth; and his coldness could dry her very springs of living within her. Better to sue for peace—even to assume love than her share of the blame, than to live under this strain. Mrs. Kendall—Mimi—they didn't really count, if when the door swung shut behind Brant and her self at night the old joyous comraderie were resumed. If Brant would reach out and draw her to him with a: "Hey woman, come here and get slapped for being impudent to your lord and master," Brant's ardent, dark face close to hers and the sudden flash of his white smile. The times his eyes grew dark with feeling and the rough tenderness of his kiss—

Brant, too, felt the strain of a few days' stilted courtesy, though his more controlled nature had not found the interval so insupportable as had the girl. He had successes in his work. He had a change of scene each day. Yet the quarrel had cast a shadow over him as well and he was glad to strike a truce.

So, as had happened so often before, they were reconciled, via this time there was a difference. After every other quarrel they had gone back to the old condition of things. The making up has erased the memory of the bitter words. But this time it wasn't the same. In some way the glory had been dimmed. The rook of bitterness had not all been pulled up. Dale told herself sadly; they were still there—living unending out sooner.

Dale's love made her severe on herself. She should have been more moderate. After all, life was not so idealistic as all that. Perhaps she must learn not to be so intense, so headstrong. She should curb somewhat her feelings for Brant. Men didn't want such lavish affection. It embarrassed them. It put them under a debt and no one likes to feel under a debt.....Brant felt under obligations to her now and Dale could see that the knowledge grated upon him. It made him humble in his own mind and no man worth anything wanted to be humble. Brant was proud—it was the first thing Dale had felt about him. When he stood in the door at Sandy's she had noticed the high carriage of his head, the proud, almost insolent poise of his grey eyes. Oh, he was inherently proud and she had hurt that pride.....

She was proud too, Dale thought, but her love made her humble. Women were like that. A little bit of the dog-that in every woman who truly loved her man.....Women's love weakened them; took something away from their fine independence. One doesn't sling boldly along dangerous streets when one carries a pearl of price. One goes softly, in well traveled ways.....

But when one feels the ground is being cut out from beneath one's feet, what then? And Mimi was cutting the ground away beneath Dale.....

By now, Dale was not deceiving herself. Silent war had been declared between herself and Mimi; secret, deadly woman war. War, waged with bright smiles for lances and watchful indifference for shields. Dale were her love, her position of Brant's wife as armor against the poison darts of Mimi's tongue.

Even Nance was aware of the tension. Coming into Dale's room one morning to smoke a cigarette, she spoke out of her crude young wisdom. "Maggie's getting positively pathetic! Catch me ever making such a fool of myself over a man." She blew the smoke down her straight, childish nose. "Don't worry Dale, Maggie's demoded if she only knew it!"

But Dale, with her deeper experience shook her head at such uncompromising dealing with love and life. She knew the game was not played according to the sporting rules which Nance favored. Mimi—beautiful Mimi—with the subtle attraction of sex enveloping her like an intoxicating perfume—Mimi who could make a man believe her sex gentle, so helpless and fill another with silent fury because each attempt to enlighten the victim would only drive him deeper in her toils.....No, said Dale with a sort of bitter exasperation. "I doubt if a woman like Mimi is ever defeated!"

"Somebody ought to put Brant wise, the poor boob—" Nance ventured, then blinked as Dale darted at her.

"Nance, don't you dare! If you say anything to him—even hint anything, I'll never speak to you again!" That would be fatal, Dale knew. Her greatest weapon was indifference. Her pride would not permit her to acknowledge Mimi as a rival for her husband; and she knew, once she admitted the menace, that it would give Mimi fresh strength.

Under her icy serenity, Mrs. Kendall was well aware of the situation, Dale knew. She knew too, where the older woman's sympathies lay. Brant alone was blissfully ignorant of the silent fend he was causing. Brant was too masculine to get the fine points of feminine fencing. He ignored the undercurrents, content to believe the unruffled surface a plumage of what lay underneath. Part of Dale's attitude was indifference, part a deep lying modesty. What was there about himself to set two women at swords points? Brant can coasting banks along Hea arm in the world old manner women.

TARZAN THE INVINCIBLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Behind him, Tarzan had left a handful of terrified blacks in the camp of the conspirators; but a week after the killing of Dorsky and Tarzan's escape they had happily forgotten their terror. They were lolling in the shade one day when a sight burst suddenly upon them.

In the clearing at the edge of the camp appeared a great elephant; and upon his head sat Tarzan of the Apes, nd upon the man's arm perched a little monkey. With exclamations of terror the blacks leaped to their feet and dashed into the jungle.

Tarzan leaped lightly to the ground and entered Dorsky's tent. He had returned for a definite purpose; and his efforts was crowned with success for in the tent of the Russian he found his rope and his knife which had been taken away from him at the time of his capture.

Having found a bow, arrows, and a spear in the shelter of the blacks, he departed as silently as he had come. The time had arrived when Tarzan must set out rapidly upon the trail of his enemies, leaving Tantor to the peaceful paths that he loved best.

HOCKEY SIDELIGHTS

By SAY COLLETT

They used to think around Montreal, that Sylvio Mantha, the returning Montreal Canadien veteran, was going to burst out crying as he skated around the Forum before a game. But that fear has passed, and in its place has come a deep respect for the sad-faced rear guard who has been with the Flying Frenchmen since 1924 and has proved himself their most reliable defenceman.

This year Sylvio has taken up the managerial duties and perhaps he will find more real cause for tears than ever his gloomy appearance presaged. Sylvio has been with the Canucks through some of their palmiest days, and to him has fallen the job of rebuilding with young and unbried players, the great club that boasted Morenz, Joliat and a host of other greats at their best.

He is a Montreader, born and bred, and his personal popularity is unquestioned. He also served notice that he will be an astute executive, when he beat Lester Patrick to the draw for Buddy O'Connor's services. O'Connor is a promising amateur but when Patrick arrived to place him on Rangers' list he found Sylvio had been to league headquarters 30 minutes earlier.

Manitba is a playing manager and despite his years of service as dump attackers with great facility. Likewise he can stiff 'em on the odd rush and anyone who has seen his corkscrew dashes up the ice, will know he is no setup to stop.

LOWER TARIFF 60 P.C. IN 10 YEARS IS ADVOCATED

Prof. McDougall of Queen's University Says Exports Mean Big Trade

COMPETITION IS NEED

We've been fighting on the tariff for sixty or seventy years and I cannot say we are any nearer agreement than we were before," said Prof. McDougall of Queen's University before the Chamber of Commerce greater citizenship course members at the Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday evening. He offered suggestions for a tariff change in Canada and closed with the view that the goal of lowered tariffs could be approached step by step, not all at once by a sudden change, but say 25 per cent reduction over five years and a further 25 per cent over a period of five more years, making 50 per cent reduction in tariffs in ten years.

"I am giving you the kind of thing," he explained "that is common in the United States business circles in the country today." He pointed out that bank statements emphasized that the greater the foreign trade the better a nation is and said, added "One hundred dollars of exports means two hundred or five hundred dollars of additional business."

The Long View

Prof. McDougall said in support of this view that he was not going to mention specific rates, "I am not going to suggest that if we do this and that such a thing will take place in two or three months. I am going to speak on the long view."

As to tariff he said "What I am going to suggest is only because it is less bad than the alternative."

The professor pointed out that even in the days of discussion of the war, when food was restricted, they carried on. "It is not a surprise that things today are no worse than they are when we think of the war. They could be much worse" he commented.

Prof. McDougall launching into his subject said "If we are to apply to the tariff question the same certain industries which are not as desirable as they ought to be and labor in them cannot be as effectively applied as in some other trades."

Subsidizing as Commerce

Another point he made was that "If we think of ourselves as producers we are thinking in terms of subsidizing industry. The only way is by thinking of ourselves as consumers that we shall get our natural interest is to get as much as we can, but our consumer interest is to have an increase total wealth put so as to have more to divide among them."

"If given our heads we develop our selfishness, our competitive spirit and our competitive system we can keep this selfishness down and avoid particular monopolies."

There is only one logical alternative to the selfish and cold competitive system, said the professor, and that was communism. But communism presents the problem of exchanging a worker from an executive job to that of hand labor, or by using the firing squad. So there is pressure not only in the competitive system but also in the communist system.

Value of Competition

Prof. McDougall smilingly assured the audience that he didn't personally believe in less severe methods, I say there are good things in the old-fashioned system of competition. You do improve conditions by forcing people to work and those who are forced to work under competition gain in efficiency. They pay for what they buy for the extra they give out themselves in effort under the competitive system."

He suggested that the only result that can be expected from a tariff is less efficiency in business. He suggested that wherever the tariff is applied it is on the decline.

This leads to the acceptance of the view that freedom of trade is the desirable thing. "You cannot give full tariff protection to two industries" he said. In Canada where there are 1000 or more, this fact is easily proved.

The case of the magazine industry today was cited. Without duly on imported magazines, Canadian magazines find it difficult to compete, because the things they buy to enter into the manufacture are so much cheaper because of the tariff on these things, so that the net result is that it would be best to have the editorial office in Canada and the magazine printed in the United States. Then the professor showed how if the tariff on motor cars is to be changed, what is to be done on the tariff on the machinery. The furniture industry was also cited as suffering under the tariff, because screw-nails, the case, the whole history and move, because long runs of suites of 150 to 200 suites do not exist, or the run is limited to 25 or 50 suites. The result is the furniture men are caught.

"This is where the effect of the application of the tariff hits the manufacturers. So the net result is more profit to manufacturers," the professor commented.

Hit Both Ways

Prof. McDougall showed that increasing the tariffs in the United States a few years ago on farm products reduced the amount which the Canadian farmer received for his goods and the retaliatory tariff of Canada made things easy for farmers pay more than they would have paid for the goods they needed. The result was that the purchasing power of the Canadian agricultural classes fell to 35 per cent of what it was. Everything in the extractive trades had to take its beating in the world market but when they bought did not go down in the same ratio. "I am not arguing that the protective interests are a villainous organization—they are human just as we are, but it is natural that they should want more." The professor said that when one chemical plant in Canada, two railway manufacturers and five cotton mills, "there is not the internal competition which is well for

I felt tired all the time and to those considerate enough to ask me how I felt, I always answered 'Miserable.' I thought I would never be well again. Now I am in good health." Write to Dr. Pierce's Clinic, Buffalo, N. Y., for free medical advice.

Inflexible Prices Menace

"I wonder," remarked the professor, whether part of our relief difficulties may not been due to the inflexibility of prices. Inflexibility of prices meant reduction of output and reduction of labor.

"And I think we chose a method that gave us a less equitable adjustment of prices.

"Why are we to have a tariff if the results are so bad?" he asked. He suggested that it was mistaken thinking that was to blame. Prejudice controls their thinking. The present situation has changed. The United States manufacturer saw the value of foreign markets and the farmers of the United States are now in the position of the protected market as they are not producing enough, said so many import.

Ontario and Quebec have stood to gain at the expense of the Maritimes and the West by the extreme weight of the tariffs upon these latter. So in this central area the people feel that it is all right though perhaps it is not quite fair to the other parts of the Dominion.

It was said that national prestige required a tariff and that balanced interests were a preventive of war. "That is incredible" exclaimed the professor. "That you have to figure on war." Canada is so situated she does not need to look for war if the country were attacked by any foreign foe, the United States would have to protect Canada for its own sake. So Canada need not consider the idea of tariff as preventive of war.

Mr. Jack McIntosh presided. A vote of thanks was tendered by the Rev Mr. Harrison.

REDFERN, LOST 8 YEARS, FOUND IN JUNGLE

Long-Lost Flyer, Tattered Cripple, Is Discovered in Trackless Jungle; Search Party Talks With Redfern

Secret British Document Leaks Out to Italy

Discovered Flyer Expected to be Found, Says Alfred Harrod

LEARNED LANGUAGE

Paul Married Indian Woman In Wilds Near Amazon

Georgetown, British Guiana, Feb. 20 (CP)—Three of a search by six native Indians, who left Georgetown on a trackless jungle trip with a tribe of wild Indians known to the Tumac Humac Mountains in Brazil, found Captain Harrod, Jr., of Bermuda, missing flyer, in safety, it was announced here today.

The story of finding the long-sought Redfern who vanished on a flight to Rio de Janeiro in 1927, was told in the Paramaribo newspaper Surinier and relayed by tribune to the Daily Chronicle in the paper. Harrod, Dutch member of a British-Dutch-American boundary commission, was quoted as saying:

Somewhat Injury.

"Art Williams (United States pilot), has Indian wife and child in a plane Feb. 6. After a couple of days we located a tributary southwest of the main Amazon stream and started to ascend it. Some Indian Mountains in a southerly direction, fully supplied with provisions for the journey.

Airplane Seen At Tree.

"After several days we came to a village where we were received completely mad. We saw an aeroplane caught in the branches of a high tree and knew it must be Redfern. He was dressed in a ragged singlet and trousers.

"By his habit and beard on his shoulders and chest, he looked like a man over 40, babbling on rude wooden seats of tree branches and bone."

He found differently than he had expected, he said, for he had been expecting to be found. Williams gave him a blanket and some Indian beads.

"After Redfern the had learned the language of the Indians told them not to harm us, he told us he had been forced down by a leak in the gas tank and had been forced to land on the river. He managed to reach the river. His legs and arms were broken in the crash but his memory seemed to be gone. They treated him well, refusing to touch the plane, believing it was a great spirit."

Married Indian Woman.

"Paul said he was in as good health as ever he could be. He had married an Indian woman and has a son who looks very much like him."

"When the Indians suspected we intended to take Redfern away they threatened us with poisoned spears and arrows and on Paul's witness-ing leaving him with provisions and clothes.

"We hung about the district four days but the Indians seemed to become more hostile and we left with the intention of returning.

Rescue Means Force.

It must be obvious that any rescue must mean the use of force with possible death of Redfern since the Indians will kill him before we could get to him or if successful in getting away safely, it would mean the sacrificing of his native wife and child. Redfern refused to care a lot for the boy.

"The chief immediate difficulty is Paul's crippled condition."

Lindbergh Visits House of Commons

London, Feb. 20 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh visited the British House of Commons today to listen to the debate. He occupied a seat in the galleries during the afternoon and followed closely the question and answer period.

One of the first questions, put to Sir John Simon, Home Secretary by Harry Day, Labor, was whether Sir John thought British court procedure should be amended "to provide that all evidence of shocking and offensive character in cases of alleged murder and other serious felonies be taken in private.

The Home Secretary replied he did not think such procedure would be in the public interest.

The Brazilian jungle native, above, is shown illustrating to a fellow native how he saw a "giant bird" fall from the sky. Dr. Morton Rahn (inset), of the Harvard Medical College expedition, to whom the story was told, believes the native saw Paul Redfern crash somewhere in the jungle and that the natives, searching for the white man, may find the missing aviator alive. He has been missing seven years.

(Int. note: A report received today says Redfern has been found by another party headed by Williams and Harred.)

Week's Beard and Sloppy Clothes Keep Some Men Idle—Says Mayor

Men Seeking Jobs Are Urged to "Spruce up" And Those Idling on Relief Jobs Are Given Warning

"Clean up and tidy up."

That is the latest edict to unemployed of the city issued today by Mayor Harry Hill from the executive office at the city hall today.

"There is no excuse for slop-piness or a tramp-like appearance these days," he said when he noticed marking the rounds of the residential streets for work present, men as "general labor" and "skilled" householders are actually afraid to hire them. A week's beard and torn and ragged clothing is no inducement for the employer to engage men, he said, for they might have," amplified the Mayor. "Clothing can still be made presentable even if it isn't new or badly worn."

Another thing we have had some complaints about from the taxpayers is the manner in which some of the men work when given jobs by the city. Actually some of them seem afraid for the cemetery. Tax payers who are paying the relief bill have a right to kick over the slowness of some of them. And this office is the one that receives the brunt of these complaints."

I have watched some of the men myself on snow shovelling. It reminds me more of a slow motion picture than anything else observed. Just because they are doing it as their relief labor they seem to thing that the slower they work the better it is for them. From now on we expect a full day's work from these men, and orders are being issued to this effect.

The difficulty, pointed out Mayor Hill is that fewer formmen are being hired over the individual work gangs in order to keep down expenses. Thus, many of the men are liable to take advantage of this. "From now on there is going to be a check up of lazy workmen," it was added.

"Half a dozen of these men are spoiling it for all the rest. They are the ones we are going to watch," declared Mayor Hill.

V.C. on Charring Staff Promoted In Recognition of Valiant Deed

Ottawa, Feb. 20—(CP)— An old soldier is wearing his medals, or his ribbons, with greater pride in the parliament buildings these days, for Corporal Filip Konoval, V.C., has been promoted from his position on the cleaning staff to that of uniformed attendant in charge of room 6, the common room of the House of Commons.

Konoval had a varied career. Born in Russia, he went overseas with the 7th Canadian battalion from Ottawa. He won his V. C. at Hill 70 and Lens when he bayoneted 12 Germans and three machine guns and a machine gun and destroyed two other machine guns.

King George told him when he presented him with his medal he had one of the outstanding records in the army. Then Konoval spent nine years in a hospital. After that he did not seem able to find anyone to consider a V. C. in terms of them, and eventually he was hired on the charring staff at parliament buildings.

One of his duties was to mop up the floor of the Hall of Fame where it had been suggested by patriotic citizens bronze busts of Canadians who are of the Victoria Cross should be placed. He found himself referred to as "mopping up parties" he had attended in France but when it came to day to day, cleaning stone floors in a drab grey uniform, a little nervous and bent.

Four days ago he was promoted, now resplendant in a brand new green outfit with gilt buttons, he returned to members in their common room. On his left chest three bright ribbons stand out against the dull cloth; The general service ribbon, the Victory ribbon and the crimson ribbon with a little bronze cross in its centre, the most coveted badge of courage the empire has to give brave men, the ribbon of the Victoria Cross—which a king told him he well deserved.

BLOCKED ROADS FOOD SHORTAGE STILL PREVALENT

Traffic Over Main Highways Still at Standstill

CAN'T MOVE YOUTH

Breaks Leg But Can't Get to Hospital For Heavy Roads

(By-The Canadian Press)

The weathermen predicted own snow-covered Ontario today and immediately went back to the warmth of their lathing assistants. Citizens there would be no let-up in the snow failure, for going will stay cold a little while longer.

Amid fresh blasts of icy winds today some continued clearing of stalled railway trains, buses, automobiles, trucks and other traffic. Otherwise, even over the province's main highways, was at a standstill.

In widely-separated parts of Ontario, doctors were prevented from reaching patients. In Underwood, tiny Bruce County village, young Donald McKay suffered a broken leg waiting for transportation to remove him to hospital. Donald's leg is broken leg but his parents have been unable to move him because of the village's isolation.

It was bitterly cold everywhere. Temperatures ranged from zero in Western Ontario to 32 below at Hawk Junction, near Sault Ste. Marie. Heart, in Northern Ontario, was 32 below, while Kingston shivered at 16 this below.

A threatened shortage of provisions was likewise reported today. Mayor William Smith, 30-year-old deliveryman of Port Elgin, battled through mountainous drifts with his bread, milk and cream and gasoline. It took him ten hours to make the 15-mile journey.

Stranded Roads Blocked

Roads stranded motorists were blocked thoroughly. Highways were partly open. Trains were held up from the city hours late. Some were stuck in the heavy drifts. The biting cold brought relief from the Canadian National Railways train from Owen Sound and stranded it in time at Gedshill.

Two Indians from the Moravian Reserve attempting to walk to Bothwell with provisions, suffered severe frostbite from the cold. The cold was so intense it drove road crews from their work.

At Sarnia, Lake Huron temperatures prevented moving the freighter Saskatchewan from dock for unloading of its supply of wheat, badly needed for export. The ship is frozen in several inches of ice.

A raging blizzard over Lake Erie left the tug Peter Reid and barge Bothham, started from Point Peise on the mainland to walk to Pelee Island because of heavy ice. Yesterday afternoon, a mystery. It was feared the brothers had lost their lives.

Passenger on buses leaving Port Erie for Hamilton and other points were forced to the city by taxicab, when the buses piled into drifts of snow a few miles out of the city.

POLICE INQUIRY NOT CALLED OFF

Commission Counsel Probing Toronto Police Issues Denial

Toronto, Feb. 20 (CP)—Toronto City Council members, some of them dumbfoiled with last week's abrupt ending of public sittings of the Royal Commission police probe, had assurance today further information would be accepted by the Commission up until their report was made.

In giving Controllers Day and Wadsworth the guarantee, Commission counsel Norman F. Newton, K.C., denied he had been "called off" the inquiry. He spoke to the Controllers from a sick bed in his hotel room.

Requests for further public investigation was made by the Controllers after the meeting. Among matters subject to inquiry, they claimed, was the charge made by Mrs. Evelyn Dickinson, wife of Chief of Police D. C. HITLER LEADS IN NEGOTIATIONS IN CENTRE EUROPE

Mussolini is Not Taking Initiative Towards New Pact

REICH ISOLATED

(By Charles H. Guptill)

Rome, Feb. 20 (AP)—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, rather than Premier Mussolini, is taking the initiative in Interna- Tho-German diplomatic exchanges, authoritative German circles said today, in an effort to bring about a complete rapprochement.

Ulrich Von Hassell, German ambassador to Italy, went to Munich last week, had a long conversation with Hitler and then returned to Rome and reported. He conferred with Fulvio Suvich, Italian undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, these circles disclosed.

Von Hassell Returns.

After his conference with Suvich, the German Ambassador flew back to Berlin, yesterday, at the same time the Italian Undersecretary was talking with Von Bergen-Waldenegg, Austrian Foreign Minister at Florence.

Suvich returned to Rome today to report to Premier Mussolini personally on the progress of the negotiations.

A spokesman for German quarters said Hitler had realized the Third Reich was isolated in Europe and was anxious to "normalize" relations with Von Bergen-Waldenegg, Austrian Foreign Minister at Florence.

Italy Is Isolated

He realized Italy also was isolated by the operation of sanctions, being applied by the League of Nations as punishment for the Fascist warfare in Ethiopia, this source said.

He wanted to establish a common viewpoint between them. Consequently, it was understood, The two dictators are now exchanging views on the question of sanctions and the League of Nations, the Franco-Boer Council Assembly.

The Hitler initiative in resuming the pourparlers with Italy following similar initiative in June. It does several weeks ago in attempting to bring about a rapprochement between the two countries.

Authoritative sources attached significance to the fact the Polish Ambassador, Alfredo Wysocky, left Rome for his native land yesterday on the Warsaw Foreign Minister his latest conversations with Premier Mussolini and the Polish Ambassador, it was learned, discussed the whole European situation, and the Franco-Soviet pact in particular.

British Commons Roused By Document Published In Newspaper at Rome

Premier Baldwin Quizzed as to Plans For White Paper

PAPER ON ETHIOPIA

"I Cannot Answer Now", Says Prime Minister in Answer

London, Feb. 20 (CP)—Whitehall is plainly and obviously worried. A secret foreign office document on British has leaked out and appeared yesterday in the Rome paper Giornale d'Italia in full. And authorities admit they have not found out how it all happened.

Enquiries around the Foreign Office today met blank responses. There was no official inquiry. Authorities declared, but there was no denial anyone was being taken to see to the bottom of the mystery—although what steps and in what places remained unrevealed.

Dated Early 1935.

It is a secret report of an interdepartmental committee appointed January, 1935, to inquire into British interests in Ethiopia, Sir John Maffey, permanent Under Secretary of State for the Colonies, was chairman and the committee was composed of representatives of the Foreign Office, the War Office, the Admiralty, the Air Ministry and the Dominions Office.

The general effect of the report was to emphasize that British interests in Ethiopia were limited. Its recommendations were briefly:

1. Interest in Lake Tana as being the source of the Blue Nile which is vital to Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

2. Assurance that tribes along the British Somaliland frontier shall have grazing rights.

3. Railway facilities.

The report holds Britain should safeguard Lake Tana but expressed the general view that the threat to British interests in Ethiopia and there no relation to the question of whether there should be acquiescence in what might involve a breach of the League Covenant and the Kellogg Pact.

Italian Ambition In Details.

Meanwhile there is keen anticipation in Rome that the debate on sanctions scheduled for the House of Commons on Monday, The question of oil sanctions is expected to be discussed with greater frankness than previously. The government will be able to sound out the Commons' attitude on sanctions prior to the departure for Geneva of Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, League of Nations Council meeting on March 2 when the term the government's attitude on sanctions and general policy regarding the Italo-Ethiopian war.

The 38 calibre weapon, the expert said, was the one which fired the fatal bullet through the head of young Nadeau when he was held up and killed in a sealed containing $18,510 of the bank money, which he was taking to the Ottawa clearing house. At the time of the slaying the revolver was removed from the bank car which Nadeau, and Paul LaPeur, one of those charged with murder, were driving.

OWNER OF GOLD HOARD SEEKS TO RECOVER MONEY

Contends That Roosevelt's Order Calling in Gold Was Illegal

COURT ACTION

Will Take Case to Supreme Court if Show Cause Order Goes Against Him

New York, Feb. 20 (AP)—A mysterious European master of international finance, operating by transoceanic telephone, waged a court day on President Roosevelt's gold seizure order.

Seeking to regain his secret hoard of 10,000 $20 gold pieces, Zelik Josephy quits, variously described as head of a family of wealthy Lithuanian, German or Russian financiers, and today was given an order requiring United States officials to show cause why the gold, now worth $238,000, should not be returned to him.

The bullion case was also asked by Secret Service agents who swooped down on a bank deposit vault in a dramatic raid Tuesday.

Judge Bondy for Josephy, after conferring with him throughout proceedings by telephone from Geneva, Switzerland, said if the hearing on the show cause order, returnable tomorrow, went against him, the case would be carried to the Supreme Court.

Josefowitz contends that seizure of the gold and President Roosevelt's order of Aug. 28, 1933, calling in all gold, was illegal when applied to an alien.

STIMULATION OF ART

Canada Government is doing much to stimulate inspiration to Canadian literary art. Art effort in other fields. His interest as an artist is primarily in literature but sympathy extends to those other forms which are the means of thinking, acting in A few days ago before the Montreal Branch of the Canadian Authors' Association he praised the Canadian background, two languages and two literatures, back which were the glories of Greece and Rome. He spoke of the natural resources of Canada. Steadily he is linking himself with every form of expression of the Canadian national life and the result cannot be anything but for the welfare of the art stock of Canada.

His is mirrored in this work by the Lady Tweedsmuir who is herself a writer of note in the field of the story and drama. She is doing her influence and encouragement to the art associations of Canada, which is to play no small part in the making of national character.

Canada is indeed fortunate in the choice of the Governor John Buchan and his wife as representatives of St. James's.

FORTUNETELLING

They may tax fortune tellers in Calgary. The bylaw at present covers phrenologists, hypnotists and mind-readers, and probably be extended to include palmists, tea-cup readers and others who gaze to the future. A cat tax proposal for revenue purposes still waits consideration.

This may mean that there are a good number of fortune tellers, teacup readers and palmists indeed there are. Undoubtedly perhaps many more than the publicizes.

The hold which this occupation has on minds of the people has not been shaken as science progresses. How long man has submit himself to the meditations, ing, or guesses of the fortune-teller, no knows? But there is not a community here there is not a fortune-teller, some who gains a reputation for reading future.

And these persons would not be so merous were there not many who have sneaking regard for looking into the ture. Hundreds do consult these "conjurs" or palmists or readers of tea dregs, nkerchiefs or cards. Many call it a of joke, an entertainment, but there e of these probably like to have the asant thing said, and dislike an evil gnostication. Then there are those who believe.

Does the fortune teller really reveal t he himself or she herself thinks of tune telling?

Those who do not regard the fortune ler craft, would have no hesitation in ling the Calgary Council to put a tag on m.

SPIRITUALISM OR SPIRITISM

The spirit of the late Sir Arthur Conan yle appeared at the bedside of his wife dy Doyle as she is slowly sinking, according to their son, Denis, 27 years old. e claims that his father just as much in his new life as he was in life. he son claims that messages are received ough a human instrument, a lady who he has not a personal or even an acquaintance. He says she is attuned spiritual telepathy and radio telepathy ombined and takes down messages from father yesterday, sometimes four or five ssages on a sheet of paper. Never in s and a half years have the messages er wrong in family or business matters and even Denis' racing activities. He claims at once he was informed by a message to a mechanical defect in his car which ould have led to his death.

This is 'news' because the great part the world has not reached the stage of lief in spiritist messages and has had no owledge nor intimacy with such things. majority of those who believe in spiritm is notable however.

Spiritualism or spiritism had a great rge a number of years ago, late during the war and in the following years but as the strain of that struggle eased, spiritism's peal for a number of people lapsed. ose who read Metropolitan newspapers e notices of meetings of spiritists and of nces but to most people the experience a seance is absolutely foreign.

So often she bid with death the high cost,
So often she won—but now she has lost.
And those who might wish for her well-known tread,
Will hear it no more—the doctor is dead.

For courage and faith which was hers to the end,
Who could have wished for a truer old friend?
For love that she gave to her patients as well,
What sweeter story could anyone tell?

How many times did she answer us 'no,'
When asked to the bed of a sick one to go?
How often eyes have her hands closed in death?
To how many bodies given life's breath?

There are those of us here, although they are few,
Who'd question some things that she didn't do.
But if we could just follow the path that she trod,
Her footsteps would lead us nearer to God.

FOLKS DON'T LIKE THE WEATHER WE'VE BEEN HAVING

But gosh all hemlock, it is just dandy compared with what some folks have to put up with—in the land of Uncle Sam, for instance, that land flowing with milk and honey, according to other believers, although there be some localities where a self-respecting bee would not dare light without danger of turning sour, with the land and the inhabitants thereof. However, this winter has been a hard one on many communities in the United States. Take Hatfield, Missouri, for instance—snow and zero, added to with snow drifts twenty feet deep in places. Consolidated school closed for thirty days—coal exhausted three weeks ago—hens on all sides laid the land with

Advice to the Lovelorn

Judge Puts Husband in Wife's Custody

"Nobody else on earth knows what sort of a character a man has like his wife," Judge George L. Hager said the other day, when he decided to put a husband on parental probation for the good of his wife.

Mrs. Sophie Danner, the wife, told the judge what a good husband she had, but it seems he met some friends who led him off, and he wound up in the City Court of Buffalo, where he was arraigned for intoxication.

And thinking over the wisdom of Judge Hager wouldn't it be a good idea if beauty parlor proprietors were given similar "probation" powers over their patrons? For beauty parlor today seems to have usurped the authority of church, state and Dickens.

Women will follow any regime, no matter how pestilential it is, hails from the beauty parlor. It's the modern court of final appeal. Even then, not this hierarchy stand out a few truths about excessive drinking. Instead of trying to steam and cream up the heart-eyed wreck who come to them?

We men would gladly admit that he drinks because he thinks it's manly. When Pals has kicked him downstairs, he drinks to drown his sorrows similarly, when Pal has kicked him upstairs, he drinks to celebrate.

But his "sisters, and his cousins, and his aunts"—even his grandmother—drink because they think it's the thing to do.

As one of my correspondents, whose engagement had been broken by her fiancé because he thought she drank too much, writes to me: "It is nothing like a couple of cocktails at a party, or a party, or hanging the door on the well-known infernity complex, from which I have always suffered. But Bill thought I was getting too much a hold over me, and he quit."

Bill hit the nail on the head. That is the trouble—the feeling of malicious hold Roger gets on one, unaware. From the couple of cocktails taken to pep up a party, or stop-gap timidity, the "one over" which makes midlife is an imperceptible step.

Prohibition, as we experimented with it, was a failure, but almost the result of it. A failure to drink drinking which in some instances is following in its wake.

If girls and boys would only get over the idea that it's smart to be drunk, there would be fewer previous wrecks along the road, and institutions for the care of mentally patients would be less crowded.

Now do I believe that the youth of the country is going to the devil, it spite of statistics giving the age of patients in those Kesley cures. I know innumerable people who do not drink—and let me say they are happier and more successful than those who do imbibe.

It is less cowardly to let it entirely alone than to experiment with it, for then you don't know where to stop.

Avoiding the "Superior" Child

Miss Grenelle Writes of Danger if One in Family is Favored

(By Lisa Grenelle)

"That's a really able child," Tom Brighton said of his daughter, Lavinia.

And Mrs. Brighton felt the same way. She always was slaving away, doing extra jobs and making extra sacrifices so that Lavinia could have special trimmings or other, a new dress, dancing school or college.

In this case the attitude appeared to be not entirely undeserved. Little Lavinia, from all accounts was bright, ambitious, genial and well liked by everybody.

And then I heard something else. Lavinia had a sister, Y'd known the Brighton a year before I heard of her, much less seen her.

I had the picture then. Jane, that was her sister's name, was not like Lavinia. She wasn't popular, bright or a sensation in the house.

Poor Jane! She never had been a very nice child. She wasn't good-looking, cheerful or responsive and had been cranky, perhaps from the beginning. Then Lavinia came along, a year after Jane. She was, from the beginning, all that her parents had hoped of a baby, healthy pretty and gay.

It wasn't that her parents ever were disloyal to her. I presume they thought they were showing no favoritism. They could not know that they were always bragging about Lavinia outside.

Yes, Jane knew, and so did Lavinia. Children always know things like that.

If mother gave Lavinia a few more advantages, it was only because Lavinia could use them, and Jane didn't. Jane didn't want to go dancing school or college. Jane never wanted the things her sister wanted. No one ever knew what Jane wanted.

Nothing stands still. Everything is dragging, from one day or one another. Lavinia was pulled up and Jane dragged down, so the difference grew greater and greater.

Parents and people expected Lavinia to be charming and pretty and fine, so Lavinia grew that way. Parents and people expected Jane to be sort of a problem, in other words, a child "superior" complex, from which she and no Jane grew that way.

What might Jane have been if Lavinia hadn't existed? If Lavinia's parents hadn't assumed that things must be either pleasing or black and so white? No one can tell that, of course, Jane mightn't ever have been as pretty and bright and charming as Lavinia. But this is certain, she couldn't have become the unhappy problem she did become, if her parents had believed in her as they believed in Lavinia.

Good Manners

WEDDING PLANS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper to have your younger brother take you to the altar when you have an older brother, but when you prefer the younger?

2. Is it proper to have a little flower girl and little boy as the flower girl's attendant — not as ring-bearer?

3. Is it proper to have your twin sister announce your wedding when you have an older sister, if you live with your twin sister?

4. Can you tell me just how I should thank the people? It is the custom in our church at the reception to have speeches, and when they say a lot of nice things about you, but what should you say besides "Thank you"? The bride and groom always speak last.

5. Should thank-you cards be sent out thanking for wedding gifts, or should we thank the givers verbally for their gifts?

A.

1. If you have no father, the conventional thing is for your older brother to be given the honor of presenting you in marriage. If you prefer to give this honor to your younger brother, and if you are sure that your older brother will understand and will not feel hurt by your doing this, then I suppose that you can follow your choice about this. But you had best think very carefully about this, for weddings are no place for hurt feelings that can be avoided.

2. This too isn't the conventional thing to do, but I see no reason why it shouldn't be done if you especially wish it. In all events, I'd rather that you have the little boy accompany the flower girl, rather than have him a ring-bearer.

3. No. You should have your older sister make this announcement. It would be especially inappropriate for you to have the announcement made by your twin sister.

4. The groom acknowledges these gracious speeches made to you and to him. He doesn't need to make a long speech — just a few words of acknowledgment are enough. For example, "Alice and I thank you most deeply and heartily for your good wishes and for all the kind and friendly things that you have said about us. It is so wonderful to have all you dear friends with us on this important day, and it will make the memory of the day a perfect one."

5. Don't, please, send ready-made cards of thank you acknowledging those wedding gifts. And don't wait to thank the givers as you casually meet them. The thing to do, the only well-bred and appreciative thing to do is to write a note at once after you have received a gift. Thank the giver first for the kind thoughtfulness, and then thank definitely and appreciatively for the gift itself.

FUTURE IN-LAWS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

About two months ago I received an engagement ring from my fiancé and I would appreciate your advising me as to how we can get our parents together as they have never met? I have been to his home for dinner several times, and, of course, know his parents very well.

I have been told that it is his mother's place to call my mother and acknowledge the engagement ring, and then to invite us to have a dinner, or just a visit. Others assure me that it is my mother's place to invite his parents to our home for dinner. As both his parents are living, and as I have only my mother, I think they should make the first move.

T.

The friends who told you that the proper thing is for your fiancé's mother and father, or at least his mother, to call on you and your mother, are correct. As soon as possible after their son has told them of his engagement, they should call on your family regardless of you and your mother, and to welcome you into the family. This important visit of courtesy is usually made within twenty-four hours after they have been told of the engagement.

After this visit has been made, they may invite you and your mother to come to see them, formally at dinner or informally at dinner or for any other occasion. Or your mother may invite them to come to your home. This later invitation is not of special importance — the visit-of-welcome is.

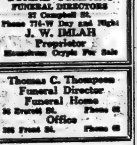
Laguardia Favors Legalized Lotteries

New York, Feb. 20—(CP)— Mayor Laguardia came out today for legalized lotteries to help finance the ambulances bought for city hospitals by the Grand National Treasury Drive.



Expressing hope the organization's demonstration of its horse-drawn vehicles would "bring home to the American people the value of having a lottery conducted by the city," he said:

"Men and women will gamble. If they don't they are not human. Let's smoother. Some play games, others participate in the stock market, others can run for public office and others go into the newspaper business and take a chance on a deal, and some get out of that. And some play bingo, whist, Bingo, or what have you—anything they can put a dime or a quarter on."

Laguardia said lotteries are regulated and run honestly in other countries and he knows of cases in the hands of "racketeers, gangsters and punks."

COMMONS ROUSED OVER DOCUMENT

Questions Rattle

London, Feb. 20 (CP Cable)—Questions rattled like machine gun fire on the floor of the House of Commons this afternoon about the secret British Foreign Office document published in Rome yesterday. The questioners concerned the report of a British Inter-Departmental Committee's inquiry into the British interests in Abyssinia, discussed by a possible Italian invasion. The inquiry was conducted years ago and the report was kept secret.

A first class storm threatened. Winston Churchill, former Secretary of State for War, raised the matter just as the question period ended. Earlier W. M. Adamson, Labor, had questioned the Prime Minister on the alleged leakage to a Sheffield newspaper and mentioned the Rome publication in passing.

The subject was not dropped, only to be taken up again when the business for the coming week was discussed.

Lansbury's Question

George Lansbury, former Labor leader, asked what view of Monday's scheduled debate on oil sanctions the Prime Minister would be prepared to table a white paper giving the actual text of the document published in Rome.

Mr. Baldwin replied he had been very much occupied all morning and had not had an opportunity to consider the matter.

Lansbury pressed unless the House was in full possession of the facts before it debated oil, it would be impossible to consider properly discuss foreign affairs. The House wanted to know, he continued, which was the document published in Rome were accurate or not.

Mr. Baldwin: "I must consider the point. I cannot answer it now."

Lansbury: "Will whatever view we would the Prime Minister be prepared to make a statement to the House now in view of what had come 'out of Rome.'"

"I cannot answer that now," repeated Mr. Baldwin.

Prime Minister Baldwin was closely questioned regarding a press statement on Italian oil sanctions movement's defence plans. He denied reports had occurred and added articles referred to had been based merely on intelligent anticipation which he would be unable to write himself with the knowledge available if he had the position and information of the ordinary journalist. (Laughter).

MIRROR FRIGHTS MAN WHEN DYING

Mystery Glass Now Cannot be Moved From Table

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Feb. 20 (AP)—A mirror which has witnessed countless deaths stuck to a metal table top where Joseph Bruno died, tested it to be died in a hospital's files says this town one of its most puzzling mysteries today.

"You won't be able to pick it up" were Dercoler's last words, the witnesses assert, then they say Bruno's eyes defied the efforts of Harvey Davenport, Dercoler's ward mate; Dr. T. W. Lamb, prison physician and hospital attendants, to remove from the mirror. Then, they say, Adeline Enopf, a nurse, pried it up with an ice pick.

Speculation ranged today from a "dead man's spell," to theories of "hypnotism" and "mysterious acid chemical reaction.

Davenport, fellow townsmen, reporting he had left hurriedly for the West, said he abhorred the idea of explanation. Dr. Maloney, asked if he shared that view replied: "No I have no explanation."

"The mirror was just a piece of looking glass when I left," said Lewis Deschenes, one of the witnesses. "Dercoler simply fell dead. We all heard him say he couldn't move. Lewis Deschenes, one of the witnesses. "Dercoler simply fell dead. We all heard him say he couldn't move. Then he started to call a nurse. Dercoler said he'd give him five dollars to get it. The report reached for the mirror. Dercoler told him, 'you won't be able to pick it up' and died."

"Then the sick man started hiccoughing. A nurse came but he died right away. Then the undertaker came and tried and tried to take the looking glass from the table. It wouldn't move and that's all."

Board Room Gossip

As supplied by Bigear and Crawford by Financial Service.

New highs are a daily feature on the Montreal market and the public moves from one group to another. It seems 1936 should witness the definite turning point in the market and although reactionary periods are bound to develop periodically, it only be a technical reaction. The year should witness a steady forward movement in the stocks that merit attention.

The annual statement of Dominion Stores for 1935 was about what was expected. The company came through a difficult year in good financial shape. The fact that sales have shown a substantial pick-up in the last few months augurs well for the balance of 1936. In connection with the 1936 report of Dominion Stores it is interesting to note that whereas Canada's payable amount to $277,887, inventories total $1,804,031, indicating a favorable balance of about $600,000. Cash and call loans are shown as $1,034,213 which, together with the previous item, totals approximately $4,000,000, equivalent to $6.80 per share on the 282,382 shares outstanding. Working capital remains strong at $2,043,896, the ratio of current assets to current liabilities being better than 2 to 1.

Power Corporation touched a new high yesterday. This security is becoming popular as the time nears for clarity in view of the very substantial general market rise. Power Corporation, with its holdings largely in public utility and other securities, has benefitted very materially and this is now receiving recognition.

One group of securities that has been neglected in the current market, advance has been the gold specialities. The uncertainly prevailing in New York and the fact that gold is a factor in the local hesitancy.

SNOW BLOCKS CONCESSION LINES

Slowly Side Road Dwellers Are Digging Out to Main Highways

Keeping winds from the north blowing with blizzard-like fierceness again piled high drifts of snow throughout the district, blocking concession roads for all but horse-drawn sleighs and cutters, through the weekend. A cold spell set in on Friday night, according to reports from rural districts and the mercury continued to register below zero.

On main roads, however, snow plows made the early morning rounds today clearing pathways for the regular buses and heavier transports, Belleville-Toronto road was reported open with regular schedules of stages being maintained. On other roads, almost virtual isolation in many farms and homes was reported until trails could be broken with the aid of horses.

In Thurlow Township side roads were also early blocked but reshaped with the drifts reaching heights across shore fence logs. Tyendinaga Township reported the same difficulty, with cars at a stand still here again ordinary movements being carried on with horses.

Thirty men taken from the various rolls were necessary to clear the road and trails in various parts of the city that had been covered with the curling billows of snow. Throughout the district the weather is stopping place while they shovel in long drifts until more economical reports could be obtained from outside conditions.

Relief during the present cold snap was indicated today by weather forecasts which indicate moderate temperatures for the Central Ontario region on Friday.

AIRMEN LEARN VERY QUICKLY

Ottawa, Feb. 20 (CP)—What Canadian airmen have had no experience in operating high-speed radio-equipped 'planes if they do not take them long to learn it, Wing Commander Leonard Slatter, of the Dominion in the opinion of Civil Aviation officials here on an identity visit, announced today. Wing Commander D. R. MacLaren, inspector of the Pacific Division, R.C.A.F., Canadian Airways in Vancouver that Canadian pilots have not operated radio and expect to operate efficient air-mail service in Canada when completed Slatter declared is correct. But Canadian aviators will be able to learn operating on small planes as well as other aircraft, and could do so with reasonable training.

REDWINGS READY FOR WAILING WALL DUE TO INJURIES

Lewis and Aurie of Best Line Now on Shelf

LEAFS HARD HIT

Jackson, Horner and Day Not Ready For Battles

Anxiety furrows the brows of at least a couple of National Hockey League club managers as play-offs approach. Holmes and Injuries seem to invade dressing rooms about this time of year, and managers and coaches spend a hectic time trying to iron out physical infirmities before the curtain call for the play-offs.

Detroit Red Wings were ready for the wailing wall today, but the American section leaders arrived in Montreal for their game against Maroons, Canadian section top hands, having considerably weakened by the loss of Larry Aurie and Herb Lewis, high-powered forward line stars. Aurie will be out of hockey for two weeks at least with a chipped breastbone and two broken ribs, souvenirs of the B.C.V.H.A. Goal Mondy in Kitchener Tuesday night. Lewis, off for some time with the virus, is back to work in action next week. Wings were in no better shape Thursday to appear Maroons here, though Chicago Hawks, four points behind the Detroiters, hoist a lodging agreement too tonight against Rangers in New York.

Injuries Dog Leafs.

Injuries dogged Toronto Maple Leafs. Ills since they won from Detroit in overtime last month. Pittsburgh, they worked out at home twice in preparation for the game with Chicago Black Hawks Tuesday night. Four points instead of two will go to the winner, in view of each for a tied game, because of, last month's game postponed out of respect for the death of King George V.

Harvey "Bunker" Jackson aggravated a back injury in practice this week and will not likely be on the ice tonight. Happy Day was reported fit with a heavy cold. If Day is unable to start, "Red" Horner will replace him. Injured in a collision with "Red" Dutton in New York a couple weeks ago, Horner has been recovering rapidly and has skated for a time.

Beset with injuries earlier, Canadiens reported all shipshape today for their game with Montreal Garden for a play-off berth in the Canadian section, just three points behind the third-place New York Americans.

Rangers have ambitions of overtaking Hawks, their opponents at Chicago Tuesday night, tonight and hold third place in the American section, just three points to the rear of Chicago.

Americans and Boston lay off until the week-end.

RANKS DWINDLE TO THREE RINKS

Chisholm, Graham And Morrow Undefeated in Spiel

Toronto, Feb. 20.—(CP)—The field of three rinks is left in the Ninth Annual Ontario Curling Bonspiel had dwindled today to three rinks—H. Chisholm, Fort William; Graham of the Toronto Club and Dr. F. G. Morrow of Hamilton Thistles. A dozen proud quartets started yesterday with perfect records.

They fell like nine-pins. The Chisholm, Graham and Morrow rinks passed three tests with flying colors as the main event for the Royal York trophy reached the stage of six rinks all undefeated after seven advanced even farther.

The Chisholm rink each scored two wins in the Royal York event. Chisholm used Eigin Cobb's Union-Jack rink to win 20-6 and defeated Dr. O. Fixaton of Toronto, 13-8. Graham defeated Dr. Stephenson of New Liskeard, 12-10, and J. Baxter of Royal Canadians, by the same score.

Dr. Morrow's Hamilton rink won 20-5 from Harvey Little of Toronto Band led by R. L. Graham. In the second round Morrow defeated D. A. Campbell of Strathcona, 12-9.

The eights were reached in the Dominion event with 100 rinks battling rinks as T. G. Bishop of Toronto Granites, Hamilton Victoria, Dr. J. T. Marcus of Kincardine and Dr. J. A. Wilson of Toronto in the running. Hugh Paterson of Strathcona reached the semi-finals of this event, slumping Dr. J. A. Wright of London, 16-8, last night.

Watson didn't go so well, however, in the second round of the Seagram Challenge Trophy, losing to Dunker of Kitchener, qualified in the third round by defeating D. L. Williamson of Toronto, 9-7. Mr. Stark of Orangeville, advanced with a win over Dr. H. McPhie of Hamilton Thistles.

KI-Y LOOP

Two games of hockey were played at the Arena last evening in the juvenile section of the local Ki-Y League. In the first game the "Stars" defeated the St. Michael's Juvenile in a closely fought game by the score of 2 to 2, while in the second game the Redwings stayed a belated rally to defeat the Black Hawks by the score of 8 to 2. Both games were keenly contested and well played by the youngest members. Bill Cook, manager of the group capably handled the ball. The lineups—Black Hawks, Goal, Orr, defence, Rigby and Pepper; centre, Grace; wings, McBride and Hillier; subs, Balyx, Taylor and McConnell. Redwings, Goal, Lott; defence, Daniels and Trapp; centre, Rushlow; wings, Elliott and Vance. St. Michael's—Goal, Mosher; defence, Doherty and Callaghan; centre, Cowan; wings, Fyels and Davidson; subs, Hara and Berry. "Stars" —Goal, Jackson; defence, Farren and Cavanagh; centre, McGuire; wings, Elliott and Mansfield; subs, Hill, Graham, High, Cannon and Scott.

Trapp, of the Redwings, was the big scorer of the night with three counters as he and Rushlow teamed up splendidly together. Rushlow and Pepper looked the best for the losing Black Hawks.

BELLEVILLE "Y" LOSE TO R.M.C.

Basketball Schedule For Intermediate Loop is Completed

Showing the lack of practice the Belleville Y.M.C.A. intermediate basketball squad lost their first game in the R.O.B.A. by the score of 29 to 19 to R.M.C. at Kingston last evening. The Cadets' home victory elevated them into a tie for first place in the group standings along with the Kingston "Y" squad, necessitating a subsequent group play-off.

Trailing badly as the game progressed the local "Y" squad opened its scoring in the last period but rallied the bulk of the play during the last few minutes of play, but the previously gained advantage of the R.M.C. squad proved too great to pull down and the locals, despite their frantic last minute superior play were forced to take the short end. Both squads played a splendid game of passing and no individual star stood out as the best scorer of the game. It was the final game of the K.O.A.B.A. schedule. Every member of the R.M.C. squad scored at least once.

The line-ups:

R.M.C. (29)—McDonald 6, Sinclair 3, Snow 4, Vivian 2, Stephenson 2, Stevens 4, and Kirkpatrick 8.

Belleville "Y" (19)—White 5, Surby 3, Cole 7, Wickerson 2, Atkins, Hatcher, Maclean and Fletcher.

Referee — Johnnie Edwards of Queen's.

PAIR OF GOALS DECIDE ISSUE

Hamilton Tigers Defeat Oakville in First Playoff Game 4-3

Hamilton, Ont., Feb. 20 (CP)—Stiff skirted by the closeness of the first clash, Hamilton Tigers made ready today for the second game in their best of three series against Oakville Villans for the right to move against Toronto Dutties in the finals for the eastern section of the Senior Ontario Hockey Association playoffs.

Two heavy favorites to defeat the less-experienced Villans, Tigers trailed until less than seven minutes were left to play in the first game last night. Then they rushed home a pair of rapid-fire goals for a 4-3 triumph. The teams meet again in Toronto Friday night.

The back-checking goals came 40 seconds apart from the sticks of Howard Mackie and Tiger veteran Goney McGowan. They offset a brilliant second-period rally by Oakville that blasted three goals past Charley Tuno and gave them a 3-2 lead.

"Sonny" Twombley, Saral Allen and Reve Pyer slapped pucks past Tuno in the middle period for the George Mackie sandwiched a counter between those of Twombley and Allen. Mackie had put the Tigers in a 1-0 lead halfway through the first period.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know the real cause of piles is on the inside?

Do you know they can be doctored from the inside?

Do you know you must get at and remove the cause of Piles, to get rid of them?

The real cause of piles is poor circulation, a congestion of blood in the veins of the lower bowel. This makes the veins flappy, full of pockets. Under this condition the delicate membranes.

So if you would have relief from piles you should use an internal remedy. HEMS-ROID, a prescription written by Dr. J. S. Hemphill. HEMS-ROID banishes piles by its direct action. It stimulates circulation, eases the pressure of blood in the veins of the lower bowel, and helps to heal and reduce sore, tender parts. Use HEMS-ROID for a week—and in even the most stubborn cases that 7 days' treatment is the most you will ever need. Purchase is authorized to make good our promise to you that if you are not completely satisfied with HEMS-ROID after one bottle, you may have your money back.

Followed by special boxes from Niagara Falls, a government snowplow and more than likely another day. But the plow soon developed motor trouble and itself became stalled in deep drifts. After passengers were taken off the drivers remained with their vehicles. It was said they might be there all night.

Highways and byways, be they given or gifted with pure unadulterated high, all lead to the Belleville Arena for tonight's mammoth ice carnival. The huge entertainment will be staged and presented in Belleville since Hector was a pup. Don't bother about parking the dinner dishes or even waiting to hear Amos 'n' Andy, but right down to the arena with weary yourselves of good seats, as the tickets of reserve seats are going fast at noon. Not a stone has been left unturned to provide every possible kind of entertainment for all walks of life. A few impromptu acts are to be injected by members of the committee, we understand, but they are all in fun and to give the fans a laugh.

The carnival is for a splendid cause, being in aid of the Victorian Nurses, being a charity project with numerous civic organizations behind the movement and there has been untiring efforts into the affair. Playing a supreme brand of hockey throughout the Albert College outfit defeated the O.S.D. Collegiate squad in the final game of the local intermediate group play-offs, group last evening at the arena, the score being 6 to 0. The Albert College squad had earned the right to meet the group leaders, the B.C.I.V.S. team in the group final play-offs, commencing on Friday afternoon directly after Albert-Collegiate clash. Inability to solve the Albert defence paved the way for the shutout victory, with only one team, the leading "Collegians", who had downed the O.S.D. 7 to 1 the night, but rung down the schedule curtain without playing defeated, although they played a tie game with Albert to open the season's play. The local Intermediate hockey group has provided the fans with a brand of fast and interesting hockey and the final play-offs should be well attended from the fact that the contest between Albert College and the B.C.I.V.S. at the Arena on Friday afternoon.

Completing their season's schedule the local Y.M.C.A. Intermediate basketball squad lost 29 to 19 in Kingston at the hands of the R.M.C. in Kingston last night. The victory for the Cadets elevated them into a tie for first place with the Kingston "Y" squad and necessitated a play-off for the group title. Incidentally while in Kingston the basketball officials, Referee Pollock of Kingston announced that the winner of the Kingston play-off would be entitled to meet the local Deacon A.C. kids next week in a two game total point series to be played in Belleville. The Deacons are the fast junior basketball rather seriously and have overcome eyes on a provincial basketball championship. The winner of the Kingston-Belleville series will meet the Juvenile winner of Toronto in the provincial semi-finals.

While the Redmen are in Campbellford on Friday night the local Industrial League will complete its schedule with a triple-header at the Arena, starting at 8 o'clock. Redmen up his league has adopted the two-game total point system, thereby only eliminating two teams from the final round robin play. The teams will be at full strength tomorrow night to endeavor scraping additional points and eliminations from the play-offs. Then on Friday night Trish Stevens Taylor's senior basketball squad will present a playing show at the R.O.A.F. Airport. The R.A.F. squad has been very recently cancelled owing to the death of His Majesty King George the Fifth. A splendid crowd of nearly 17,000 jammed their way into the Maple Leaf Gardens last night to witness the "white hope" bouting bouts from which Phil Mzaro of Toronto emerged winner. Over 200 pounds, Mzaro will not prove any serious stumbling block in the path of Joe Louis, however.

The local rugby football executive should hold a meeting in the near future to determine any recommendations or recommendations they might have to bring up at the annual meeting of the O.R.F.U. which is slated for the latter part of the month.

PREVENT DANGERS OF CONSTIPATION*

"Bulk" in ALL-BRAN Is Gentle in Action

Common constipation is largely due to insufficient "bulk" in meals. You fail to get your internal exercise. Millions of people have found that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies soft "bulk" with satisfactory results.

Tests in nutrition laboratories demonstrate that the "bulk" in ALL-BRAN can be relied on with perfect confidence. Naturally, those few individuals with diseased or highly sensitive intestines should not take "bulk" in any form—either in leafy vegetables or in bran.

Unlike cathartics, ALL-BRAN is natural in its action—and does this food-less its effectiveness with continued use. Within the body, it absorbs moisture and elongates the intestines, promoting normal and healthful elimination.

Two tablespoonfuls of this delicious cereal, served with milk or cream, are usually sufficient. Enjoy it also in cooked dishes.

Help your family keep well. Serve ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg's in London, Ontario.

BLUMENFIELD IS FREED OF MURDER

New Attempt to Solve Crime Being Made by Police

Minneapolis, Feb. 20 (AP)—With Isadore (Kid Cann) Blumenfield, former bootlegger, acquitted of murdering Walter W. Liggett, crusading weekly newspaper publisher, a new attempt to solve the crime was ordered by Governor Floyd B. Olson.

Blumenfield, liquor salesman and former bootlegger was acquitted by a jury in district court.

Blumenfield's relief and joy at his release from jail was hard to suppress. When District Judge Arthur M. Reimer had read only a few the words "not guilty", he started to rise from his chair. He was pulled back by Attorneys Thomas M. McMeekin, Cann and McMeekin wept as the judge read the verdict.

The kid embraced his wife and friends, then Attorney Reimer, in a circle of friends and rushed to the jury box to join the hands of the four women jurors and shake hands with the men.

Mrs. Liggett, informed of the verdict, prepared a statement for interviewers. In it she said: "The Minneapolis police force has done nothing."

BLOOM CAN LOSE $100,000 BY TOSS

Walter Johnson, Former Hurler Will try to Duplicate Washington's Feat

Washington, Feb. 20 (AP)—The issue of baseball's future centered in a head in a roaring controversy involving George Washington, Representative Sol Bloom, Walter Johnson and one silver dollar.

It was raised by Harry Thames, powerful dollar-toser of Wellington, Kansas, and evidently a strong believer in the story George Washington once threw a silver "cartwheel" across the Rappahannock River at Fredericksburg, Va.

On Roger Bloom needs to lose more than $100,000 if Johnson makes the toss. Among those who rushed to take bets was Ben Flint, president of the Fredericksburg Chamber of Commerce, who put up $5,000.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, My, just listen to that rain, we ort to feel glad we have a roof over our heads.

We ort to feel additionally glad if's not leeking, pop said, and ma said, This always strikes me as teal weather to be in a moving picture theater, dont you feel that way, Willyum?

No, but I'm too comfortable to put up a struggle, so I surrender, as long as you take me some place where the seets are soft, pop said, is there anything in town? he said, and ma said, Some of the pictures have intriuing titles. For instants, The old Town Pump at the Paradise sounds attractive, she said.

I'm afraid you'll be disappointed, pop said. It's proberly a story about a dog's offner who has been accused of corrupting, but when the big test comes and the wires are like mountains and the ships timbers are rattling like castanets and the communistic ships carpenter is planing bombs all over the boat and expecting in the officers quarters, the supposedly cowardly officer proves himself to be a grate hero and saves the ship for the company and himself for the captain's daughter, pop said, and ma said, How awful, I cant bear these shocking and wrecking and explosing pictures But Willyum how could it possibly be with a name like The Old Town Pumph she said.

The most deceptive thing about a picture is the name, it's even more deceptive than the plot, pop said, and ma said, Well how about trying Evening Song at the Mawsoleum? That's proberly by or about yaller cowboys on frothing horses racing screaming locomotives through roaring pistol fires, pop said, and ma said, Horrors what a gusty thawt, the only other picture is The Hangs Riders of Bloody Forks at the New Miracle.

Now I imagine, youd like that, no doubt it's the story of an innocent hat check girl who in a moment of abstraction finds herself in a subdivided gentlemen apartment with a rich but dishevel millionair pop said, and ma said, Well both we'll go and see The Old Town Pump.

With they did.

Dale Plays The Game

—BY—

Ann Forester

"Just a small apartment, Fanny—nice, honestly. It wouldn't cost much, I could do my own work. I'd love to, Brant. And I'd be so saving—you know how well I did managing, honeyest....."

Brant knocked the ashes from his pipe and shook his head.

"Not right now, sweetheart. It would be too blamed expensive. I'm carrying all the overhead now the business will stand—things were pretty better up. Dad's keep two establishments going. This household is already running. We—you and I—add practically nothing further in expense. The same honey—very little more food—the same servants do for us as well as for mother and the others. Please don't tease, Dale. I simply can't see any way out just now. If you'll only be patient a little longer—"

No thought of Mimi—of his mother giving up an extra servant—a few luxuries which would mean Brant and Dale could have their own home! thought Dale resentfully. No, it was her cultured—her peace of mind which was to be sacrificed!

Dale grew reproachful and Brant grew exasperated. It led to another quarrel. Brant interrupted a hot speech to say with a little mirthless laugh, "Oh, for the love of heaven, let's not have another scene! We're staging them every night lately!"

Fear stabbed through Dale's anger. Where was all this leading? It can't be see it was an impossible situation? It wasn't fair! Couldn't he see her point of view..... But a quarrel—that was just what Mimi wanted. Words—they would do no good. Words piling on words—recalling all the bitterness which had been said before.....It wasn't fair but what could she do about it?

Dale sobered too. She loved Brant in her heart. She tried to coax Brant back to the old frank companionship again. But love after Brant had fallen asleep, Dale lay staring wide-eyed into the dark.

She was slipping into Mimi's hands. She must be more clever! Impatience would lose her the game. Patience..... The time came next year, she and Brant would have their own little home, and in its normal atmosphere all the differences would smooth out.....

This time next year.....

CHAPTER 24

ELEANOR FARRADAY

To Dale it was always a source of secret wonder that Eleanor Farraday should make an effort to be so friendly. Eleanor was a pretty, discontented girl, an acquaintance of Mimi's whom Dale had met at bridge club. From an impoverished, aristocratic family, Eleanor had married into an equally impoverished, but if equally aristocratic one, and she made it a matter of pride to snoop. But though she had only a small apartment in a smart part of town, though she made practically no return for entertainment, she was asked to the smartest affairs, for Eleanor was born to the purple and savagely conscious of it. When she had first met her Dale considered Eleanor quite as snobbish as Mimi; consequently she was amused when the other girl made unmistakable overtures of friendship to her.

There were other women whose friendship Dale would have preferred. Julie Hale, for instance, with her bubbling sense of humor, or Mary Curtis with her attractive plain face and positive manner. They were always nice to her when they met, but Julie was too negligent to further the friendship, Mary too busy. And Dale was not the type to push herself forward. So she was grateful for Eleanor's evident efforts to be friendly, almost humbly so. The companionship of this girl who belonged to the class quite as much as Mimi, caused Dale to heighten perceptibly. Not until now did she realize just how alone she had been. It was pleasant to have someone ringing her up on trivial excuse—a new show in town; did she want to take in a matinee? Would she come out to the golf club while Eleanor practiced her stroke? How about running down town to look at those new French hats at Manstaldy's? It raised her own value in Dale's eyes. It seemed to bring her closer to Brant. She did fit in his life after all! His friends were beginning to accept her. Yes, it paid to have patience! It had been a long lonely winter, but spring was at last!

Major was left deserted in his kennel behind the garage. Dale was not dependent now on solitary walks with the collie. She dwelt less in the past, the present was rich and absorbing. What matter if her days were filled with trivialities? She had a zest so long with harsh realities. She had had so little time to play.

Singing as she took her morning bath.....hurrying to pick up Eleanor in the car (Brant had given her a little runabout for Christmas) morning Mimi's smile with a coy insouciance since now she too had a friend. Eleanor was given to making catty little digs at Mimi. Dale would have been less than human if she had not felt a wicked glimmer of satisfaction at that, yet in her reflective moments it bothered her. Eleanor was not just the companion she would have chosen. Mary Curtis, whom she really admired would never have said anything underhanded, but then Mary had no time for anything but her eternal clubs and charities..... And it was sweet to have Eleanor on her side.

Dale was overjoyed the night Brant said casually: "Jim Farraday was in to see me today on some business and he suggested that we take a run down in the country Sunday with him and Eleanor. Want to do that?"

Did she want to! It was a happy dream to be in the car wrapped in an expensive fur coat, proud of Brant, thrilling to his nearness, chattering gaily to Eleanor and Jim, laughing on the slightest provocation, just because her heart was so full that if she hadn't laughed she would have cried.

The party of them dining in a smart roadhouse. Slipping out of her silk-lined coat to show her lace dress. Gifting across the dance floor in Jim Farraday's arms—or better still—in Brant's. Glorying in the fact that she could dance so well. Dale felt the admiring gaze of people at the tables. She imagined the comment: "Look at that girl there in the lace dress..... a perfect dancer and such beautiful clothes, my dear..... That is her husband, the tall good looking chap with the brown face and steel grey eyes..... Brant Kendall, one of the smartest business men in the city and they say he adores her.....

A child's holiday..... but she had been living in the shadows so long. Dale pleaded to some sardonic self within her. It was like coming into the sunshine to have a friend.

If it hadn't been for Mimi how happy she would be. But there was always Mimi underneath everything. As soon as Dale entered the house she would have to put on the watchful armor again. In some ways Eleanor made Mimi harder to bear. Eleanor had a way of saying to Dale, patently innocent things which stuck in the mind like cockleburs and kept one from repose.

"You're a brave girl to live in the same house with Mimi Sutherland!" said Eleanor as they powdered their faces in the dressing room of a roadhouse one day. "I'd never ride Jim with her! Dale, that woman has IT and no conscience! But then, maybe Brant's innoculated now—like vaccination, you know. Maybe, as Teddy Mears says, 'Brant's all burnt out over Mimi and there's not enough left to start a decent conflagration.' But, boy! What a nice to know he got so completely over it....."

In that moment Dale hated Eleanor with a hot murderous hatred. Jealousy raged her so strongly she felt herself trembling and turned away that Eleanor might not notice. Mimi and Brant—still linked in people's minds.....Brant get over Mimi—indeed!

But when Eleanor's guileless blue eyes met hers, when Eleanor slipped an arm about her as they went back to the table where Jim mingled, Dale felt her heart melt in resigned weariness. Don't quarrel with this one friend..... After all what did other people's gossip matter? Brant was hers..... But she found herself watching Mimi more closely, wracked by jealousy when Brant exchanged a word with her. The sight of them dancing together—sitting at the same table—was unbearable. And Eleanor's casual remarks kept the wound open.

One morning Eleanor phoned: "Dale, let's run over to Erma Hanford's tea this afternoon. I hear she's garnered another performing monkey—dramatic reading or something of the sort. I'll probably be a washout, but I said we'd go—"

Dale was smiling as she hung up the phone and started to dress. Erma Hanford was a wealthy spinster of only too certain age, who was always playing Egeria to some shabby poet or parlor performer. "One of Erma Hanford's protegees mon," was a term which raised smiles and eyebrows about the feminine circle. Nance wickedly mimicked the perennial Erma; Cecile added some caustic wit. Dale secretly pitied the fantastic spinster but it would never do to let Nance or Mimi or Eleanor suspect such mawkishness.....

So she dressed for Erma Hanford's tea now, never guessing that she was stepping blithely into a cul de sac of fate.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Captain Blood"

Sabatini's Pirate Tale, Year's Outstanding Film

Rafael Sabatini's immortal tale of "Captain Blood" is now acknowledged to have taken its place among the classic stories of adventure written in the last century. Its thrilling action and absorbing romance are known to all readers whose hearts respond to the call of adventure and the love of beauty. Now "Captain Blood" with all its color, its vividness, its sweep and its thrill is made into a talking picture.

The picture has been produced on a stunningly lavish scale. Sixteenth century cities and villages have been reconstructed, palatial galleons, slave ships and English and French war vessels complete the every detail are shown in terrific battle realism, containing as it does scores of players, hosts of colonial governors, nobles, slaves, buccaneers, the whole picture is a work of remarkable artistry.

Heading a cast as unusual as the production itself are two young film players whose work will undoubtedly place them among the leading stars of the cinema.

Errol Flynn, a newcomer to the young English actor-adventurer who is Captain Blood in the film, and Olivia de Havilland, the young high-school girl discovered by Max Reinhardt and who scored a personal triumph as Hermia in his production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream".

Flynn, tall, handsome, debonair, has never been a pirate. He has been a soldier of fortune, a master of trading vessels in the South Seas, a hunter of head-hunters, a trader of his own craft and one of the few real adventurers of this era of safety. But he is a real actor. The mannerisms of a swash-buckling buccaneer, his recklessness, his flare-spirit and the subtlety of his characterization show why this comparatively unknown actor was given so important a part as the title role of Captain Blood after scores of Hollywood's leading film favorites had been tested for the part.

Miss de Havilland justifies Max Reinhardt's faith in her. She has beauty, grace and charm and is splendidly adapted to the role of a noblewoman who first buys the slave and then loves him.

There is Lionel Atwill, famous stage star, in the role of a wealthy Spanish-Creole planter. Atwill's There is Basil Rathbone portraying a cruel and treacherous Spanish slave slain in a duel by Captain Blood. There is the always lovable Guy Gibbon, also portraying a pirate. And what a pickle he is! Remarkable fine performances are also given by Ross Alexander, Robert Barrat, Frank McGlynn, David Torrence and Colin Kenney in the role of friends of Blood.

The story opens with the rebellion of the Duke of Monmouth against King James, touches on the wholesale hangings and enslavement of rebels at the order of the brutal Judge Jeffreys, then sweeps to the slave plantations of the West Indies to pirate ships scrutching the seas and scuttling richly laden ships, to fierce sea battles and the sacking of Port Royal.

AT THE STRAND

"In Person"

Ginger Rogers and George Brent Co-Star in Romantic Comedy

Soaring from submerged featured roles to co-starring status with a short span of eighteen months, Ginger Rogers is handling the assignment scored in the billing for "In Person" in which George Brent is cast as her romantic lead.

After a series of lesser roles, Miss Rogers achieved co-starcom with some of the screen's leading male stars, outstanding among whom are Fred Astaire, with whom she appears in "Roberta", "The Gay Divorcee" and "Top Hat"; Francis Lederer, her screen debut in "Rendezvous" in Manhattan"; and William Powell her future friend in "Star of Midnight."

"In Person" gives Ginger a new film love. George Brent, who shares in its comedy, drama and, above all, romance. Together they enact the roles of newlyweds in a speedy and robust story by Samuel Hopkins Adams, author of the prize winning "It Happened One Night."

Supporting the two celebrated screen star unnerved from a year of crowds. George takes her under his protective wing at a hotel apartment—to give her an opportunity to relax. His disguised attitude rises her, but she is determined to force him to recognize her glamour.

A shotgun wedding imposed by Ginger's mother soon has the "mortis o' the communities," joins Ginger and George in a hilarious honeymoon matrimony which, ostensibly is against their best interests. Their adamant attitude however, is sincere and ecstatic love, which both feign to hide in the denouement.

Finding logical place in the picture are three popular song which give Miss Rogers adequate opportunity to display her dancing. Dancing skill with the definess she showed in her film musical success with Fred Astaire, "Flying Down to Rio".

The songs are "Shuffle Shoes" by Harry Lingeon On" Whatever your cinema tastes and preferences, you'll thrill to "The Lonely Lingeon On" "Lonesome Josephine" Hutchison and George Frisden, Hollywood's newest screen opera star screen "find" announced for a second feature appearance on the same program. CRANE OPERATOR NOW RECOVERING

Had Arm Amputated While Hanging 50 Feet Above Ground

Lowell, Mass., Feb. 20 (AP)—Surgeons and John McCoy, 47, whose right arm was amputated as he hung from a crane 50 feet above the ground, apparently was recovering today.

Dr. L. Gilmor Long, who performed the emergency operation yesterday in zero cold with a stockmate's axe, said McCoy, in a hospital, could not receive visitors for at least two days.

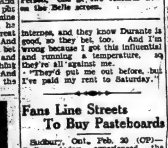
The operation took one foot on a rung of a 50-foot ladder and the other in a rope suspended from the crane by firemen, amputated McCoy's arm just below the shoulder.

Although right-handed, Dr. Long, out of medical school but four years had to use his left hand during most of the operation because of the position in which McCoy was gunned against a steel girder.

McCoy had fallen with the crane which dropped 30 feet from a 50-foot level. McCoy was suspended for two hours before the operation could be performed. Dr. Long administered whiskey as an opiate.

Chase Durante Out of Hospital

New York, Feb. 20.—(CP)—They are going to chase Jimmy Durante out of the Midtown Hospital Saturday, no matter what his physicians deem to his temperature.



The doctor might be willing to let him stay, but the engineers in the boiler room will have nothing of him. Jimmy said yesterday, being considerably improved:

"The engineer knows I'm not to see? His a'heard my illimitable stuff, and he knows I'm colossal. And he wants to see me.

"And this guy's got a green sheet in his pocket. You know, he's playing the horses, and he's got three dogs started, that he's going to bet on. I take a look at the pigs he's checked off and they're no bums. They're abdominal, simply abdominal. I spot the plug that's got a nice setup. He's at sure of winning as Durante is of getting a curtain call.

"So I mark this horse, and the engineer goes back to his job. And the next day he comes in. He's got all his money on this nag of mine —this sure thing. And when he comes in he says to me: 'The great Durante, huh—colossal, huh? And then I find out that he ain't bet in his horses, so all of 'em win, and he bets on my dog, and something happens and he don't win—and he's told all the nurses and all the interns, and they know Durante is good, but they don't. And I'm wrong because I got this influential and reminded a temperature, they're all against me.

"They'd put me out before, but I've paid my rent to Saturday."

Ginger Rogers and George Brent form a new co-starring team in the romantic comedy of fresh "In Person," one of the features now on the Belle screen.

Biggest Crowd in Boxing History For Canada

GOES TO N. Y.

Winner Fights Five Times During The Night

(By Foster Barclay, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Feb. 20. (CP)—Canada's "white hope" of the heavyweights, 24-year-old, 180 pound Phil Munroe of Toronto, would no doubt get his arm knocked off in a popular entertainment with the dark menace, Joe Louis, but red-headed Philip holds the title today anyway.

He won it on March 31 against the flashy glory to stand on his feet early this morning in Maple Leaf Gardens. A crowd of 17,000, one of the biggest in Canadian ring history by pocket a winner's purse Phil an ovation he will never forget.

Unemployed for two years, Munro was tucked $600 in his pocket today and viewed the world from a new interest. Officially he was Canada's "white hope" of boxing, although Phil knew as well as anybody what that Joe Louis would do to him if they ever met formally in the prize ring.

He will keep in training, getting better instruction than ever before, and enter Jack Dempsey's New York tournament that brings together "white hopes" from all parts of the United States. Phil will be the only Canadian in that tournament.

Munroe fought five times during the night, including one 10-rounder, Jack Slip or Winnipeg in the final at 1.30 a.m. Neighbors at suburban Parkdale, across miles north of Winnipeg, took up a collection of $20 so Jack could get to Toronto to see the tournament.

Munroe fought along the fistic trail because the Manitoban won $190 for reaching the final and was in the ninth after showing he planned to keep on punching. He had only two fights in a Winnipeg club operated by the One Big Union before adding three victories and one defeat to his record last night.

Never in Difficulty

Western Ontario amateur champion and far more experienced than Slogging, iron-jawed Slip, Munroe never was in difficulties in the final. He had the Manitoban floundering in the second round and finished the fight with a scorching left hook to the jaw.

This was the 28th boy on the longest professional card ever offered in Canada. The boys had started the eliminations at eight o'clock in the evening. One thing these hopefuls could do was walloop. Only 10 bouts went the limit of four two-minute rounds. Two ended in fouls.

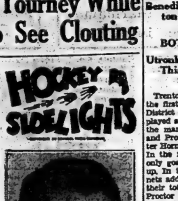
The stuffy Munroe had the longest schedule. In the first round he outpointed Eric Cryberman, from Sutton West, Ont. In the second he scored a technical knock-out over Joe Bingham, 176, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., in the first round.

Chester Bernhardt, heavy-hitting Indian from Caledonia, Ont., was Phil's third-round opponent—and the Toronto boy won the decision. In the semi-finals, Munroe won handily from Pal Flanagan of London, Ont., who faded rapidly after making a good showing in the first round.

The lanky Slip, grinning even as they popped him on the chin, headed into the final by outpointing more dynamite. It took him only 35 seconds to put Harry Knight of Saskatoon down and out in the first fight. He got a decision over Stanley Williams, 172, Toronto, in the second round.

Clever Slugger

A clever slugger, Alex Ward, 202, Toronto, hit Slip a lot but the best engagement but Jack didn't seem to mind. He kept boring in, relentlessly driving Ward against the ropes and scored a knockout towards the end of the third round.



Customers, who paid to see cocky were not disappointed and those who went to see lethal driving were in the right spot. Jerry Smith of Kingston, who were No. 13 on his back, went to hospital with a broken nose in the first of Wawell of North Bay, Ont., drove a right to Smith's midriff in the first round.

Atwell, weighing only 176 pounds didn't have long to wait for a return. In the second round engagements, Fred Burnett, 180, Quebec, knocked him out in the second round. Then, Pal Flanagan knocked Matthews stiff in the third round. It took two rounds for Slip to drop the 205-pounder Quebec strongman.

Martin Linton of Oshawa won most of the hard-luck honors. Linton was struck low by Bill Matich of Brantford, Ont., in a second-round bout and the referee said he disqualified the O'Hara boy had to drop out. Ralph Douglas of Toronto also had to retire from the third round because of an injured hand.

BY RAY COLLETT

The record book shows that George Reinsworth, whose stocky form blocks rubber heading for the Toronto Maple Leaf nets with considerable success, won the George Vezina trophy two years in succession. In 1928-29 and again in 1929-30, the inimitable George grabbed top honors for goalies in the big league. He was with Montreal Canadiens then; in fact, delving deeper into the book, we find that George was with the Flying Frenchmen for a total of seven campaigns before transferring his allegiance to Toronto. His best year, judging by averages was 1929-30, when he let in but one per game of goals scored past him in a 44-game schedule was 0.9.

Though he is generally considered a Kitchener, Ont., product, George was born in Toronto on June 26, 1896. That would make him 38 years old the current season. He stands only five feet, five inches high and tips the beam at around 155 pounds.

Maple Leafs got him from Canadiens in a swap for Lorne Chabot to start the 1932 season. Since George was pro, after an amateur career that finished up in his beloved Kitchener, George has never been out of the goal-season play-off. His record is golf, and there are no better golfers on the Maple Leafs—and few in the league—than the midget net tender.

FIGHT FEUD ENDED—DEMPSEY'S MAN WINS—Jack Dempsey, former Manassa Mauler, and Jack Kearns, his former manager, whose lucrative partnership was broken up by a bitter feud which has lasted 10 years, met in a Chicago ring as their respective jimmy weight "white hopes" met in a main bout. "How ar' yuh, Jack?" boomed Dempsey. "How ar' yuh, Jack?" responded Kearns, grabbing the Manassa's hand and the feud was over. Then the fight went on and Clarence rRed" Burnam, seen (LEFT) with Dempsey, whipped Jimmy "Slade" Smith (RIGHT), who gets manfully advice from Kearns. Neither battler showed anything to indicate a new fistic tornado.

Brighton Takes Winner

In the second game of the evening Brighton raced out their fast-skating Wooler aggregation by the score of 4 to 3 and the boys put on one of the fastest and headline games of the season. H. Lambert of Brighton opened the first period by scoring from centre ice on the face off. The rest of the period was characterized by fast, heavy play. Utrouki of Brighton and Stribburg of Wooler each received penalties. In the second period G. Rutlan of Wooler evened the count when he took a pass from C. Rutlan. Putnam of Wooler and Utrouki of Brighton were put off for tripping and while they were in the penalty box Claude Rutlan of Wooler received a penalty for tripping. Putnam of Wooler put his team in the lead, scoring on a pass from C. Rutlan. Brighton's team were playing four men to Brighton's five. The period ended Wooler 2, Brighton 1.

After three minutes of the third period Thompson of Brighton tied the score up on a pass from Harper. While C. Rutlan of Wooler was in the penalty box Waddling of Brighton put his team out in front. Thompson and Utrouki of Brighton each received a penalty and while they were off, Wooler kept goalie McKinnon in the Brighton nets awfully busy. Harper of Brighton put the finishing touches on the game by scoring their fourth goal. Final score: Brighton 4; Wooler 3. Line-up: Brighton —Goal, D. McKinnon; defence, Wright and Stevenson; wings, Deamoy and Smith; centre, Utrouki; alternates, Harper, Cheer, Thompson, J. McKinnon and Waddling. Wooler—Goal, Bryant; defence, C. Rutlan and G. Stirling and District

Stirling, Feb. 20—On Tuesday afternoon Mr. J. Cook stopped his team and sleigh load of grain in front of Brooks' grinding mill. While he was engaged in unloading the grain the horses were frightened by a passing train whistle and bolted, running down the street as far as D. A. Burbeck's service station, where they ran into a post and came to a stop. It was fortunate they stopped before they reached the business section for the horses are the pride they were travelling, someone would have very likely been injured. No damage to the sleigh or harness was badly damaged.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1936

REFERENDUM ON BEVERAGE ROOM SALE ASKED

Premier Will Consider Temperance Proposal For Provincewide Vote

'You Have Been Very Moderate in Demands', Tells Dr. Cochburn

BLIND PIGS CHARGED

Odette Denies Bootlegging Increases Under Beverage Room Sale

Toronto, Feb. 21 (CP)—Premier Hepburn today told a delegation from the Ontario Temperance Federation he would consider their proposal for a referendum on sale of beer in beverage rooms.

A year ago, he recalled he told a delegation from the organization there would be no referendum but he would be glad to consider the matter with the delegates.

Demands Moderate

"You have been so extremely moderate in your demands this morning that I will give them more consideration than I otherwise would have done," the Premier told the delegation.

Proposal that the referendum came from Dr. John Cockburn of Toronto, who said the Federation had already 170 temperance forces with pep and vim in their organization.

Questioned by the Premier, Dr. Cochburn said if the Province went wet he would not oppose granting of beer sales under government control, like now Ont. Hepburn regarded this as a logical development.

Liquor Commissioner Odette revealed that the Liquor Control Board for the fiscal year ending March 31 would have a surplus of about $4,000,000 to turn over to the Provincial Treasury.

Mr. Odette also took vigorous exception to statements of the delegation that bootlegging had increased because of beer sales.

Rev. A. J. Reid of Toronto, Secretary of the Federation, told of a Northern Ontario town, where 18 did not have a drink before, were 18 blind pigs. In Marmoldale, near Owen Sound, two pool rooms were in operation after establishment of a beverage room there.

"Bootlegging and blind pigs are less than a year ago," Mr. Reid declared, and this brought a confirming nod from Major General V. A. S. Williams, Chief Provincial Police.

"I intend to defend my administration," Mr. Odette said, "and General Williams intends to defend his."

Peter Purser of Burford was a member of the delegation.

Liquor Out of Politics

Dr. Cochburn said two ways to remove liquor from politics, the referendum and Provincial Government in the House without requiring government members to support it, the latter the preferable method. The opposition would be divided also on the issue, the legislation on its merits.

Such proposal was all right in theory, Mr. Hepburn replied, but under British parliamentary procedure when government put forward a measure and it was defeated the government resigned.

The Premier told the delegation the alternative to the proposal was the introduction of law to drive the traffic underground. During the days of the Canadian Temperance Act bootleggers in some cases dominated municipal councils, he said.

Prohibition Not Asked

The delegation, said Dr. Cochburn, did not ask for enactment of prohibition. The government maintained the Liquor Control Board to manage rooms introduced the element of private profit into the situation, Mr. Hepburn referred to a speech made at the Federation convention here last year by H. H. Perry was quoted as charging he found an organ full of whiskey and beer, and the rate took no action when he brought the matter to their attention.

Empty Bottle Only Found

The Premier read a police report that Mr. Perry had not notified them as far as could be ascertained. The matter, however, had been investigated and the only thing found in the organ was an empty beer bottle.

If the government had not inherited the beverage room legislation, the Premier said he would not have put it on the statute books. It was there now, however, "and whether we take a referendum is a matter for me most decide."

"This would not cure the situation, he continued, because the more wet municipality is dried up, the more bootlegging there would be.

Precisely With Wet U. S.

Another factor to be considered was Ontario's proximity to the wet United States. There was unrest in Rural Ontario, said Mr. Porter, who told the Premier he represented that section.

"You're one of the fellows from the back concession," Mr. Hepburn commented.

"Yes," he replied.

A reference to beverage rooms would do a great deal, Mr. Power said, to alleviate this unrest.

Proposed Legislation For Separate Schools To be Discussed

Toronto, Feb. 21 (CP)—Proposed legislation of the Ontario Government to give Separate Schools a greater share of taxes will be discussed by the Executive Council next Tuesday, Premier Hepburn announced today.

The Throne Speech at the opening of the legislative session foreshadowed the proposal to secure equitable distribution of taxes levied for educational purposes.

Mr. Hepburn said also the cabinet would meet tomorrow to review the public accounts committee report to be submitted to the House.

Don't Wave at Plane This Flier Advises

Lemon, who had waved hoofed surprised. He explained there wasn't anyone around there who needed help.

"Always good to be waved at, anyhow" he said.

Law Cement of Civilization Tweedsmuir Tells Lawyers

Law Should Coincide With Development of Society Neither Too Far Ahead or Too Far Behind, Viceroy Says

Toronto, Feb. 21 — (CP) — "Law should be regarded as "an elastic thing which clothes the growing body", Lord Tweedsmuir told the Law Society of Upper Canada today as he became an honorary member of that body.

The Governor-General in the course of his address referred sharply to "these days of superabundant legislation, when the lawyer has actually to clear up the mess that the politician made and defined the duty of lawyers as "not merely to interpret a body of doctrine but to find that interpretation that will come in close touch with contemporary life."

He quoted his old friend Sir Washington", Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, as saying "the life of the law is not logic but experience."

That theme, that garment, must fit exactly. If it is too tight it will split and you will have revolution and lawlessness as we have seen at various times in our history, and if it is too loose it will tend to become a straight-waistcoat. If it is too loose it will trip us up and obstruct our movements. Law, therefore, should not be too far behind nor too far ahead of the growth of the society but should coincide as nearly as may be with that growth.

Law is "one of our chief ties" with the United States, the Governor-General said. "Jeremy Bentham warned the United States to 'shun their ports against the common law as they would against the plague' but the United States did not follow his advice. They made our common law their own law and through a succession of eminent judges, beginning with story and ending with Holmes, they built up it the groundwork of their national life."

Lord Tweedsmuir said "we have to face the eternal tension—that lies in law itself, in their final form by parliaments and congresses—that between the principle of development and the principle of stability."

"Well, a tough job keeps a man young and keeps his mind active," he said. One great question is the link law "with all its imperfections, is the true cement of civilization."

His Own Call To Bar.

Reminiscing, the speaker retirred to his own call to the English Bar 35 years ago, "after having been articled in his father's law final and offered his authorship of a law book on the subject, he left the legal lands of law for the "low levels of journalism" as evidence that "at one time in my life I was really respectable".

COMMUNIST FLAG RAISED IN SPAIN

Martial Law Proclaimed as Eight People Killed

By ALEXANDER H. UHL

(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press)

Madrid, Feb. 21—Martial law spread through Spain today against a revived radical rioting in which at least eight persons were killed, churches and Rightist centres raided and the red flag of communism raised in isolated places.

The new left-republican government of Premier Manuel Azana, which took power after the Leftist victory in Sunday's parliamentary election, took immediate measures to attempt to halt the celebrations, disorders and demonstrations.

One hundred guards, armed with machine guns, were dispatched from the town of Eclapn in the far southwestern province of Badajoz where communism proclaimed a Soviet state and raised their flag.

Martial law was declared among group of demonstrators, displaying the red flag in Alcala de Henares, 20 miles away and one woman was killed there.

Informed sources said a degree of general amnesty for all political prisoners—many of them had since the socialist revolution of October, 1934—probably would be decreed to-morrow and also would help to become effective upon publication in the official Gazette Monday.

21-Year-Old Wife Taken By Sleigh And Car

London, Feb. 21 (CP)—In a little bedroom of a London hospital, Mrs. Glen Delgardia, 21, Argyle Road lay quietly today recuperating today from an emergency appendectomy after a battle against time over "snow-clogged roads from the Huron County farm.

Rushed from her home on Lake Huron shore, first by sleigh to Bayfield, then to Exeter, sixteen miles away, then by railway to London, Mrs. Delgardia underwent the operation night and given a good chance to recover.

Under the supervision of Dr. Jobbs Taylor of Bayfield, the sleigh carried the young woman on a feather tick on the bottom of the sleigh and packed under the robes to Exeter. Dr. Jobbs-Driven by her brother-in-law, Mr. Delgardia. The sleigh battled through mountainous snow drifts and snow temperatures for more than four hours to reach Exeter.

After a one-hour wait, the sick woman was placed on the train, reached from the London terminal by ambulance and has already had been operated on an hour later. For Dr. Taylor it was an hour's break in vigil he kept since Wednesday night.

CONDITIONS FOUND TO BE ASTOUNDING

Investigation of Joliet Prison Now Being Made

Joliet, Ill., Feb. 21 (AP)—Warden Roy Best of the Colorado State Prison, a member of the committee invited to study prison conditions after the slaying of Richard Loeb and a fellow convict here Jan. 26, said today testimony of inmates pictured conditions which were nothing less than astounding."

Among the disclosures reported made by witnesses to investigating committee members were that convicts were locked for large periods in their cells, that money was smuggled in to inmates and was used to corrupt guards, liquor was manufactured and circulated freely, narcotics were obtainable and favored wealthy inmates were permitted to wear clothes and have flannel trousers instead of prison garb.

Will Complete Highway Says Hon. Peter Heenan

Toronto, Feb. 21—(CP)—Opponents of the tram-Canada highway will find it on the statute books as so today the project would be completed, Hon. Peter Heenan declared any "statesman just out of school" or protests from Boards of Trade and other bodies.

Ontario's Minister of Lands and Forests made the statement and announced a defy to Hon. Norman Rogers, Dominion Minister of Labor, who, Mr. Heenan said, recently announced the highway could not be completed because of its cost. Mr. Heenan spoke at the annual dinner of the Ontario Motor League.

"There has been criticism of me for my statements about the transcontinental highway and about Mr. Rogers," said Mr. Heenan.

"I have just received fresh out of school, with a road on which $22,000,000 has been spent and only a few miles needed to link it up, and he says, it won't go ahead. I intend to think it on the engineering and no Boards of Trade or politicians will stop me."

"There's bridges in the north that you wouldn't call trestles," Mr. Heenan declared. "Had the money spent there, there isn't a highway over which you could go. We've a problem to face in those bridges, that you can't cross faster than 15 miles an hour and bucky to get across at that.

Stirling, Feb. 21—Stirling defeated Tweed in Stirling on Wednesday night before an enthusiastic crowd. Although there were six goals in all scored, it was a fast, hard fought game. With an almost airtight defence with Stirling, Robinson and Wallace making brilliant rushes, the game was all that could be desired.

Scolle came back in a fast rush, and taking a pass from Robinson, scored for Stirling. Thompson, in the Tweed nets was kept busy throughout, the entire first period, turning away all shots. Shanks received a penalty for tripping Scolle. Ingram rushed up to goal, beating the rush, and adding the period 2-2 for Stirling.

The play continued fast throughout the final period with Tweed working hard to again get the equaliser. Wallace, who played his best game of the season, broke back from Lesli and with a nice back hand shot he again beat Thompson to make the score 3-2 for Stirling. The game ended 4-3 for Stirling.

County Jail "Neat as a Pin," As House Cleaning is Perpetual

Inmates of Institution Put Elbow Grease to Work

MEN SHOW PRIDE

"Neat as a pin" has literal application in at least one institution in this city as a casual stroll through the corridors of the county jail building will reveal. Paint, scrub brushes and cleaning rags are an important part of the jail equipment, in the opinion of Chief Governor G. H. French, plus a constant application of elbow grease on the part of the inmates.

Of the total jail population of twenty-seven men in the jail at present, a large percentage of the inmates are engaged in daily cleaning, painting and scouring to an extent that would be looked upon as perpetual house cleaning by the tidy housewife.

Throughout the building the old coats of kalcomine that had been applied in layers on the walls and ceilings have been scraped off to the bare surface. Heavy coats of smooth paint have been applied, making a surface which washes and cleans easily. Through the upper cell blocks contrasting coats of orange and black have been applied to the lower section of the walls and cells, while ceilings have been painted a creamy white, with all cracks sealed to avoid the harbouring of vermin. Steel work of the cells is also given a dull black coat.

Each of the cell corridors, formerly of hard wood, split and warped badly in some instances has now been improved with a smooth level surface of cement composition, easy to clean and with all cracks sealed in its mirror-like surface. This improvement has also been applied to the corridors upstairs and downstairs in the building.

In the old cell block where is contained the heating and heating plant for the whole building the same cleanliness is observed. Here, on both sides of the furnace and subterranean chambers have been scraped and whitewashed and new paint applied. The floor of cement is washed daily by the inmate workers who are given responsibility for cleaning and scraping. Sleeping accommodation has also been arranged for the inmates who are not confined to the cells during the night hours.

In the furnace pit a bright fire crackles through the open door of the large heating unit. Coal is piled in four-foot lengths is stacked neatly on either side of the furnace which is kept constantly fed by two firemen on duty day and night and nights. Wood, the only fuel used in the plant was decided upon by the members of Hastings County Council in order to give residents of the northern townships more work in its production.

There is no let up in the strict regimentation of the allotted tasks. Each day some new part of the building undergoes the inspection of cleanliness and of keeping things "clean", comments Governor French. "We have reduced the threat of locking up in the cells to the level. But we can only keep it this way by cleanliness and sanitation and more cleanliness."

POLICE COURT

"What's your address?" asked Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C., of George Degroff after he had pleaded guilty to a charge of the theft of a bottle of rum and was given two weeks in the common jail by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court. "I will be Belleville," replied Degroff, who subsequently revealed his home was in Rochester.

Degroff pleaded guilty to stealing a bottle of milk but Mr. Donnan asked for clemency as the accused was hungry and destitute. At the request Degroff was given the two weeks' sentence in jail, where he will receive medical attention, prior to his release. "I don't have a job on a farm next month and need nourishment," added Degroff as he was removed from the court room.

Ronald Maxwell, Bancroft garageman, pleaded guilty to two charges laid under the R. T. A. by motorcycle Patrolman W. F. Delroy following an accident which occurred on Front Street on Saturday, No. 2 on Wednesday, Maxwell pleaded guilty to reckless driving and a second charge of failing to report an accident. The minimum fine of ten dollars and costs was imposed in both cases, while the suspended sentence of driver's permit was cancelled for one month.

The court amicably settled two domestic cases in which trouble between husband and wife was entered into the matters. A local motorist was warned relative to parking his motor vehicle in front of a driveway, while several other Highway Traffic Act charges were disposed of, all being of a minor nature, such as speeding and failure to display the proper lights after sundown.

POLICE BLOTTER

Violators of the law apparently co-operated thoroughly with the local police department last night as the "arm o the law" played hockey all the arms, no serious offence being reported in local police circles during the past 24 hours. While going over his mail early this morning P.C. Arnott discovered the long arm of the law standing in the front of McGurdy's jewellery store badly damaged. The glass was not shattered, however, but how the window was broken was undetermined. No attempts to enter the store were discovered.

One lone inebriate and seven traffickers compiled the call sheet at the police station last night, the former gratuitously pleading guilty as charged when he appeared in today's police court. The usual fine and costs were assessed.

Charity Carnival at Arena Sponsored by Service Clubs For V.O.N. Proves Success

Hockey Match Was a "Wow" With Contest Declared Draw

QUINTE SKATING CLUB

Members Give Delightful Exhibition of Solo And Group Numbers.

A March gras of fun and merriment, beauty and color thrilled 2,000 spectators at the Belleville Arena last evening on the entire Belleville community proving that while heartedly to make the first Annual Victorian Carnival of Song one carnival an outstanding event of the winter season.

From the opening number presented by the Quinte Skating Club the evening's entertainment advanced with a hilarious burlesque hockey game, speed skating contest and fancy skating and to a kaleidoscope climaxed by the grand march of a fancy dress costume parade that culminated an evening long in the remembered by those in attendance.

The night's programme was the result of a united effort by the community as a whole, with Mrs. T. Kvenia, Robert Hamilton and T. A. Mann service clubs combining in committee and the departments in conjunction with the co-operation of the citizenry as a whole. The decorations of the arena were completed by the Quinte Skating Club, the band of music was provided gratis by the Belleville Municipal Band under the direction of Leader Johnston throughout the band gave a splendid musical programme and materially assisted in the success of the evening.

Skating Club Features

The night's kaleidoscope opened with the active Quinte Skating Club presenting a ten step that set great and was followed by the skaters in numbers in his hands and laughed with Robertson Hilley and Dorothy, Bob Rivenaire McGee and Fox came to the rescue and the Fox Terrier Rivenaire ran high and although no further scoring resulted, the third period saw prospects brighten considerably. Ross Fox pulled a clean-cut shot that found the spectator's goal and the assistance of a nurse and two stretcher bearers were necessary. The argument developed, Referee Pig-Skin Peters being the centre of an attack by Tom Armstrong, the game was abruptly halted. The "village constable" was called into action and arrived on the scene, after a few minutes of strong persuasion by Mrs. Molotova driven by Motorcycle Patrolman Delaney. The "village constable" took Armstrong into custody, saved the dignity of the community and the game was declared "no contest" as hostilities were dispersed with, the feelings of the participants between the contesting team, which was to the credit of Coach Elder Kidd and the spectator Gordian.

Hurdle Right Keys

An added feature of an low jumping by Cecil Cook, who at hundred eight kegs and four large barrels brought round applause. While the comedy acts of his partners, Lightnin' and Thunder gave the audience a real laugh. Charlie rees also added much to the entertainment of the three form of glamorous fun and frivolity. Other features too numerous to mention have been contributed that the Norval Maple is the best tree to cut along city streets and country highways.

The trouble caused by the roots of trees getting under the pavements, house foundations, in sewers, and the branches of trees hanging on the trees proved that the shade tree was a problem which the Board had to deal with annually.

The preserving of the good trees and the beautifying of the city by planting new trees is a matter in which all citizens should be interested and the Board of Parks Commissioners, said Mr. Symons, desire the co-operation of the citizens to make the successful carrying on of the work.

Good Sister Welcomed.

Mr. R. C. Sister, manager of the Belleville branch of the Dominion Bank, was also a guest of the directors, and in acknowledging the welcome extended to him by the president, spoke briefly on the work of the Boy Scouts of which organization he is District Commissioner.

Routine matters were disposed of by the board before adjournment was under way for the holding of the annual meeting of the Association which will be held at a forum meeting.

President E. P. Bernstein presided at the meeting and the following directors were present: Messrs. R. H. Fairfield, W. G. Springer, John A. McIntosh, W. H. Morton and J. R. Boyce.

C. J. Symons Gives Informative Talk to Chamber Members

MANY REPLACEMENTS

Mr. Charles J. Symons, chairman of the Belleville Parks Board, was a guest of the directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce at their regular weekly meeting on Thursday and gave a very interesting and informative talk on the question of the trimming and the replacement of shade trees in Belleville. Much interest, of considerable time, Mr. Symons said, are given to this part of the board's activities, to endeavor to preserve the trees and where it is necessary that certain trees be trimmed, every precaution is taken to treat properly the wounds made by the removal of the limbs. For this purpose a paint of red lead is used, which has been found to be the preparation has been used by the board for a number of years and is economical. Paint of the native is used widely, he said, for the same purpose and is considered satisfactory generally.

Companies Careful.

The Hydro Company and the Bell Telephone Company, he cited, is necessary at times to trim trees and, Mr. Symons stated that the Hydro was the most willing co-operation had always been reported from these companies, evidencing a desire to have the work done carefully and the scars on the trees break properly in order to preserve them.

Many new trees which are dying are noted in the summer' time and removed by the city, Mr. Symons stated and trees is an undertaking which has to be done by persons employed by the city and that they prevent damage to private property, the electric and telephone wires. Consent to remove trees must be obtained from the board and the committee are anxious to cooperate as far as possible with the residents of the city.

Replacements.

In some parts of the city there are trees which are dying and which are not well treed. Where there are too many trees some of them must be removed and each every year the Board sets out trees along streets where they are needed. The present spacing of trees is forty feet in the city, but along the highways the spacing should be seventy-five feet. Mr. Symons stated that after considerable investigation he had been convinced that the Norval Maple is the best tree to set out along city streets and country highways.

The trouble caused by the roots of trees getting under the pavements, house foundations, in sewers, and the branches of trees hanging on the trees proved that the shade tree was a problem which the Board had to deal with annually.

The preserving of the good trees and the beautifying of the city by planting new trees is a matter in which all citizens should be interested and the Board of Parks Commissioners, said Mr. Symons, desire the co-operation of the citizens to make the successful carrying on of the work.

Good Sister Welcomed.

Mr. R. C. Sister, manager of the Belleville branch of the Dominion Bank, was also a guest of the directors, and in acknowledging the welcome extended to him by the president, spoke briefly on the work of the Boy Scouts of which organization he is District Commissioner.

Routine matters were disposed of by the board before adjournment was under way for the holding of the annual meeting of the Association which will be held at a forum meeting.

President E. P. Bernstein presided at the meeting and the following directors were present: Messrs. R. H. Fairfield, W. G. Springer, John A. McIntosh, W. H. Morton and J. R. Boyce.

Obituary

LATE A. E. CALNAN

Picton, Feb. 21.—(Special)—A large concourse of relatives, friends, businessmen and representatives of organizations with which he had been associated, attended the funeral yesterday afternoon of A. E. Calnan, editor of The Picton Gazette, who died on Monday.

Those who carried his mortal remains to their resting place were the men with whom he had worked, the senior members of The Gazette office staff, Leonard Macdonald, Cecil Fraser, Claude Cox, Phillip Dodds, Ira Hodgson and Arthur Macdonald.

Associated as honorary bearers were fellow businessmen, personal associations or his life work, Messrs. D. J. Barker, representing Prince Edward Lodge A.F. & A.M., Crown Attorney Gordon Wallace representing the deceased's association with the magisterial office; O. Clegg Spencer, representing the United Church; R. B. Small, representing the Hospital, Marcus Wellington Ponton, Mr. Calnan's boyhood friend and neighbourhood, where he lived for over forty years; Dr. T. J. Wills, representing the religious shareholders of The Picton Gazette; Mayor J. F. Bird, Deputy Reeve W. D. Love as personal friends of long standing.

Home is Filled

The home on Paul Street was filled for the funeral service. Many friends and relatives from his old home on Cornwall Island were prevented by road conditions from being present to pay a last tribute of respect to one whom they had long valued as a friend.

The service was conducted by his pastor and friend Rev. David Wren. Rev. Mr. Dean, Bible reading and Lesson from the 90th Psalm.

Rev. Wren based his remarks of comfort on the words from Acts 13: 36 which Peter, whilst standing Baldwin had used at the time of the passing of the late King George. "After he had served his own generation by the will of God, he fell asleep and was laid unto his fathers".

Mr. Wren referred to Mr. Calnan as one who had given his life in service for his community. He was a builder until his last few years. He wove himself down in brick and stone and left behind him his never-ceasing energy.

Mr. Calnan was a man, who had opinions of his own and who did not hesitate to express them. The pastor referred to the fearless editorial comments under the heading of "The Editor Growls" in his own paper as works of art which plainly showed the keen mind of the writer. He was a voracious reader and a reader of the finest books. His was a relentless energy and he retained the best of what he read.

Interested in organizations and art he was always pleased to encourage them in his community. He always was interested in doing anything of an aesthetic or cultural nature and public spirited as well as he was able. Mr. Calnan was a man of the strictest integrity, one from the ranks improving his mind in the study of these things by reading and education.

U.E.L. Ancestry

Of United Empire Loyalist ancestry, the late Mr. Calnan was filled with a love and admiration for for the County and for the Empire. "I recall," said Mr. Wren, "a paper which he gave in Kingston, before a large gathering of University men on his subject was the early history of the district, and many were the comments of praise given the scholarly manner in which it was written and read as well as for the manner in which the matter had been compiled Recently, I remember the family, that had left Picton for Toronto, kidnapping three prize chickens and driving back and spending out of San Quentin in order to visit Calnan's old home. He also had participated in the jail-break because he was sentenced for a crime he had not committed. The British government has intervened in behalf of Mackay and efforts have been made to enlist the help of King Rivers and members of parliament in Mackay's cause. However, in such a case, Mackay's friends have been powerless to grant clemency Rivers is now happy reunited with his family.

LATE JAMES RENDER

The funeral of James Xebden, an old resident of this city who died on Thursday last week, residing in Toronto took place from the Tickell & Bywater Funeral Home, 300 Church Street, Thursday afternoon. The service in the chapel and at the Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. R. E. Newman, pastor of Bridge Street United Church, assisted by the Rev. J. D. P. Knox.

The bearers were Messrs. John Hall, Robert K. Burk, William Reid and James Hodgins.

LATE BALDWIN C. RUSSELL

Sherman (Special)—The funeral of the late Baldwin C. Russell was held on Wednesday afternoon from his late residence to St. Andrew's United Church where Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth conducted the service. The pallbearers rendered two hymns selected by the deceased for his funeral, namely "Jesus, Lover of my soul" and "Abide with me." Another favorite hymn "We'll say goodnight and kiss once more, closing up there" was also sung. The pastor spoke on the text "Ye also ready" will you be ready when the call to take Mr. Russell's memory. The funeral then proceeded to Pleasant Cemetery at Mohawk for interment. Despite the heavy roads the cortege reached the cemetery in good time. The pallbearers were W. J. Cottrell, G. R. Hawkins, F. S. Hawkins, H. Yeckle, J. R. Gelan and Thos. Warren.

SCHOOL DRAMA FESTIVAL OPENS

Napanee, Picton and Belleville Collegiate Players Present Program

CRITICISMS OFFERED

E. Sterndale Bennett, Toronto, Acts as Adjudicator of Offerings

The second annual Bay of Quinte Secondary School Drama Festival opened auspiciously in the Collegiate auditorium last evening when plays by Napanee Collegiate Players, Picton Collegiate Players and the Young Theatgians of Belleville Collegiate Institute presented three one act plays which were later discussed by the well known adjudicator, E. Sterndale Bennett of Toronto. The festival continues tonight.

Mr. J. O. Herity acted as chairman and opened the program. At the conclusion of the plays, Mr. Herity introduced to the audience, Mr. Bennett, remarking that he was an illustrious native, born in Canada as that of a statesman and not as a local illustrisent. Mr. Bennett was eminently qualified to discharge the duties of adjudicator. After coming to this country from England he had engaged in dramatic work and had the honor of being chosen adjudicator throughout Canada by the Earl of Bessborough as the first Dominion Drama Festival adjudicator. Mr. Herity explained that the plays of the evening were non competitive.

The plays were: Belleville Players Guild under the direction of Mr. Herbert Bruce, the grandfather, and earned the high praise of the adjudicator. The cast of the play is soon heard so successful a school band.

The plays chosen for last evening's program were "Cinderella Married" by Belleville Players Guild; "Jest Queen in Spain" by Napanee Collegiate Players and "Pierrot's Wife" by Picton Collegiate Players directed by Miss Ethel Roeder and "Tails Up" by Cyril Maude presented by the Young Theatgians directed by Miss Nell Merry.

Mr. Bennett gave a careful, constructive criticism that should be of great benefit to the players and their directors. It was his aim, he said, to find out how he could that those taking part would so regard his work.

"Cinderella Married"

This Play Was a pretty little thing, the adjudicator said. It was a fantasy, very prettily done. Cinderella had a pretty and facile articulation and lack of inflection which only required a little development to emphasis was noted. The lines of the play should be delivered with not sufficient of spontaneity and the light touch. The Prince's part was good but he was too fidgety on his feet, party through the whole play and his performance would not fidget. He lacked dignity and lost the effect through his gestures of leaning when he talked and looking at the audience. He was not sure of his lines, which he was. Arabella presented a stunning appearance and her lines and part were charming. Caroline did not speak quickly enough to be heard, Robin gave a very satisfying performance. His voice was good in relation to the point of monotony and when they varied, as they did so together whereas the lines afforded an easy opportunity to work up. The pace should be quickened. On the whole the direction was good. Mrs. Dyer was excellent in the comedy from his lines in good shape but the audience did not laugh. Mrs. Mitchell acted in the manner of a deed of style in costume lines. Attention should be directed to the fact that the costume plays. Stressful gestures and contrasting moods should be emphasized. The play was a very wordy effort, well worth doing. It was well produced and was a very nice performance. (Program—Belleville Players Guild.

"Jest Queen in Spain"

This play appeared to be excellent comedy at the beginning but after that it seemed to fall flat and acted throughout. The dialog for the most part was unconvincing and was strained over acting. Players were struggling with the dialog for which was also overdone, making it hard to get the meaning of lines. Gestures were lacking. The adjudicator said that over acting, however was a good sign, as one never learns from under acting. A little more imagination and the keeping in mind what the character would probably do and say under the circumstances were needed to make the performance more realistic and more human. There was too much laughter, rather than proper voice control. Miss Dyer was the most excellent line which was splendidly done, quite difference from the rest of her work. The group worked well together and their over acting was an encouraging rather than a discouraging sign. Makeup needs to have an extremely large amount of practice before it comes easily.

This show, as a fantastic study opened with too smooth a pitch. Characters were not established when the older Mr. Harlow entered, breaking the ice. The opening scene of Mr. Bennett congratulating the group on having made some of the lines funnier and the point of the sarcasm cab. The costumes were a splendid. A door on different levels would help the stage setting. The gestures of the actors should be more emphatic, as their backs shake. The adjudicator commended the actors upon their memory and their ability to "keep it—and it was a good thing not too take the lines seriously. Thus the setting failed to himself go in a fantasy, the actors should try to follow him. (Young Theatgians directed by Miss Merry)

FORCED CONFESSIONS

Those who read the story of the setting aside of the death penalty on three Montenegrin negroes convicted of the murder of a white planter, by the U. S. Supreme Court on the grounds that the confessions of the men were secured by torture administered to them, according to evidence adduced at the appeal, a deputy sheriff and two officers of the law had given such a demonstration of brutality by Montenegrin standards as to be unbelievable when sworn to. It is no wonder that Chief Justice Hughes commented "The rack and the torture chamber are not to be substituted for the witness-stand"; and also "It is difficult to conceive of methods more revolting to the sense of justice than those taken to procure the confessions." Testimony had been given that the confessions were obtained by hanging one of the negroes from a tree in the presence of a large number of white men who began to accuse the man of the crime of killing a planter. Onabid Carmichael he was hanged by a rope to a limb of a tree, cut down, hanged again, let down a second time, and still protesting his innocence was tied to a tree and whipped and still denying was released to go home in agony. Next day or so the deputy arrested the man for murder and again whipped the man on the way along a road through the adjoining state, to the jail, declaring he would continue the whippings until the man confessed. The negro then confessed. Two others were arrested and whipped while naked with a rubber strap with buckles on it which cut their flesh. They confessed in pain and made whatever statements suited into the supposed story of the murder. These charges were not questioned or denied at the appeal.

The court found that there was not sufficient evidence to show that alleged confessions and decided that the men if prosecution were opened would have the right to a new trial. The state might not obtain an advantage by the use of coercive tions under mob domination, said the Chief Justice.

Enthusiastic as officers ought to be, they have no right to take such procedure or even procedure more mild. The law will protect a suspected man from brutal treatment and forced confessions in any civilized country.

What is to be done with these officers is of course not known. But all will feel that men who would so forget their office and their humanity as to take the influence of a mob as to ill-treat suspects as they are said to have done, should be tried and given, if found guilty, the severest penalty of the law. Only their human instincts would not have prevented them from being so brutal seems difficult to understand except on the basis of rascality in a state where race feeling runs high.

The enthusiasm and zeal of the deputy and the officers ran high but were perverted. They have destroyed the faith of many in the same fair brutality which will follow them to the end of their lives.

NEW ELECTRICAL DEVICES

The earth four thousand feet down may be surveyed with electric currents, so that the strata is completely mapped for that distance. It is the result of years of work applied by F. J. Hoskyn, and E. S. Wilson of International Geophysics, Inc. The method has been applied extensively in California in the past eighteen months. By special apparatus electrical currents are sent through the ground to determine the variations in resistivity which permit such mappings. The cost of the electrical method is usually comparable with seismic work.

Another new device is to be explained at New York—a solar navigator, by which an airplane can be kept within one-quarter degree of a perfectly straight line. This is believed to be of aid in the use of the airplane for mapping mineralized areas, members of the staff of Fairchild Aerial Surveys announced. It consists of a drift indicator suspended from a sun compass in the ceiling of the airplane, registering on the instrument panel.

THEY'RE GOING BACK TO FIRST PRINCIPLES IN THE LAND OF UNCLE SAM—drinking their beer from cans. Used to be (R.I.P.) that the height of hospitality when a visitor dropped in was to "rush the growler", which, being interpreted for the benefit of those who by an accident of birth missed the Niagara Peninsula, consisted of sending out a tin can or a pitcher and a dime to the nearest pub and having it filled with rich and foaming lager beer, the name being speedily condensed. Beer also went with meals in most families not favored with champagne incomes. Now the folks over there are drinking beer and ale from cans, only the beer is sealed in the cans at the brewery. Hence bottles are going out and cans are coming in.

THERE'S ONE GOOD THING ABOUT THIS CONTINUED COLD WEATHER and plenitude of snow, it affords a splendid topic of conversation for those without that "gift of the gab" which keeps the world a-movin'. There are all kinds of angles for endless conversation in the present cold weather and the long folks faces more exercise than for a long time past—since the earthquake, or the night of the "Big Wind", or other phenomena loosened tongues ordinarily tied. Why, you know, it's an ill wind that blows nobody good, for when folks ordinary slow of speech, get such a topic as bad weather to handle, they seem to just raises them right up to the front line of the Hot Stove League of loquacious citizens who can remember way back when—.

FOLKS WHO COME FROM MISSOURI HAVE TO BE SHOWN, according to legend but folks in various parts of Ontario of late have had to be shown on account of obliteration of the highways through an excess of snow. Hatfield, population 200, whose woes have already been ventilated in this column, is imprisoned and within visible sight of freezing and starvation, has been relieved. Five horse-drawn sleighs arrived in Hatfield with supplies of kerosene and provisions in that beleaguered community. In the event of the sleighs failing to get through arrangements were under way for supplies to be sent in by planes. Just as soon as the snow plight became public through the newspapers plans were started to lift the siege—so Hatfield's happy inmates could get out and do their chores once again, and the old stand with a fust class stock of groceries, provisions, dry goods, wet goods, hardware, paints, oils, kerosene, gasoline, cold cream and bicycles, etc. P.S.—Plenty etceteras.

COULDN'T READ OR WRITE BUT AMASSED A FORTUNE OF FIFTEEN MILLION dollars! Sounds like Horatio Alger Rags to Riches Series, but it's true. Alexander Pantages started in business with a chain of theatres including one on Yonge Street, Toronto, was found dead in bed at Los Angeles, aged 72. He never learned to read or write, but kept his head on figures and his fortune has been variously estimated at from $15,000,000 to $50,000,000. Pantage sold his string of theatres to Famous Players for $7,000,000 cash, but since has spent millions in clashes with the law. He was tried on a criminal charge preferred by a seventeen-year-old girl and after two years in the courts was acquitted. His wife was charged with second degree murder after her automobile had struck and killed a Japanese gardener. This case was finally settled for $90,000, after she had been convicted, and she was saved from jail. When he died Pantages owned but one theatre, the Pantages in Los Angeles, and left it to Aimee Rodcap. He was born on an island off the mainland of Greece, early in life shipped as a cabin boy and visited many ports, worked in Cairo, Egypt, for a time, and finally landed in Portland, Oregon, where he operated a bootblack stand. He joined the Klondike rush of 1899 and was grub staked by "Klondike Kate", a well known character, to start a vaudeville show in Dawson City, and from then on made money in handfuls.

The doubling of the dog tax seems to be about the most unpopular thing the Belleville City Council ever did. Nearly every dog owner in the city is growling about it. The tax is now $2.00 for male dogs and $4.00 for female dogs.

One dog owner says that after what the aldermen have done in increasing the dog tax, no aldermen need try to borrow his dogs to go hunting.

A public meeting was held in the council chamber as the city hall yesterday afternoon the object being to take steps to put forward the claims of this city to one of the new Normal Schools which may be established by the Whitney Government. PREMIER CLEARS GUNNING'S NAME IN FRAUD CHARGE

Aftermath of Blackmail Heard in House Debate

MACAULAY FIERY

Says Curse of Patronage Never as Heavy as It Is Today

Toronto, Feb. 21 (CP)—Committee discussion of the new Ontario income tax bill was scheduled for resumption in the provincial legislature today prior to adjournment for the week-end. The bill received second reading Wednesday night after which committee consideration began.

Debate on the Throne Speech occupied the legislature yesterday but there was no night session. Hon. Peter Macaulay (Cons., York South) in the course of a general attack on the administration dealt particularly with charges made by Hon. Henry Walker of St. Thomas against highway administration.

Mr. Macaulay charged Walker sentenced in Toronto last week on attempted extortion, "concocted" the charges with Premier Hepburn's assistance but the premier denied that accusation and described Walker as a "blackguard".

After Mr. Macaulay's address, T. H. Lewis (Lib., Lincoln) made his contribution to the debate and concluded with favorable mention of the speech from the throne. Only Separate Schools receiving a greater share of corporation taxes. He was the first Protestant member to bring up the subject.

The Walker charges regarding a highway foreman's account, pending a royal commission public investigation, were made up first, said Mr. Macaulay, by Walker and Vincent Foley, "campaign manager for the Premier and London free-lance in penitentiary". Brief investigation by the Premier would have shown these were not true, he said.

Clara Gemaling's Name.

During the debate, Mr. Hepburn declared he wished to clear the name of James R. Gunning, mentioned in the Walker charge "of any charge of fraud that may be made, or has been against him by his exchequer Walker."

Mr. Macaulay said he accepted Premier Hepburn's statement. Walker's name was not in the Belleville list these Macaulay should have been made known. Letters to the Editor

Editor, The Ontario Intelligencer,
And to whom it may concern,—
Belleville, February 21st., 1936.

Dear Sirs:

I own property in the city' I have to rent the property as my work is in Ingersoll and I am not able to enjoy the same I am deprived of my conveniences and privileges. The above mentioned property was left me by my father and is having a home for myself and family. It represents many years of hard work and the rentals I have received from the property during the last few years have given little more than settle the taxes and insurance. Practically nothing has remained as repairs upon the capital investment. I am solidly behind Mayor Bill and his members of Council in the exercise of a more reasonable economic policy that will make it unnecessary to sell our "birthright" as a prosperous buyer.

A Tax-Payer.

Cooperation and Appreciation

Belleville, Feb. 20th., 1936.

The Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer,
Dear Sir:

Would like to express a few facts for the letter writer to your paper, who signs himself or herself "Does Who Walks". To start of I may say we have with us the provincial constable, who has to do some satisfies and for this person's information, said will be satisfied, but such is any one calling for it.

The road inspector is expected to scatter it for them.

As far as the complaint to the road superintendent, I may say it also have lived in Belleville for quite a few years and I must say at this time that the officials who are responsible for the roads the streets have been cleared are to be congratulated, especially a winter like this.

Yours truly,
"Another Walker who Helps the Snow."

Tweed Goodwill Bowlers enter a vote on the fourth and final week with no depreas in interest and enthusiasm on the part of the contestants even where supporters are exerting every effort in behalf. The contest comes to a close on Saturday next and the prizes will be presented to the successful contestants at the auditorium on Tuesday, February 25th. Wednesday was the last previous day but the heavy roads kept many from the outside from entering in to town to register their votes. Turcotte's livery stable was the busiest place in town as the contestants brought in their loads of junk.

The standing of the contestants to begin the final week was as follow: Mrs. Francis Drake 1,000; Chas. Chailly, Mrs. Gerald Ira, Davidson, Rose Rivers, Monica Murphy, Doris Godson, Mrs. Ernest Hawbolt, Ernie Marsh, Asa Thompson, Olive LaBarge, Mrs. A. Montgomery, Jas. Gelbonzia, Margaret Hallock, Ruth Sirois, Mabel Allore, Frank Phillips, Mrs. M. Lucas, Rena Long, Mrs. M. Young, Kenneth Parks, Mrs. F. Sherry, Keith Johnson, Stanley Rodgers, Zella Smith, Mrs. F. Cournoyea, Gordon Woodcox, Elaine Maddaker, Mrs. D. Fraser, Mabel Andrews, Mrs. J. Frue, Burl Hoyck, Ken Cournoyea, Donald Deline, Harmon Simmons, Verna Foster.

Despite the sub zero temperature there was a very good turnout at the arena on Tuesday evening for the ice carnival sponsored by the local committee. The costumes of the contestants were most attractive and made a dazzling display as the skaters glided around the ice. Some contestants represented characters of the by gone days. Leslie Orford as the "Jasmine Girl" was one of the most attractive. Ryan Gerald in a costume of a bell century ago. Keith Wilson as Charlie Chaplin, his cane and moustache and Mrs. Earl Graham with her bob-shaker and comics caused both three runds of applause with their impromptu performances. Ned Holding stood was there in person. George and Martha Washington were well presented by Barbara Barnett and Ruth Foster. Two girls were cleverly costumed as "Nurse Cavell" suffragist graduates', Dr. Dafoe, Nurse Dafoes and the famous Dionne quintuplets. Dutch girls and boys and clowns all added to the gaiety of the judges' duties more difficult.

The prizes were donated by interested merchants. The canteen was a busy place and the supply of hot dogs and coffee was soon exhausted. Sandwiches and cookies were donated by Arbor's bakery, Bailey's meat market, A. J. Maynes, Dominion Store and Geo. Clark.

The following were the prize winners: Best dressed lady: Isobel Silk, donated by Bagwell's drug store.

SKULL FRACTURE TO BOXER FEARED

F. Matthews of Quebec in Serious Condition in Hospital

Toronto, Feb. 20 — (CP) — F. Matthews of Iron Field, Que., was in serious condition at St. Michael's Hospital today following a beating he got at the hands of Pat Flanagan, London, Ont., in last night's Canadian "White Hope" boxing tournament. Five doctors worked over Matthews during the night. He was feared he had a fractured skull.

Matthews, whose real name was said to be Maisonyn, was knocked out by Flanagan after 50 seconds of the first round.

Matthews, an awkward, clumsy fighter, weighing 200 pounds, won his first match, when drawn against Alex Rennie of Three Rivers, who showed little or no ability as a fighter. In his next appearance Matthews scored a knockout over Abe Atwell of North Bay, in the second round.

Flanagan, who reached the semi-finals, made quick work of Matthews. After two fast clouts to the head Matthews went down and took a count of nine. He was scarcely up when, the clever Londoner hooked a sharp left to the head and Matthews tumbled to the canvas.

He was counted out and carried to his corner. After several minutes he failed to revive and was carried from the ring to the dressing room.

Two other fighters in the tournament required hospital treatment, Harry Smith of Kingston, suffered a fractured jaw when knocked out by Abe Atwell. The fourth Bay boy was out after 1 minute and 23 seconds fighting in the first round.

Marvin Liston, Oshawa, was injured when floored by Bill Mallon, Brantford, but was released from the hospital today.

PROTESTS TO KING CAN'T SEE SON

G. A. Boynton Alleges London Constable Will Force Him to Halt His Visits

(By George Hambleton)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
London, Feb. 20—(CP)—(Delay)—G. A. Boynton, formerly of St. Thomas, Ontario, has written a petition of protest to the King' alleging that the London County Council officials are preventing him from seeing his son.

He said he has been forbidden by the police to see his three-year-old son whom the Council compulsorily adopted.

"I allowed Toronto to go to the London County Council Home at Ashford, Middlesex, because my wife was dying," said Mr. Boynton. "I could not look after him. There was no money coming in the home and after the death of the boy's mother the L.C.C. decided to adopt him under powers they have by reason of the Poor Law Act. I was told I never would see him again."

MARTINI AMAZED BY FREEDOM OF AMERICAN GIRL

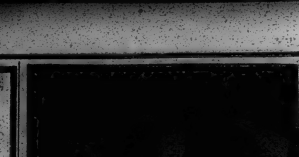
Noted Tenor Denounces Cold Weather, Trains, Brides With Careers :

Ottawa, Feb. 21 (CP)—One of the screen's great lovers admitted today he was far too busy even to think about love. Nino Martini, interviewed in Ottawa, was too occupied discussing the cold weather, train journeys and his numerous engagements to wax romantic or poetical, at night after a performance of Verona, his home town.

This tall man he appears on the screen, slender and rather delicate in appearance, is featured with his hands and arms. He is not a "sissy" of the "effete east" variety. Between screen and stage contracts, he found himself involved in "too much love affair."

As for a wife, Mr. Martini is a fatalist. "When I know I'm prepared to, and but went on to say he certainly did not approve of marriage as practiced on the screen. "The marriage is like this"—he snapped his fingers—"Dyvorce like that."

Then he dwelt at some length on the problem of girls who marry and go on working. "It is crazy," he said. "They go to work after breakfast, both of them, and then they come home tired at night. When I marry I will be the one to earn the living. My wife will stay at home."



He spoke with some amusement of the girls on the stage and screen. "I like to who do as they choose, go where they want. Then their lovers can come out any where they are. In Italy all that is different. A girl should be looked after."

M. Samuel Bowers, Tweed Celebrates 95 Birthday Feb. 22

Pioneer of Tweed District Recalls Events of Early Days

ENJOYS GOOD HEALTH

Was Once Treed by Wolves When Working in Lumber Camp

Mr. Samuel Bowers, "grand old man" of Tweed, will celebrate his 95th birthday on February 22nd. He was born on the fourth concession of Thurlow in 1841, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Britain Bowers, and remained two years later to the fourth concession of Hungerford, on the farm of about nine miles from Tweed. At that time Hungerford township was primeval forest, covered with magnificent oaks, maples and beeches. The pioneer father broke a clearing and erected a small log house for his family; the only other house in the district belonging to the grandfather. Here the boy, Samuel, lived and grew to manhood. In 1908, he purchased a farm nearby known as the Badgley farm and has lived until he retired to Tweed in 1930.

Mr. Bowers, who possesses a keen intellect and a marvellous memory, retains vivid recollections of those early pioneer days. To clear the land for planting it was necessary to burn it on account of the magnificent logs which today would mean a fortune to the lumberman. Possessing an important source of income, was made from burning these logs. It was disposed of in Belleville twenty-two miles away.

Mr. Bowers at first unknown in the district. Ones were employed in the early days of the farm. They were hitched to home-made sleighs which were used in both summer and winter about the farm.

First Trip to Belleville

"My first trip to Belleville was made in 1862", said Mr. Bowers, "and I remember it well. I was 21 years of age. Two days were required to make the round trip over a roadway of road behind a yoke of oxen.

"Boys, dear boys, in the early days were plentiful in those days, and could be seen almost any time. Sometimes as many as 5 or 6 to a sleigh, to the potato patch to dig potatoes. In the dusk I say what looked to be a black steer. It turned out to be a huge bear which I shot on my homeward trip. As I approached, I wasn't long in hearing a swift retreat."

Treed in the Early Days

When Mr. Bowers first visited Tweed more than eighty years ago there were two stores, a saw and grist mill, a blacksmith shop, a hotel on the hill at the corner of Main and Bridge in the village and the town hall where Mr. W. H. Crosby's store now stands. There were only two houses on South Victoria street up to the village limits of Tweed.

A trip to Tweed in those days was a real opportunity to drink water reputed to stone by on-lookers. Interested by host serious Shoot Lake in which Mr. Bowers lived in the hill to be ground into flour which was taken to Tweed by the steam mill.

Used Tobacco at Early Age

An interesting story told by Mr. Bowers is a neighbor who first brought a "pouch in Belleville and returned to the farm. Mr. Bowers was twenty years old at the time. Mr. Bowers concluded that he has used tobacco since he was two years of age, receiving from his father a piece of twist to chew. Mr. Bowers was then introduced through the medium of a pipe, which his father was making potash in smoke his father's pipe.

Mr. Bowers spent several years in the lumber shanty with Flint and Holton. He was but 19 years of age when he went to the shanty on Partridge Creek northwest of Denbigh.

Treed by Wolves

Of this first winter he has very clear recollections suddenly stamped upon his mind, because of a thrilling encounter with wolves. Wolves were very plentiful and the camp boarded in the dozens on the lake and rivers near the camp. The young lad had been sent to the camp foreman to skid logs on the creek, which they hauled in by the teamsters. The sun had set long before the last team arrived with its load of logs, evidenced by the approach of darkness the wolves became closer and closer until the badly frightened young lumberman was forced to climb a tree to escape them. In due time the tardy teamster drove up, and the wolves, frightened by the noise, hauled in made off. The other shanty men laughed in derision, when told of the incident but their laughter was changed to fear when they hauled in by the teamsters. Worked for Baldwin's

Several years were also spent in the lumber camps belonging to the Baldwin Lumber Co. The spring of the year brought the added dangers and thrills of river driving and Mr. Bowers' grandsons have heard from drowning while driving logs from Loon Lake to Belleville. He was the last well-known Billie Flint was manager. Seven years ago Mr. Bowers' wife died. All have passed on except Mr. Bowers.

REDFERN RESCUE BRANDED AS HOAX

Georgetown, British Guiana, Feb. 21 (CP)—An elaborate yarn that Rev. Dr. Redfern was awaiting relief when crashed in the Brazilian jungle eight years ago and had been found alive, was not today with Bishop Jarrow.

Alfred Harrad, who described himself as an employee of the International Boundary Commission, told a detailed story yesterday he and Dr. Redfern, American author in charge of an expedition, starved for Redfern, had found the missing man. The Three Tumpa Mountains, latin, jealously guarded by savages who revered him as a "white god" fallen from the skies."

A few hours after the story appeared in two Guianian newspapers William Smith, R.A.F., said:

Harrad had told of talking to Redfern and declared the man had married an Indian woman and had a son. Redfern's wife and widow—lives in the United States.

Williams said Harrad was not even with the expedition.

Third Level Golconda Mines — Third Gold Mines continues to heartening results from Long Lac operations. A new drift, bearing high grade ore, was driven from the main shaft at a point 775 ft. south of the shaft. Average of samples across a face 35 ft. long in the drift showed a value of $23.40. No drifting has yet been done to the north of the shaft. Presence and better correlation with surface drill holes is indicated. On the 700 level, a crosscut to the east has been advanced for a distance of 90 ft., and has failed to expose the full vein width. The average of all samples, including those from shallow levels, is $11.91. The drift averaged $12. Average vein width for the distance exposed to date is 19 ft. Last word from the mine was to the effect that the face was still looking good, indicating continuance of the ore.

Wayside — Following a dispatch from the West—"Milling resumed at Wayside with a nine head of water built up behind the dam. Mill will run 24 hour shut-down, whether there will be another interruption depends on the weather. The temperature is 17 to 22 degrees below zero.

General Patricia — The annual report of General Patricia is in the course of preparation and will shortly be ready to be mailed to shareholders in the course of the next two weeks. It is estimated at that the ore reserves as at December 31st, 1935 the mine had an ore reserve tonnage of 377,000 from the treatment of 25,182 tons of ore. Metal recoveries amounted to about $22 per ton. The reason for the report will, of course, be the results of underground development and the large increase in positive as well as in indicated ore reserves.

Beans are very scarce around the Street at the present time and the average trader is looking forward to a continuation of the present recovery. It is opportune at this time to mention that no bull market continues without any interruptions. Setbacks should be anticipated from time to time, but no recession should be evinced when they do occur.

New York brokers expect heavier trading to develop in the near future, and some believe that 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 share days will be quite frequently before the end of the year. In view of the current activity in the face of still unfavorable fundamentals, it takes no flight of the imagination to figure what sort of a volume Wall Street would be experiencing if margin rules now were the same as they were before the SEC—statisticians that the volume would be nearly double present totals.

A large number of Canadian investors and traders have been tied up in Brazilian Traction for many years. The rise in the stock has been a long way in coming, but a considerable amount of "frozen" cash and should the advance continue it would act as a decided stimulus to the market as a whole. The possibility of a dividend on the stock is fairly bright and ardent bulls on the security feel that the issue will, in time, prove a reclame of the Canadian markets. The stock enjoys a wide following in this country as well as in London and New York.

The Position of the Market

Commenting on the position of the Market, Financial Service says: In their Mid-Week Review say: Dulness and lack of enthusiasm is a reassuring absence of speculation. Brokers' loans are negligible in relation to the general speculation, by a reaction from this point would bring out scale orders to support stocks. A flood of forced sales, therefore, can not be expected. In a few individual issues, however the technical position is not so strong. During the past month considerable liquidation has been noticed in stocks which formerly had been relatively inactive. Many have been sold on account of the body of scale orders. Irregularities in such holders and cause sharp dips in quotations. As a result the market may look a bit "sick" in appearance as it readjusts itself.

Nevertheless basically, the demand for stocks gives strong evidence of dominating the situation for some time to come. As to the near market, there is a solid foundation of investment demand existing. Unless there is to be a drastic change in the outlook for business, buying force will exert a tremendous upward pull on the limited number of good stocks that will be constantly available.

While such an analysis of the position of our stock markets is highly encouraging, and while many individuals will cheer on the basis of normal earnings, we feel that specific caution is in order now and that every holder of stocks should be prepared for a setback."

Fourth Quarter Report of "Dicks"

Awaited With Interest

The forthcoming report on earnings for the fourth quarter of the International Nickel Company of Canada Limited is awaited with interest the Financial Atlantic as well as in Canada and the United States. In 1935 the Canadian Nickel will be favourable and that the financial statement for the year 1935 will reveal the highest earnings in Nickel's history.

The outlook for the past—what of the future? Nickel shares have responded to the improvement in the metal markets and the position of copper had year. Financial Service understands that production of the red metal is now running at an annual rate of 200,000,000 pounds. Assuming the latter rate to be maintained for the remainder of the year, an advance of one cent a pound in copper would mean an increase in earnings of about 17 cents a share without extra expenses. Nickel is probably also around $1.70 a share for 1935. So the stock is now selling around 20 times estimated earnings for last year. It is not visionary to suggest $2.50 per share for 1936 and $3 per share for 1937 as about an average such an estimate. When experts are talking of $4 per share for 1936 and $6 on the market, it should not stop short of the latter figure. Financial Service is also of the opinion that the company earnings are to be increased substantially when the fire reserves are released. All which means that Nickel will continue to be a favourite with the average industrial because of the above mentioned situation.

Metal recoveries amounted to about $22 per ton. The reason for the report will, of course, be the results of underground development and the large increase in positive as well as in indicated ore reserves.

Beans are very scarce around the Street at the present time and the average trader is looking forward to a continuation of the present recovery. It is opportune at this time to mention that no bull market continues without any interruptions. Setbacks should be anticipated from time to time, but no recession should be evinced when they do occur.

New York brokers expect heavier trading to develop in the near future, and some believe that 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 share days will be quite frequently before the end of the year. In view of the current activity in the face of still unfavorable fundamentals, it takes no flight of the imagination to figure what sort of a volume Wall Street would be experiencing if margin rules now were the same as they were before the SEC—statisticians that the volume would be nearly double present totals.

A large number of Canadian investors and traders have been tied up in Brazilian Traction for many years. The rise in the stock has been a long way in coming, but a considerable amount of "frozen" cash and should the advance continue it would act as a decided stimulus to the market as a whole. The possibility of a dividend on the stock is fairly bright and ardent bulls on the security feel that the issue will, in time, prove a reclame of the Canadian markets. The stock enjoys a wide following in this country as well as in London and New York.

The Position of the Market

Commenting on the position of the Market, Financial Service says: In their Mid-Week Review say: Dulness and lack of enthusiasm is a reassuring absence of speculation. Brokers' loans are negligible in relation to the general speculation, by a reaction from this point would bring out scale orders to support stocks. A flood of forced sales, therefore, can not be expected. In a few individual issues, however the technical position is not so strong. During the past month considerable liquidation has been noticed in stocks which formerly had been relatively inactive. Many have been sold on account of the body of scale orders. Irregularities in such holders and cause sharp dips in quotations. As a result the market may look a bit "sick" in appearance as it readjusts itself.

Nevertheless basically, the demand for stocks gives strong evidence of dominating the situation for some time to come. As to the near market, there is a solid foundation of investment demand existing. Unless there is to be a drastic change in the outlook for business, buying force will exert a tremendous upward pull on the limited number of good stocks that will be constantly available.

While such an analysis of the position of our stock markets is highly encouraging, and while many individuals will cheer on the basis of normal earnings, we feel that specific caution is in order now and that every holder of stocks should be prepared for a setback."

CHISHOLM'S RINK STILL UNBEATEN IN ELEVEN GAMES

Favorite Quartette Has Chance of Going Through Spiel Undefeated

TANKARD STARTS

Successful Spiel Is Rapidly Drawing To a Close

Toronto, Feb. 21.—(CP)—Veteran curlers day into record books today in an effort to conquer the sensational 11-game winning streak of the veteran Eddie Chisholm's Fort Rouge Curling Club rink with other successful wins registered in nine years of Ontario curling hospital history. Although no rink has ever swept through the 'spiel undefeated, Chisholm's crew were given a slight chance of doing just that and carrying off three more trophies in the grand campaign started.

Should the rink—composed of Skip Chisholm, Joe Lewis, Gordon Davis and Vic Sharp, Strath Allan, Toronto, Argyle editor—be successful their reward would be the Royal York Trophy the Birks-Mappin Trophy and, the Sutherland Trophy besides the praise of Canada's followers of "The Roarin' Game".

The veterans four showed they were everything it takes by smashing four successive matches yesterday, nine of their day's total of ten ends, with the first game starting at nine o'clock in the morning and the last ending at midnight. The final score was the hardest of the day and Chisholm was forced to get set to 9-6 win before winning 9-7 from W. H. Weller's Hamilton Thistles, a weakening Trophy quarter-finalist.

Defeat Kingston Rink

In a third round affair earlier Chisholm's men coated R. Green's Toronto High Parkers 14-12. They had previously trimmed W. S. Macdonald's Midland foursome 14-11 in a refreshing third round match. The other rinks in Birks party with the 9-11 decision over Mayor George Edmison's Kingston crew, Victory advanced them into the Birks semi-finals.

Chisholm's high-flying quartet, however, will not compete in the Granite Silver Tankard which starts today with 22 rinks entered for Tankard will produce Ontario's entry in the Macdonald Brier Trophy emblematic of Dominion curling supremacy which will be held here early next month. Jack Gordon Campbell's Hamilton Thistle rink captured the Trophy last year, when they represented the province. They are entered again this season.

Two other rinks started yesterday undefeated, but dropped games in early play. Dr. F. W. Morrow's Hamilton Thistles dropped before Blackwood's Midlanders 14-8 in the second round Birks match while Chisholm's Granite's 6, S. Graham and his rink were edged out 11-10 by W. H. Weller's Hamilton Thistle rink.

In Semi-Finals

Late matches last night saw Percy Hall's Kitchener rink advance to the semi-finals of the Sutherland Trophy with a 16-10 win over Stewart Cruikshank's Toronto. Dr. G. Debrieth's Galt rink, almost lastminute entries in the tournament, moved into the Royal York quarter-finals with a 13-11 win over Dr. Morrow's Hamilton Thistles.

Cecil Smith's Hamilton Victoria and H. D. Pulleyblank's Toronto Strathcona will meet in the Seagram Trophy final tentatively scheduled for today. The Victorias eliminated W. G. Keller's Midland rink last night 12-8, while Strathcona trounced T. G. Bishop's Kingston Prior his same score.

Final match in the Canada Dry competition has also been set tentatively for today along with the Ontario Tankard, Governor General's Cup, Seagram Trophy and The Hall and Empire Trophy.

Magedomas Suffer 3rd Defeat of Season

OTTAWA, Feb. 21.—(CP)—Brockville Magedomas suffered their third defeat of the season last night, when a scrappy Emerald team came from behind to subdue them 5-4 in an Ottawa Senior City Hockey League clash. In the second game of the double bill Hovey's Canadian Air Force routed Rideaus 7-3.

Emerald with 18 points now still three behind the second-place flyers and Rideaus, with 15 points, have a return game on Saturday, that's chances for overtaking the A.F. for the third-place play-off position are slim.

League Secretary Cecil Duncan has already arranged the semi-finals to take place next Saturday between Rideaus and Air Force on the assumption that Hamrock are out of the running, with Brockville in third position unless however, Cecil Abel, captain of Hamrock, will have to be thrown out and further suspended games played.

How to Bowl—No. 9

KNOCKING OFF THOSE SPARES

By MRS. FLORETTA D. McCUTCHEON

WORLD CHAMPION WOMAN BOWLER

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the ninth in a series of ten lessons on bowling, written especially for Central Press Canadian by Mrs. Floretta D. McCutcheon, woman champion bowler and, internationally known bowling instructor.

The bowler has ten frames or innings, in each game. In each frame he is allowed two balls, if he needs them. If he gets all ten pins with the first ball he has a strike and doesn't need the second ball. But if he fails to knock down all the pins with the first ball, put have second ball to knock the pins that remain standing. If he succeeds in clearing them all with the second ball, he has a spare.

Now, your scores take care of themselves. When you get all ten pins with the first ball, you have nothing to worry about until the next frame. Then you must begin to make spares if you are going to roll good scores.

Courses

If you know where to put the ball on the alley in the right place for the spare you are bowling for. It's a big help. If you have left any of the six pins in the centre of the alley, that is, any of the 1, 2, 3, 5, 8, 9 pins, roll your second or spare ball, just as you did the first ball, so it would be a strike if all the pins were up. If you do this, you will pick up all the pins, whether singly or in different combinations.

If you have two pins left on the left corner, that is the 4, 9 pins, move to the right corner of the foul line, starting from a point directly in line with it on the approach. Draw an imaginary line from these pins to your starting point, point your thumb along the start of this line, follow through, and you find you make that spare easily.

If you have left the two pins on the right-hand corner, that is, the 6, 10 pins, it is not advisable to roll for the spare from the left-hand corner. Learn to make them from the centre of the foul line, or a little left of the centre. Then you have only to bowl straight for a return on which the balls roll back from the pin end of the alley) at your right or left.

And you have the advantage of hitting the 10 pin head on, or to his left. Rolling across the alley you have the additional chance of a hit that the width of the pin gives you.

One For the Book

In Seattle, Wash., a handsome big girl, an employee of a large department store, was in my class. She was rolling a light cork composition ball, in one of her first games. She got the 7, 10 leave, the most difficult two corner pins, the most difficult leave in bowling.

She rolled for the 10 pin, hit it very thin on the left, and it started spinning. It spun the width of the alley and in its final gyrations knocked down the 7 pin for the spare.

"That was unusual, wasn't it?" she asked me.

Unusual? It was practically phenomenal.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

High in hopes of victory and continuing into the third round of the intermediate O.H.A. play-downs the Belleville "Bedgen" left for Campbellford late this afternoon. The Thomasites enjoy a five goal lead to take into the second game at Campbellford tonight and barring accidents should increase this margin before tonight's game is over. Albert "Army" Armstrong of Oshawa was named by the O.H.A. as official of the night which should mean that clean game will be featured. The old animosity feeling between the Maroons and the "Redmen" showed its head slightly during the progress of the game in Belleville when Archie McKay elected to in to clean-up the entire Bellville roster, but was abruptly stopped by "Speedy" St. Louis just prior to the Maroon veteran helpfully, Father Dumnie McGuire had retaliated successfully, however.

Local fans have been asking—"Is Belleville web over Campbellford what team do they meet next?" Well, according to calculations based on early the fast Whitby club left in competition and Toronto and unless the Whitby squad is sent northward for a play-off, it is expected that the winner of the Belleville-Campbellford series will clash with the Whitby team. Incidentally experts from Whitby are to the effect that they have a smart team of pacsters. The Whitby club has only had one game in the O.H.A. in two seasons, that is with the exception of the provincial semi-finals last year. They have won something like 32 games and lost only one, of course not counting that semi-final series at last year. A real series between the speed N. Whitby and Belleville are drawn in the next round. Incidentally Whitby won the O.H.A. "B" title in 1933.

On several occasions lately hockey clubs have been forced to travel to the late starting of games at the arena. For this reason the games are advertised late enough at 9:30 p.m., but when they begin to slining in the cold until nearly 11:30 p.m., that's too much," stated one disgusted fan yesterday. "If they can't assemble their players between 8 and 8:30 p.m. they should forfeit. The Maroons were late in arriving, but that was due to the terrific snow storm and blocked roads. As a matter of fact one car load failed to complete the trip at all. Of course under ordinary circumstances, however, there would be no reason for lengthy delays of starting all of which is very unfair to the attendance, but when circumstances arise which cannot be helped, well the fans should realize the handicaps under which the managements are laboring and not to accept the delays in good grace. It might be a good idea to inform the fans of such situations, however.

A combined amateur boxing and wrestling show is being presented in the Victorian Airport this evening. "Irish" Steve Taylor's amateur grapplers supplying the talent for the wrestling bouts while local and Trenton boxers will clash in six fights. Three boxing and three wrestling bouts are on the card. At the same time we find three games of hockey slated in the industrial loop this week, two in the B.C.I.V.S. interscholastic basketball league, four in the Victor Lynn three games in the Bay of Quinte group of the C.O.S.S.A. basketball series. At the same time we find three games in the final Senior Intermediate hockey play-offs get under way at the arena.

Far above expectations the first annual V.O.N. charity ice carnival was a huge success regardless as to what angle you look at it. First and foremost the entire management took an active interest in the project and entered whole-heartedly into the spirit of the night's entertainment. Fully 2,000 persons witnessed the spectacle and the proceeds for an annual ice carnival was surely laid. To open the night's program, the Quinte Skating Club gave a marvelous exhibition of figure and fancy skating, their entire presentation being a credit to their skating—for the evening. Although the boys and girls outshone themselves, the juvenile members drew round after round of applause for their graceful and effortless exhibitions. The hockey game between the Whitby Juniors and the Belleville Intermediates from parts brought out a splendid display of sextanent. The foundation of an annual challenge ice carnival was laid at the event last night and all connected with the project are to be congratulated.

Leo Dandurand, of Montreal, returned from England recently to announce that professional hockey in Europe was practically assured for next season. Already six clubs in Eng and around the metropolitan district of London have applied for league franchises while Liverpool, Cardiff, Paris and Berlin are said all interested. It is expected that a general exodus of pucksters will be seen in the near future from Canadian shores. Mr. Dandurand states his organization does not intend to raid the National League clubs 'yet'; whatever that YET means we leave to your imagination. Once professional hockey becomes firmly rooted in England it will spread rapidly all over Central Europe and it will only be a short time before an International Hockey League will be operating successfully across the ocean. Of course this will mean that the game will receive more serious consideration in those countries with the younger generations training more seriously in this new field. Of course all of this will eventually mean that Canada's future opposition in the Olympics will be keener than ever. Hockey is a game that is best accepted by sport fans who demand personal contact and thrills.

HOOLEY SMITH OF MAROONS STORMS INTO BEST FORM

Adds Nine Points to His Scoring Record in Week

RED WINGS BEATEN

Leafs Defeat Canadiens 2-1 While Hawks And Rangers Tie

By ELMER RULMAGE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Reginald (Hooley) Smith, who has been growing old in National Hockey League service so often that he fails to be placed on most of the oldster lists, stormed the gates of champion scorers today. The "Happy Hooligan" of Montreal Maroons seemed to have overcome the ravages of twelve Big League seasons.

In command of Montreal's drive down the Canadian Section stretch, Hooley padded his scoring account this week with nine points in two games and suddenly became a menacing factor in the individual race for Charlie Conacher's scoring title.

When Maroons ran out a 4-3 win last night over Detroit Red Wings, American Section leaders, the 32-year-old Smith collected one goal and three assists to establish himself five points behind the league-leading Sweeney Schriner of New York Americans. He earned five points on Tuesday night, when Maroons held Americans to an 8-3 tie at New York.

In all his N.H.L. career, Hooley has never found it so easy to shoot the puck into the net. His record shows 17 goals and 15 assists. Back in 1930, when he pivoted the famous "S"-line, involving Babe Siebert and Nels Stewart, Hooley scored 21 times and ran his high mark. It's about to be broken.

Worked on Two Lines

The former Canadian Olympic star worked on two Maroon dropkicks last night after Earl Robinson was injured in the first period. Against a Detroit team that sadly needed Herbie Lewis and Larry Aurie, out with injuries, Smith had little trouble engineering goals.

He helped Jimmy Ward score early in the first period and combined with Baldy Northcott, Cy Wentworth and Lionel Conacher for the second. Dave Trottier got the third. Detroit held its own in the second period, Romnes scoring for the Wings and Ward for the Maroons.

But the Hooley out loose some more in the last frame. He skated through the whole Detroit team for a goal, then passed to Northcott, who relayed to Gracie Grant for another. Marty Barry and Gordon Pettinger raised the Detroit total to three in two quick thrusts midway through the period.

Maroons Game Ahead

The result left Maroons a full game ahead of Toronto Maple Leafs, who upset a stubborn Montreal Canadiens team 2-1 in Toronto. Andy Blair fired the winning shot in Toronto's thrilling contest at 11:38 in the third period, skating from end to end before driving a sharp angle shot past Wilf Cude.

Bill Thoms scored the first Toronto goal on a play Frankie Finnigan put in the first period and Bill Miller squared matters in the second period on a dazzling solo rush. The former Moncton Hawk rode through the last defense without assistance.

Chicago Black Hawks and New York Rangers played a 1-1 tie at New York Hawks pulling up within three points of Detroit in the standing and Rangers running into third place, a game ahead of Boston.

Butch March scored Chicago's goal in the first period and Butch Keeling tied the count for keeps a few minutes later. Goal-tenders and defenses were supreme thereafter.

Goal-keeping for an Olympic hockey team is not all beer and skittles decides the Latvian net-minder at Canada's hockey troops stage an offensive against his citadel. The goal guardian is out of his cage and flat on the ice while a Canuck attacker reaches to stab the puck into the open net. A teammate is arriving to help the Latvian defender, but just a little further over another Maple Leaf hornet gets ready to charge. Canada scored in the game, scoring 11 times and holding their opponents scoreless—but even that couldn't keep the Olympic hockey title in Canadian hands.

JAPANESE BOY LOSES BEARINGS BUT NOT POISE

Gets Mixed up as to City Streets, But Tears Tokio on Questioning Police

New York, Feb. 21.—Thomas Kodera, a Japanese five years old, looked pathetically small and forlorn in his leather jacket, leggings and cap yesterday at Broadway and Thirty-third Street, and Patrolman Edward Jones, who had been watching him for several minutes, asked him if he was lost.

Thomas smiled and replied that of course he wasn't lost. He knew he was at Broadway and Thirty-third Street, he said, and he knew he lived at 35 East Twenty-ninth Street. He was five years old, he explained with some pride. Patrolman Jones suggested that he probably would be having a better time at home than he was on the corner, and Thomas conferred briefly and said he knew where he was and where he lived, he was in some doubt as to the course connecting the two points.

When the policeman got him to the West Thirtieth Street police station, Thomas replied in great detail to the query as to his identity and then proceeded to gather information on his own account.

First Taken to Police

"I am Thomas Kodera," he rattled off briskly. "I'm five years old. I live at 35 East Twenty-ninth Street. I have two sisters in New York and one in Japan. I go to kindergarten on Twenty-eighth Street, I don't know the number, but it's at Twenty-eighth. Why are all those cells empty. Can't you catch any crooks?"

That left the police somewhat breathless and before they could more than start a query as to the name of Thomas's father, the boy was off again on a new set of questions. He wanted to know how brass buttons were sewed onto coats who the fugitives were concerning whom circulars were hashed on the walls, whether policemen had to use their revolvers and nightsticks often, how many prisoners at once they were patrolling all the time and, first of one and then another, whether he knew any Japanese, what his name was and where he lived.

Thomas turned the tables on the police with a few queries when he got a lot of varied information before he deigned to notice the question put to him as to who his father was.

"I can't write it in English," he said, "but I'll write it for you in Japanese. I can write my own name in both languages."

Friend of Yoshi is Call

So far as any one could tell, he was as good as his word. At least his own name was legibly written in English. It turned out when an aunt, Tomma Honda, called for him at the police station that his father was T. Kodera.

Thomas was considerably set up by his call on the police. He had, he said, been put in a cell and was vicariously took great pride in it.

"It was the first time," said Thomas.

SOVIET SIGNS PACT WITH FRANCE!—Marshal M. N. Tukhachevsky, (RIGHT), commander-in-chief of the Soviet army (16 million men, including reserves), is leaving the French war ministry after a conference with Gen. Louis Felix Maurice Fabry, (LEFT), France's minister of war, which may prove momentous in the future history of the world. Although no official word has come from either country, it is known that France and the Soviet have concluded a pact. In case of war it might well affect the 32 million fighting men of both countries—although the very existence of such a body may act as a balance for peace. Many believe that the conference between the two countries, came as an outgrowth of Germany's plan to raise a large army in violation of existing peace treaties, and by array of connections in violation of existing peace treaties, and by array of connections in violation of existing peace treaties, and by her reported pact with Italy. Marshal Tukhachevsky is considered the youngest of the world's war lords.

His aunt, Miss Honda, said the boy had left the house with the announcement that he was going to take a little walk. He knew his way around the neighborhood, she said, and was allowed to stroll for a radius of four blocks unattended. Neither she nor the rest of the family believed that Thomas was as bewildered as the police imagined. They were seemed to be a slight suggestion that Thomas had played the police for fools with the purpose of seeing for himself what the inside of a police station was like.

Miss Honda pointed out that although Thomas had told the police during his call that he and his mother had become separated while they were shopping and that Mrs. Honda had obtained Brother-ers' store, that statement was pure fiction.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating breakfist and ma had her hat on, on account of her going a appointment to the dentist saying to pop, I must hurry, William, not that I take any pleasure in the ordeel but I dont want to make my self late and have to sit there adding possible suspents to certain misery, I haven't even time to give Nora instructions about dinner, so you'll have to do it, Willyum, just tell her in order whether you want fancy dictate, anything at all, ma said.

Do you mean you're giving me carbs blanch? pop said, and ma said, Of course, you're the principal one it's being ordered for, so why shouldn't you order it yourself. Not knoh, thought pop to myself, we've had them both so much lately I couldn't look either one in the face, she said.

Some kind of a stew mite not be so bad, pop said, and ma said, No not a stew. Nora hasn't been very successful with her stews, I don't know why.

Maybe it's synological, maybe she was frightened by a stew when she was a child, pop said, and ma said, And above all things please remember that we have dinner and celery the day before yesdiday, so don't get that in your head.

It's there already but I'll try to get it cool, pop said, and ma said With those suspicions you can just go ahead with a fried meal, so then you don't need roast beef because we never get a good one unless I pick it out with my own eyes, and we, and the same goes for potatoes, so dont make it oilsome.

The only kind of meat isn't seems to be fish, pop said, and ma said That's the very thing. I know you'll have a good dinner if forced you to think for yourself. Pah! Nora is got whatever kind of fish loom the market, or never mind. I'll tell her myself and save you the trouble.

MOSAICS FOUND IN ST. SOPHIA ARE DESCRIBED

Whittemore Reports Church is Greatest Museum of Byzantine Art in World

New York, Feb. 21.—Thomas Whittemore, director of the Byzantine Institute of America, who for the last four years has been superintending mosaics, under commission from the Turkish government, in the Church of St. Sophia in Istanbul, yesterday afternoon gave an illustrated lecture on his work at the Pierpont Morgan Library, 36 East Thirty-sixth Street.

Although he and his associates have uncovered many mosaics which have been hidden by paint and plaster since the capture of Constantinople by the Turks in 1453, Mr. Whittemore said it was difficult to say how near his task was to completion, as "there remains still many years of work."

The church, which was made a museum by the Turkish government in 1935, Mr. Whittemore described as "the greatest Byzantine museum in the world, since its mosaics represent the work of the greatest Byzantine artists for nearly a thousand years."

Cubes Vary According to Light

Mr. Whittemore showed slides of mosaics from the sixth to the twelfth century, explaining the technique of the mosaic workers and his methods of uncovering the pictures. Because his pictures were built into the walls, he said, and so were to be seen only from certain positions, the artists placed the mosaic cubes, according to the amounts of light and according to the distance of the picture from the spectator.

Where there was little light, and where the distance from the spectator was great, as in the vaulted ceiling of a transept, he explained, the artists used larger mosaic cubes and set them farther apart than where the light was strong and the spectator close to the picture. This was done, he said, "to keep the light in the backgrounds in movement around the central figures."

He explained the importance of this movement of light on the shiny surface of the mosaics, saying that the artists used "light almost as a pigment," gaining such effects as to defy successful reproduction by any known method of photography.

Scaffolding Is Dobbin's Job

He showed pictures of the scaffolding erected in the church from which the workers scraped away the paint and plaster. The paint, delicately constructed so that no part touched the wall, he said Mr. Whittemore, "you see, is proof that there aren't mosaics in any portion of the walls."

"We test every inch of the walls for mosaics," he added.

The holes are drilled through the plaster, and if mosaic work is found behind the plaster, it is chipped away with great care with chisels. Then the last film of plaster is rubbed away, first with a steel brush, then with a brush having bristles of wood fibre, and finally with a brush having bristles of spun glass.

In some cases, mosaics have been found under as many as six separate layers of plaster. In others, the only covering has been a coat of paint. Some of the figures were painted over with Italianate designs by the Fossati brothers, Italian craftsmen who repaired the church, when a mosque, for Sultan Abdul Madjid between 1847 and 1849.

Textile Designs Are Revealed

One of the interesting results of his work, Mr. Whittemore said, would be "a catalogue of textile designs covering about 1,000 years." The clothing of the figures in the pictures shows many designs, frequently ornate, and the designs of the vestments worn by the officials were copied from textiles. The textiles," he said, "have perished, but the mosaics are a record of their designs and wearings."

THROATLESS BABY—From the way Bobby Lively is laughing on his one-year-old birthday, you'd never think he was anything but a normal baby. Bobby was born without an atretic esophagus (throat), and it was not believed he would be able to live long. He cannot eat with his mouth but gets his nourishment through a tube inserted in his stomach. Spinach, cod liver oil and candy figure part of his diet, but he cannot taste them.

Nazi War-Book Show in Berlin

What at least two Berlin correspondents of London papers have described as "a disquieting array," or "show," is the exhibition of war literature which was opened the other day at the Prussian State Library, 16 Unter den Linden.

The catalogue lists 613 books and manuscripts, and for it General Blomberg, the War Minister, has written a preface in which he says that "the Third Reich cannot be prepared for defense through arms alone."

Among what are considered by the foreign observers to be particularly disquieting titles are: "The Decisive War," "The Chemical War," "War Yesterday and Tomorrow," "Industrial Mobilization," "Personality and Mass in the War of the Future," "Fighters and Soldiers—Everlasting Germans," "Death for the Fatherland," "Die and Be," "Blood and Honor," "Blood, Ore and Coal," "A Nation Without Room," "Combustion Bombs," and so on.

One looks in vain for such correctives as "All Quiet on the Western Front" or "The Case of Sergeant Grischa." Exhibit No. 1 is the memoirs of Hoffmann von Fallenleben's "Deutschland, Deutschland, ueber Alles," and among other memoirs on view are the mobilization order of 1914, and dispatches pencilled hastily after action in the air by the war-time pilots, Oswald Boelcke and Manfred von Richthofen.

The older books—the seventeenth century military manuals and first editions of Clausewitz, Moltke and others—are preserved in glass cases.

In the last room of all lies Herr Hitler's still unrevised political testament "Mein Kampf." Here are frankly written down the aims to be attained by the sword.

ITALIANS PUSH ON TOWARD ETHIOPIAN CAPITAL—In hurried offensive to cut the Addis Ababa railroad before the settling in of the spring rains, Italian forces, under Marshal Badoglio are reported battering "sieves" holes" in the Ethiopian defenders under Ras Mulu-Gheta blocking the road to the Ethiopian capital. More than 12,000 Ethiopians have been reported killed in the latest battle on the northern front. Photos show some of the white Italian troops engaged in the battle, the defenders, leaders of the opposing forces and map showing the Italian strategy. Addis Ababa reports deny Italian victory.

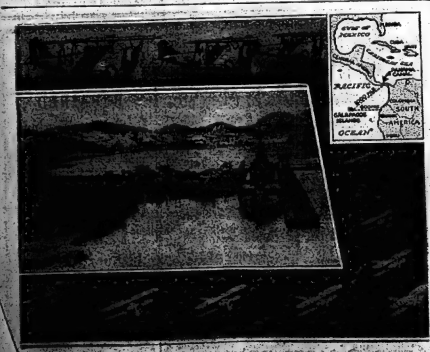
CANADIAN HOCKEY TEAM PREPARES TO MEET POLAND IN OLYMPIC OPENER—Canada's Olympic hockey team, as they awaited the opening whistle for their first fray of the series, are seen here in one of the first pictures received from the Bavarian village where the winter games were held. This is the puck-chasing brigade that went out to do battle for the Maple Leaf against Poland. Apparently they ran into some real winter weather, and it wasn't improved by the arrangement which sent Canada into the first game on an open-air hockey; coalition situated in the middle of a lake. This team downed Poland 2 a sally, but became the first Maple Leaf team to miss an Olympic championship when they suffered a stunning 1-0 defeat by England; The players are, LEFT to RIGHT: Walter "Pud" Kitchen, Toronto; "Dinty" Moore, Port Colborne; Hugh Farquharson, Montreal; Kenny Farmer, Montreal; Dave Neville, Montreal; Arnold Deacon, Port Arthur; Bill Thomson, Port Arthur; Alex Sinclair, Port Arthur and Captain Hartman Murray, Montreal.



SECRET PERIL TO UNITED STATES BARED IN WASHINGTON—Warning the United States congress that an alarming condition exists on one of America's coasts, requiring immediate attention to U. S. special defenses, Representative Tilman Parks of Arkansas, chairman of sub-committee handling war department appropriations, led the fight in the lower house for adoption of the nation's largest peace-time military budget. Parks told fellow legislators that condition was so alarming that congress could not be advised of it publicly. Some of the arms of the U. Later he was shipped to the Westminster hospital at London, Ontario, where mental cases amongst Canada's broken-down veterans are concentrated. There he has since remained, a living "unknown soldier". In a copyrighted story The Toronto Star reveals that the man has some knowledge of Baltimore, Maryland, and a search for his identity is again being made. Up to now, he has been known as "Emlah X 37." He speaks incoherently of "New Jerdon." (Photo Copyright).

CHAPTER IX

OUT OF THE PAST

Erma Hanford was tall and almost gaunt. She wore her straight black hair closely cropped; heavy bangs touching her thick brows and shading that bright eye, that seemed the death of something passionate and restless—something thwarted. Rooted, on her father's side in one of the most aristocratic families in the city's social life, she had inherited the strange, cultivated, hawk-like profile from her mother, whom Mrs. Kendall haughtily described as "a quaking nobody."

Mrs. Kendall had refused point blank to come to the tea today but Mimi had gleefully announced her intention to come and "look over the bridal pair."

"It will be an pleasant and refreshing as having tea in a private insane asylum," Mimi had confided to Dale when they started out.

Bitterly sitting against Mimi in whatever form it stood she took, Dale would have been glad to see her put in the wrong, but when she saw Mrs. Hanford home with Eleanor she was reluctantly forced to concede that Mimi had more than a shade at right in her side.

The house had something of the cool restful air of its owner. The tight cottaged old fashioned rooms had a strange incongruous mixture of the expensive which Erma had picked up in her many travels about the world. Things loaded each other—beautiful incongruous things—which simply reeked with one another. Kermanshah rugs and Gobelin tapestries, Persian miniatures and early Spanish chests, Ming dogs and Grecian nymphs, the chaste lines of Chippendale delicately relieved by the rococco excess of a boule table. It was more of a museum than a home and the mid-Victorian walls which enclosed the horsehair sofa seemed to Dale to be overcrowded with agitation.

The shades were drawn in the large double library and candles in Japanese brass holders filled the room with a flooding golden dusk. Incense mingled with the personal perfumes of the many women and Dale suddenly found herself very, very alert—even antagonistic. She vaguely felt the doors and windows wide—let in the afternoon wind and the honest daylight. There was something ominous about this sweet smelling candle-lighted place.... Something warning her.... Later remembering this she wondered if there was such a thing as intuition, if she felt a premoning of the hidden drama of the next few months in that surcharged air.

Now, however, she dismissed the feeling impatiently as she followed Mimi into the library.

Erma Hanford's resonant alto voice greeting them—then she was seating herself at the end of a row of chairs.

Behind her a sweet husky voice sounded: "—Andy Carr has been the best inamorata of Erma and she says he is the answer to the maiden's Prayer. Erma is a severe critic in her fancies. Last year it was that Russian tennis player—or was it? And before that, I remember it was the Hindu swami. If there is such a thing as society nowadays one meets the most impossible people there—"

"Oh, hello! Dale, darling. I didn't see you come in—"

Dale found herself directly in front of Mimi. Mimi's eyes open, wide innocently. "Oh, hello!" was cordially echoed by Erma Hanford.

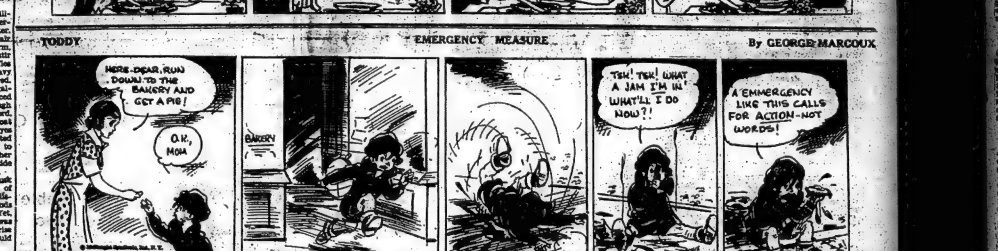
Dale felt hatred for Mimi rising within until it choked her, it blinded her. She was trembling with rage. And some of that rage was against Brant. It was Brant's fault that she had to put up with Mimi! Why didn't he give her a home of her own—a place where she would not have to stand the exquisite tortures of Mimi and his mother. Even the servants hated Dale's wife in Brant's house. It was causing her life—it was embittering her—it was driving her mad—mad! ... here—stop that hysteria! Don't let them see they've penetrated her armor. Look ahead—think of something else before old hate combined of herself—

Desperately Dale fastened her eyes on her hostess as she entered the room. Erma Hanford was wearing a modiaeval gown of electric blue velvet, out of which her brown face and black hair emerged with a sort of wild dignity. She looked like a Gipsy queen, Dale thought.

The book table held two lighted candles and a carafe of water. That was where the entertainer would stand. She was like Dale had forgotten—like Eleanor. Not that it mattered—she wouldn't know the answer.

The chairs behind Dale had filled. She heard the excited whispers of women pointed by laughter. The sort rustle of silks.... the air seemed rising and falling in warm perfumed waves.... then a stir going over the room as wind rustles a flower bed. Between the heavy velvet drapes a man appeared. Erma Hanford was suddenly gone. She vanishes to seven life. She introduced him, her voice filled with rough fire. But Dale heard never a word. She was leaning forward, her throat a white strained line, clutched eye nearly black. Her lips had parted and a little pulse had begun to hammer like mad in the base of her neck. The man up there beside Erma Hanford was Phil Clifford.

A moment when the amber dusk of the room, the golden pinkness of the candles receded—to a far distance. Nothing was real. Sounds reached her as a muffled roar. Yet, even in her agitation Dale was aware of a half dismayed surprise that the sight of Phil Clifford could stir her like that.



Phil!.... Phil—here! Phil with who had subsided into that past of hers which was already taking on the unreal aspect of a dream. Phil, whom she had seen last on the night of their bitter quarrel, in the stifling back alley behind the Colt City Dance Hall.

Something radiant about his youth and good looks. How hand-scene Phil was—she had forgotten ..... The little stir which went over the room of women told Dale how handsome they found him. Phil and Dale. Phil with teeth flashing between crisp lips—the chiseled lips which held a light of mingling cruel in their curve. Who knew better than Dale Evans how cruel Phil Clifford's lips could be!

Listen! Phil was speaking. After Erma's introduction his voice was like warm brown velvet. It played over the listening women as a languid hand sweeps guitar strings trailing a soothing chord in its wake. And all the time the hazel eyes which could thrill women with their suggestion of deep intimacy were looking, for a brief, subtly caressing—flattering—singling each one out as though to her sympathetic understanding alone he spoke. The old inaimors trick which Phil could manage so well.....

The golden voice stumbled, stopped—the caressing eyes forgot to flatter. A look of startled disbelief had flashed into them...a gleam of almost stupified amazement. Phil's face plunged into Dale's wide stare.

CHAPTER 44.

THE OLD MAGIC

Surprise crackled over the room. A frown gathered between Erma Hanford's brows—outraged astonishment in her eyes. The next moment Phil had himself in hand again—his training as an actor coming to his aid. His voice flowed on—he began reading the manuscript of the play. The mellow cadence rising, falling, playing soothingly over feminine heartstrings. The Bible frown between Erma's brows smoothed away. She watched the handsome young fellow with possessive approval.

But in Phil's eyes the expression of dazed amazement persisted. Dale here! Dale miraculously at home in this silken circle of wealth which he regarded with secret awe. Phil had worked to be in this house today—as assiduously as ever the troubadours of old worked for the favor of the court ladies. And to find Dale serenely at ease here—this girl whom he had left weeping in a western oil town.....

While his voice suavely carried on the play, Phil's eyes went stealthily toward Dale.

Sitting as still over there in the mellow candlelight.... the golden glow reflected in the leaf brown of her hair—why, it was shocking! It deepened the waves of her...hair to dark amber. It modified the warm ivory of her face....and Phil found himself remembering the silky feel of her skin when he held that delicate face in his hands, his laughing lips poised over her own....

Slim and lovely, sitting there so still.....There had always been about her the proud suggestion of a Saxon princess.... Queen Guinevere .....Belle of the White Hands.

For once Phil was stirred beyond all thought of self. He had loved Dale as much as his self centered nature had permitted him to love anyone. And now to find her here, serenely ensconced in the sacred circle where he was merely tolerated through Erma Hanford's mad caprice—why, it was shocking! He found himself doubting the reality of it all. This, the passionate girl who had clung to him in that dark alley behind the Dance, pleading for her child—to be nearly her?

Again Phil risked a side glance at Dale. Slim and proud in that gorgeous gown of dark gold velvet..... Nothing here that suggested the little flaxen-haired cheerful eating out of the tray of her trunk in those theatrical hotels.... nothing about her that suggested the girl who had danced with smiling lips and aching feet.

But no—he couldn't have been mistaken..... there had been that momentary shock of recognition in her eyes. The past stirred and the room about him was suddenly unbearable to Phil. Warm perfumed breath of flying women—the almost audible vibrations of yearning femininity—Ugh! It was stifling him! Dale alone seemed real—sweet and radiant she was! So breathing among these hot women with their soft lips and eyes..... Pictures came to Dale walking beside him in eyes luminous through Francisco fog, sweet mouth.....

AT THE BELLE

"Strike Me Pink"

Cantor Likes Hollywood Better Than Broadway

To paraphrase the slogan of a well-known restaurateur, Eddie Cantor has become a habit with us as an institution....He is so much a part of the American scene as filling stations or bank and mortgage ads.

Only he is amazing...As minister plenipotentiary to foreign countries, via the radio, the screen and the printed word, he deserves to be treated as a representative American, rather than a professional entertainer.

Cantor is the only important picture personality who has consistently followed the practice of making only one film a year...."Strike Me Pink," his newest, produced under the Goldwyn auspices, is the sixth in as many years....It will begin a 7-day engagement tomorrow at the Belle Theatre...

For Coal for Granny

Although he carried off first prize in an amateur competition at Miner's on the Bowery, it was as a singing waiter in a Coney Island beer garden that he made his first success.... He saved up enough money, after working for six months to buy his grandmother a fur coat.

He got his start on the stage, in the vaudeville act of Bedini and Arthur at Hammerstein's Victoria....During a dress rehearsal he happened to sing a song and was spotted by Gus Edwards who happened to be in the bill....Edwards engaged Cantor that he would give him a job as a Willy Edwards Kid....Most of the time he was out of work....In 1912 Eddie became a member of the "Ziegfeld Follies," where with George Jessel, Eddie Russell, George Price, Lila Lee and Gregory Kelly.... He played a better in blackface....

While leaning with this act Cantor met the late Will Rogers.... Their friendship, dramatic and warm, endured to the day of Rogers' death....Both had a common hobby — Philanthropy. Eddie's name is on the patron-list of fourteen charitable institutions and he is the founder and main support of a boys' camp at Cold Springs....

Live Like Humans

The comedian approves of Hollywood because he says it puts actors on a business basis. "My family and I are strangers when I work in Hollywood. In California we live like human beings. We get up, we go to work, we come home and eat and sleep. Actors stop being long-haired artists. They get comparatively normal lives. They stop being scatter-brained and learn how to save money. I did."

Eddie is teaching his five young daughters the habit of thrift....The two youngest, Edna, 11, and Marilyn, are on an allowance of $1.50 a week....When they get into debt they've learned they can't go to papa for extras...."Stay within your budget," he tells them, "you're not producers yet."

Cantor's Wife Ida

One of the nicest things about Eddie Cantor is his wife. She and he has been married for twenty-two years....They met when the star was thirteen years old and he says of her that she was the first person to make him feel important. "I was a lonely little runt," he remembers, "brought up by an Irish-American grandmother who was so poor she didn't have time to waste in coddling me....All I knew is that one day was poverty, work, loneliness—and an inflated inferiority complex...."

Eddie believes that in marriage mutual respect is more important than romance.... "If more women in Hollywood use Ida's method the divorce lawyers will starve," he prophesies.....

AT THE CAPITOL

"Captain Blood"

...Which is thrilling the Audiences at This Theatre

Daring and debonair Peter Blood immortalized by the novel of Rafael Sabatini, has been brought to life on the screen by Cosmopolitan productions in "Captain Blood," a mammoth production which is now playing at the Capitol Theatre, as a First National release.

The gentleman pirate of fortune is portrayed by Errol Flynn, a young Irishman comparatively new to films but who won this role, considered one of the most important of the year, over a score of famous actors after a series of screen tests.

Tall, broad-shouldered, handsome, with a dashing and magnetic personality, Flynn has lived something of the life of Peter Blood, not as a pirate, but as the soldier of fortune, for he has sought adventure all over the world.

The leading lady, portraying a beautiful non-aveyman who falls in love with the bold pirate, is none other than Olivia de Havilland who leaped to fame over night by her work in the Max Reinhardt production of "A Mid-summer Night's Dream."

The entire city by Port Royal in the West Indies was reconstructed for the picture as also were seven warships and pirate galleons. The wardrobe and make-up was a gigantic task, clothes and styles of the seventeenth century to suit the and slave had to be made.

The story opens during the period when the Duke of Monmouth was leading an abortive rebellion against King James II. For this he had run foul of the soldiery and soon after finds himself a slave in the West Indies and later the captain of a pirate ship.

His calm effrontery wins the attention, then the hatred and finally the love of the beautiful young aristocrat. This vigorous young daredevil puts down mutinies and scuttles ships with equal nonchalance, saving his warmth for the society of his love.

Lionel Atwill has the role of a plantation and slave owner who later becomes the governor of Jamaica: Basil Rathbone is the pirate Levasseur, who, unlike the gentlemanly Blood, is not only cruel but treacherous, and who is personally slain in a duel by Blood for that treachery; Ross Alexander, Guy Kibbee, Robert Barrat, Pedro de Glynn fir, and David Torrence are fellow slaves of Blood who scrape with him and form part of his pirate crew.

Narrow Throughfare Causes Accident

Skidding in an icy rut an automobile driven by Mr. Chauncey Bailey of this city, collided with the trailer of a Canada Transport truck forcing the trailer against a hydro pole on East Bridge Street late yesterday afternoon. The force of the impact broke the pole and loosened a transformer that crashed to the ground which narrowly escaped hitting the cab in which the driver of the truck was seated. Mr. Ashley was proceeding easterly and as he approached the oncoming truck, his motor car skidded in an icy rut, the steering rather narrow by the city snow plough at that point, high banks of snow being piled on both sides of the street. The automobile was badly damaged in the accident. Local police investigated.

Burns' Songs Still Preeminent, Scots Pastor Tells School Teachers

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 22 (CP)—"I am not going to tell old-down, because I'm in love with you," declared Rev. R. H. Miller, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, in an address to the Windsor Public Teachers' Institute convention here.

"I may be wrong, but I think you're wonderful;

"I may be wrong but I think you're swell," he added.

His audience laughed.

A moment before Mr. Paulin had been reciting one of the lilting lyrics of Robert Burns, the Scottish poet whose birthday is celebrated by modern popular songs by way of contrast to his sentiment.

"O Mary, at thy window be

"It is the wished, the trysted hour.

"Those smiles and glances let me see,

"That make the miser's treasure poor.

"Fastreen when to the trembling string

"The dance gaed thro' the lighted ha'.

"To thee my fancy took its wing,

"I sat but neither heard nor saw."

Referring to his subject, the greatness of Burns, Mr. Paulin said that the English revere Shakespeare, but the Scotch love Burns. Every English people do not gather annually to celebrate the Bard of Avon as the Scottish all over the world each year on the birthday anniversary of the writer of Tam O'Shanter.

EVERYONE MUST FILE TAX RETURN UNDER NEW BILL

Whether Liable or Not Is Information Given in House

CABINET TO MEET

Separate School Question Likely to be Discussed at Session

Toronto, Feb. 22.—(CP)—Free from a week-end debate by the week-end adjournment, the Ontario Cabinet went into session today for a meeting to review forthcoming legislation.

Five Government measures have made their appearance in the House as far and the Provincial Income Tax Bill is the one on which there has been any discussion. It is expected to receive second reading to-night.

A government caucus next Tuesday will hear details of one of the most controversial measures, the means whereby Separate schools will receive a larger share of Corporation Taxes. This measure was forecast in the Throne Speech, but secrecy has surrounded the manner in which the grant will be made.

Discussion of the Income Tax Bill occupied the greater part of yesterday's abbreviated session. Much criticism may be in store on the measure and the House will sit Monday night if necessary.

Leopold Macaulay, conservative member for York South, objected to clause 24 of the Bill because payment of non-residents who derive their income from the province. Drawing taxing jurisdiction might endanger the Federation of the Provinces and create a tendency to withhold capital business, he warned.

Hon. Gordon Conant, Provincial Treasurer, replied to his suggestion to let the clause stand over and then consider it.

Macaulay contended there was too much duplication of taxing and he urged the province to work out with a system of reciprocity in the matter.

Another section drawing Opposition criticism provided for deciding whether liable or not, must file a tax return. Arthur Ellis (Conservative, Kingston) described the clause as "appalling", but Hon. Paul Leduc, Minister of Mines, said it was dropped say person, by considering the matter liable, could refuse to file a return.

GRANTS REDUCED FOR FALL FAIRS

Class "A" Decreased By $1,000 And Class "B" By $500

Ottawa, Feb. 22.—Reductions in Government grants for fairs and exhibitions were announced in the House of Commons by Agriculture Minister Gardiner.

The grant to a Class A fair would be cut from $6,500 to $4,000 which would entail a loss of $1,000 over what was in 1934, the minister said. The maximum grant for Class B fairs would be $1,500 and for Class C fairs which would be $1,000 higher than it was in 1935.

At the same time Mr. Gardiner announced he hoped to have a standard for fair grants established for the whole country. This would necessitate co-operation with the provinces in connection with Class B. fairs.

Regional fairs would be continued, Mr. Gardiner said, and there the fullness would be determined by the full survey which already was under way.

The minister was the target for a few Opposition members who questioned particularly their qualifications for Government grants.

The fair item of $1,489,900 finally passed the House.

Country Doctor Unsung Hero

Chebleague, N.S., Feb. 22—(CP)—One of Canada's unsung heroes is the country physicians lay in-tured in his bed here today after a 94-mile night winter drive to help mons Mackenzie Mountain trail in Yukon.

Dr. J. L. Debinez wrote the experience of as just another daily performance of a country doctor's duties it had given the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Gaudet, who lasted Pleasant Bay, a new lease of life.

Twenty-five miles of the journey was made on snowshoes and five miles in a dog sled. It was a snowhour grind over the snow-swept mountain trail fringing the jagged coastline.

He diagnosed her illness as pleurisy complicated by pneumonia. Her father fell out on his leg on Jan. 1.

MICHIGAN TOWNS RECALL KIPLING

British Poet 48 Years Ago Wrote Verses in Their Honor

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Feb. 22 (CP)—A story stretching back forty years attaches to the birth here of Michigan towns of Rudyard, 24 miles southwest of here, and Kipling, 9 miles east of here in the upper peninsula.

Named in honor of the poet, they inspired him to a light piece of verse which he sent on the back of a photograph to Fred G. Underwood, then general manager of the Sault-Marquette railway, which was largely responsible for the names.

Mr. Underwood has now by an autograph dealer. The verse follows:

RUDYARD AND KIPLING

"Wise is the child who knows his sire,"
The ancient proverb ran.
But how far better those who knows
How, when and where his offspring was begun!
For who the mischief would suppose
Were in Michigan?

Yet I am-awed from midnight ills
That warp the soul of man.
They do not make me walk the floor,
Nay hammer at the doctor's door;
They make me laugh and iron ore,
My sons in Michigan.

O tourist in the Pullman car
(Or Standard, if you happen),
Forgive a parent's partial view;
But maybe you have children too—
So let me introduce to you
My sons in Michigan.

Matrimonial Bureaux Proposed in Germany

Berlin, Feb. 22 (AP)—Establishment of official Matrimonial Bureaux for Germany was proposed today in the official journal of the Public Health Department.

The idea, bringing acts made in Germany but has no place in the Nazi ideology, said an article by Dr. F. Burgdorfer.

The doctor developed the view that marriage is an act of responsibility to the state and nation, official marriage bureaux should be established for bachelors and spinsters who wish to wed but have been unable to find suitable life partners.

Frictionless urged special arrangements be made for sterilized persons to meet partners in like circumstances, who had Sinai does not wish such persons to be regarded as outcasts.

EXCEPTION TAKEN TO STATEMENT OF TORONTO MEMBER

David Spence Protests Increased Agricultural Estimates

MAY IMPOSE TOLLS

Canals Used by All Nations Free Of Charge

Ottawa, Feb. 22 (CP.)—Railway matters were to the fore as the House of Commons dispersed for the week-end last night. Besides a discussion on freight rates presentation of railway deficits by the Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Railways and Canals, there was opportunity for debate ranging from the Ancient Priest Estate to the new Rhodes Inn Railway.

As the votes for canal maintenance were under discussion, Hon. Howe stated the time had arrived to consider the question of tolls to be charged on Canadian canals. These waterways, he said, had been built out of dollars that public funds are traversed every year by ships of all nations free of charge.

While he thought the question deserved earnest study, the minister was made free to admit the transport of grain by United States ships to world markets.

Hon. Mr. Howe Hudson Bay Railway dyer some questioning from eastern members about the cost of the new equipment. Some criticism from western members for subsidies to the railway for the cost of insuring ships using the route.

Boost in Tonnage

Mr. Howe believed the route would develop naturally in course of time. He had a report from Capt. Bernier, who sailed through "virtually open waters" last year. He had also received personal knowledge of the port as he had charge of awaiting the steamer there, he said the Hudson route was ordinarily a safe one but there were certain factors which prevented an immediate reduction in insurance rates.

More experience and more shipping would bring them down and if the Hudson Bay Railway on Jim Creek Lakes became normal the advantage of shipping grain from Northern Saskatchewan over Port Arthur would send traffic that way.

Colony Planned For Jews

A protest against increased agricultural estimates over the years was made by David Spence, veteran Conservative member for Toronto-Trinity. Mr. Spence declared he had been spoon-fed so they expected someone else to do all their thinking.

Members representing rural seats were to the point in their criticisms of appropriations and for a few minutes the House was more like a Toronto member was told if any class in Canada had been spoon-fed in this regard it was the farmers.

Economy was necessary today, the Toronto member declared, and it should be uniform in all departments. When agricultural department was talking on more men all the time and was spending more money.

Even the farmers were being harassed by the high cost of agricultural machinery, however, or yield the breed of horses they had formerly supplied by the advancing Italian forces was not specified.

Mr. Spence objected to their recent victories, insisted nevertheless they were tainted, with little favor on Haile Selassie's purported plans to save his country from conquest by mass dating it to Geneva.

Premier Mussolini has declared openly that Italy's colonial policy is in Ethiopia without the protectorate. Observers were not disposed to accept Mussolini's statement.

Sources said Italy was less disposed than ever now to accept compromises.

Unusual Accident Traps Driver in Car

Welland, Ont., Feb. 22—(CP)—Harry Reid, 39, Welland, is under detention as a witness of driving while drunk following a peculiar mishap early today.

The alleged Reid's car left the road and crashed into a street light standard. The impact knocked down a leg of Reid's car, making it impossible for the driver to extricate himself. Police said he was placed under arrest by police who freed him from the smashed car.

Lord Tweedsmuir Staunch Believer In Woman's Ability

Toronto, Feb. 22 (CP)—Three more floor in which they are given anything like a chance.

Speaking briefly at the opening of the new Woman's College Hospital this afternoon, Governor-General Tweedsmuir said: Women have always been in charge of the construction camps in South Africa into which the Boer women and children were collected from the areas overrun by the war.

"Two things I learned which we have never forgotten. One was the unreasonable value of the herd and the unrelenting work of doctors and nurses, for we turned these camps in six months from a large morgue into a healthy town. The other was the unreasonable value of women's work, for it was the women who, under the Lady Milner commission, under Deaconess Millicent Fawcett, which enabled us to win the war.

The Great War gave a final proof of the value of women's services.

BOXER IS STILL 'IN COMA STATE

Doctors Concede' Matthews Good Chance of Recovery

Toronto, Feb. 22 (CP)—His condition unchanged, Fred Matthews, 24-year-old boxer, lay in a coma at Toronto General Hospital today as doctors prepared for a delicate operation which they hope will be dangered by a knockout in Wednesday night's "white hope" boxing tournament.

The 205-pound Armfield, Que., lumberjack, who was knocked out by relief fisaliss since his 50-second knockout, was considered a "very good chance" of recovery. His strong physique and athletic ability, it was believed, would free fatal injury, encouraged the doctors.

Dr. Hugh Cleghorn, who diagnosed daily. A skull fracture was feared, but X-ray pictures failed to reveal plates, while a brain hemorrhage had developed, causing necessity for the operation.

Matthews, a climber, lumbering first class, was knocked out by Jack Flanagan of London, Ont., in the fourth round of a bout. Previously, he won two fights easily.

REPORT SELASSIE SUING FOR PEACE

Also Stated, Italy Menacing Next Major Ethiopian Objective

By CHARLES H. GUPTILL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

By The Associated Press

Rome, Feb. 22—Press Bureau reported today that Emperor Haile Selassie was suing for peace, and that Italy's next big objective in the campaign to end Ethiopian resistance.

Informed sources reported the Ethiopian Chief of State was advancing peace proposals directly to Premier Mussolini and that it was understood to contemplate a league protectorate over his empire.

Italy would retain the entire territory, however, or yield the broad plateau of Tigre, which was occupied by the advancing Italian forces was not specified.

Italy, intensified by their recent victories, insisted nevertheless they would continue their war on Haile Selassie's purported plans to save his country from conquest by mass dating it to Geneva.

Premier Mussolini has declared openly that Italy's colonial policy is in Ethiopia without the protectorate. Observers were not disposed to accept Mussolini's statement.

Sources said Italy was less disposed than ever now to accept compromises.

Bachelor M.P. Recovers Former Rug Now Composes on Familiar Footing

Ottawa, Feb. 22 (CP)—Being called on the carpet as an old story to the Government benches of Parliament but it had a new variation today when a bachelor who has been married at home since the election of 1930 decided he must have a rug for the floor covering in his office as during his last term in the House.

A search party was organized and not without success. The rug was found and the member can now pace up and down and compose his speeches on a familiar footing.

Interior decoration problems such as these might pray on the mind of an ordinary housekeeper but the bachelor member's problem differs in two respects from the usual one. First he has no housekeeper and

(By Andrew Sertling)
(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Rome, Feb. 22.— (AP)— Great Britain, diplomatic sources said today, is carefully watching the possibilities of formation of an Italo-German-Polish-Austrian bloc in the current intensive diplomatic negotiations.

Sir Eric Drummond, British Ambassador to Italy, will leave here tonight for London. Ostensibly, his trip was arranged to see his dentist, but diplomats pointed out the Brit would spend a week in Vienna where he has great personal influence.

Diplomats expressed belief with Sir Eric leavin Rome at this time, when his presence here is so much required, owing to Italo-British relations, his visit to Vienna must be of unusual importance.

Trip Private is Report

London, Feb. 22.—(AP)— The British Foreign office today confirmed Sir Eric Drummond, British Ambassador to Italy, was going to Vienna but said his trip was in the interest of private matters and not connected with politics.

Authoritative sources declared the British are not alarmed over Central European developments and that Sir Eric's visit to Vienna is purely personal. Press Assn.

RECHECK STORY OF 2 WITNESSES

Millard Whited And One Unnamed Asked to Appear

Trenton, N.J., Feb. 22 (AP)—Two of the state's star witnesses in the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann were brought back into the case today for a recheck of their testimony.

Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, Jr., of Hunterdon County, said one of the witnesses was Millard Whited. He refused to name the other.

Whited is the flourland Mountainview who testified he had seen Hauptmann at the wheel of a car in the night with Hauck and Fisher.

Hauck said the Whited's reliable quarters but unconfirmed that the Governor again gave evidence he had suppressed, particularly that of Cal Dr. John F. Condon, the Jafsie of the famous negotiations, now on a vacation in Panama.

From a reliable source it was learned the three at the conference last night discussed the possibility of perjury charges against two of the state's witnesses whose identities, however, were not disclosed. Fisher said some time ago he would like to see the prosecute certain witnesses for perjury.

Severe Winter Has Little Effect on Insect Pests Say Experts

Despite a suggested by entomologists of the local Dominion Experimental Farm that the present severe winter and deep snow with resulting low temperatures would decrease the number of potato bugs or other insect pests in surrounding districts, reports from outside points, according to Assistant Entomologist Mr. Gibson, of this city, is generally found as a distance of from four to five feet from the ground. The fact that in this district frost has penetrated to a greater depth, heading to the destruction of the bugs and larvae, in the opinion of agricultural representatives of that district.

"The potato bug and the larvae can stand a lot of cold weather and freezing, isn't what hurts them, its the recurring freezing and thawing, the recurring freezing and thawing, the recurring freezing and thawing that kills them there is water in the ground," which tends to weed and spread it. This might help to explain the statement from one's, pointed out Mr. H. E. Reid, chief of the Insect Laboratory.

The corn borer, on the other hand is having a good winter this year. Plenty of snow has given him sufficient protection and he'll probably emerge fat and healthy, ready for his destructive work. Only the insect larvae established in hollow places in trees and exposed places above ground is likely to be killed by the severe and continued frost in the opinion of the local experts.

Snow Removal Costs City $2,200 for Jan.

Deep snow drifts, the heaviest received in the city in many winter years has cost the city a mounting snow removal bill, and threatens to become one of the heaviest in the annals of the department, a public works letter to the Board has estimated at the city hall.

During the month of January, and up to the present date of February, a total of $2,317.30 has been spent on actual snow removal. This figure does not include those working on relief projects, and the bill for any men which has been distributed by the department and private citizens for whom it has been given free has reached the tidy sum of $178.36 so far.

Estimated in yards, a total of approximately 138 yards of snow and loss of sand have been sprinkled on streets and walks. Citizen need for the same purpose are estimated to be 260 yards.

Narrow Thoroughfare Gives Rise to Accident

Mr. Chauncey Ashley, of this city, whose automobile was implicated in an accident on East Bridge St., on Wednesday afternoon, when it is alleged that the Canada Transport struck his automobile backed in the rear, the car striking the trailer of the transport as first reported. The extreme narrowness of the street, caused by snow banks and icy condition of road contributed to the accident involved as the reason for the accident, which saw Mr. Ashley's motor car badly damaged, a hydro pole broken and other minor damages reported. No charges have been laid by the police.

TUBERCULIN TEST IS APPRECIATED BOARD IS TOLD

Clinic Will Be Permanent, Rev. Harold Reid Tells

BOARD GRATIFIED

Seven hundred pupils of the Collegiate Institute have undergone the tuberculin test for tuberculosis, tests at the school since the middle of last week and quite a number who re-acted after the tests are ready for the X-ray test next week, it was stated by the Rev. Harold Reid, Trustee, at the regular meeting of the Board of Education this evening in an illuminating verbal report.

Mr. Reid made his report on the request of O. W. Herder chairman of the Nurses' Committee this year; a position the former held during 1935.

"Mr. Proctor asked me to make this report because I had the opportunity of being present when he handed it in," outlined the Rev. Mr. Reid.

"The survey which the Board approved and left with the committee has been carried out, or almost carried out with minor exceptions. This followed several meetings of the committee during which arrangements were made. All present nearly all pupils have had the tests. All those who reacted are ready and some of them are now ready for the X-rays. Throughout it all we have been well satisfied with the co-operation shown by the parents."

Tests Welcomed

To illustrate the readiness with which parents as a rule have accepted the tests, a card of congratulations, a little note, was read by Trustee Reid in which a mother voiced the opinion that the tests opportunity offered. This note had been placed in the envelope form sent out by the committee asking parents' consent.

"All the card related to the Board of Education and the Department of Health," the Rev. Mr. Reid said, "is much for the health of the youth of the city" wrote the mother.

"Many parents, no doubt, so far forty have not consented to take the tests," continued Mr. Reid, "and so not exact because some of them have been taken through illness and other reasons."

"At the next meeting we will be able to present a final and more detailed statement of this work. We are hoping that those still on the pupils who have wished it have been given this tuberculin test. If no reaction, you may be sure that the tests they were given a second one-tenth of 1 mg. under the first test. The majority reacted negative and this completed the test. We would like to point out at this time that a "positive" reaction means nothing, but that they have been exposed to tuberculosis, and the greatest precaution must be taken to keep the many who showed a positive reaction and believed they had the disease, from the risk of those who have not had the disease

School Board Protests Change in System of Aid To Schools in Ontario

By Vote of 13 to 2 Trustees Oppose Roman Catholic Proposal

BACK PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Declare Change Would Impair Public School Efficiency

Members of the Board of Education by a vote of 13 to two at their regular meeting last evening placed themselves on record as forwarding a protest against any legislation or regulation which would impair their revenues or which would in any way divert government grants or local taxes for school purposes towards the maintenance of Roman Catholic schools, or any other system of sectarian or denominational schools.

The vote which was carried after brief discussion followed the reading of a communication from the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East urging that action be taken in this matter and was taken on a resolution moved by Trustee R. E. Fetterly, seconded by Rev. Harold Reid.

Following the reading of the resolution which appears in its entirety elsewhere in this issue, Mr. Fetterly pointed out that much had been said and done regarding this matter in the past few years. "Now is the time to take action," he urged.

Support Public Schools

"In seconding this resolution," declared Trustee, the Rev. Harold Reid, "it is not because I am an opportunist. It is because our present system of schools should be supported. It is an adequate system we have in the Province, open to all. We, as a Board, are required and obliged by law to provide all children in the community with proper education; the view of that I can't see why we should sit quietly by and permit protesting that this is being done—ostensibly to take away part of the revenue."

"Nothing is taught in our schools that any one could object to. I support the resolution because I know something definite is being done to take away this revenue. This matter came before the Board years ago but no action was taken. Now it has come to a definite head. I feel it is right to protest and that something is being done to harm the schools. Before I sit as a member of the Board, I support the resolution."

Trustee Rev. Moncrieff—"We're only wasting our wind. We know what happened last year when the delegation went to Toronto and what reception they got. . . ."

Trustee Reid—"Waste our wind or not ,we are having something to say in the matter."

Fears for School System

Rev. A. R. Payne—"I don't wish to unnecessarily prolong this debate, but as far as I see it at present I something is not done it may lead to absolute disintegration of the school system as it is at present. If we start opening the doors and giving privileges to one section, we should insist that the same privileges be given if not that we will be no cohesion; only disintegration. If we believe in British institutions then we should see that all get the same. They may have a perfect right to demand, but we have also a better system of schools than we have in Canada at present it is up to us to support the ones we have now."

Trustee Frank Cushing, as representative of the Separate School Board pointed out that some of the remarks made by previous speakers, he thought, were not quite fair and due regard for the historical background which lies behind the whole question, he added.

Many Angles

"There are so many angles to this whole thing that it is difficult for any Board of Education to arrive at any hasty conclusion. I want to point myself on record as opposing the whole thoroughly. I'd like to stress also that I don't think there is any intention of the Separate School supporters to attempt any disintegration of the sort mentioned. I might further point out that the Separate School Board in this Province form a part of the vast Public School system."

"I couldn't help think that Mr. Fetterly's statistics did not take into account the fact that St. St. Michael's School were closed then would be a total of 412 pupils to provide accommodation for right away. This at a time when overcrowding of the schools has become an important question. A second point I might mention is that I don't think any speaker stated what the proposed legislation might be to do or will be. It may not be so drastic as suggested and I can only repeat that what was asked before and what will be asked again. Leaving it off will result in the Legislature going through without us having a chance to do anything. This Board should deal with the resolution tonight."

"The question," interposed Suggested Chairman of the Board Geo. Ostrom, following a pause after the remarks of the last speaker.

Put to vote only two opposition votes were cast, Trustee Cushing and Trustee Geo. F. Lent opposed the vote.

REV. ARCHIBE WALLACE, Toronto, Editor of Onward and Vanguard, official organ of the United Church publications, who will be the special preacher at Bridge street United Church on Sunday on the occasion of the anniversary of the Sunday School.

TEXT OF PROTEST

The resolution passed by the Board of Education last night against the proposals of change in the regulations regarding aid to Separate Schools in Ontario is as follows:

To the Premier, the Minister of Education, and Members of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario.

Whereas:

According to reports in the Free the Roman Catholic Ratepayers Association are continuing their demands on your Government for a division of the taxes of Corporations and Public Utilities on the basis of school attendance, and

Whereas:

In an address given by M. J. Quinn, President of the Separate Catholic Ratepayers Association, to the Knights of Columbus of Oshawa, he made the boast that "the battle we have waged in the Province of Separate Schools in this Province, has just about reached a climax," and

Whereas:

The Speech from the Throne at the opening of the Legislature on February 11th, reference was made to a further re-arrangement of the taxes during the present session, thus giving rise to the hopes of Roman Catholic that their demands and legislation would grant their demands, and

Whereas:

The Public Schools of this Province are, as their name implies, open to and used by every child of school age, without any distinction, and as the system is entitled to and require for their efficient operation, the total revenues at present

Therefore be it resolved that this Board of Education of the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, does hereby protest against any legislation or Regulation which will impair their revenues or which will in any way divert government grants or local taxes for school purposes to the maintenance of Roman Catholic Separate Schools, or any other system of sectarian or denominational schools.

and further:

We strongly protest against any legislation which will subject the British subject to support any sectarian school or system of Roman Catholic of his right to choose whether he will support the Public Schools of the United Catholic Separate School, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Honorable the Prime Minister of Ontario, the Honorable the Minister of Education of Ontario and to Honorable Dr. Forbes, the member of the Legislature in Ontario for this electoral riding of West Hastings, and to the local press.

In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands and the seal of our Board.

Secretary. Chairman.

Dated at Belleville, this day of Febry. 1936.

"Mr. Cushing has referred to the historical background. Separate Schools were forced on Ontario in the year 1867 by the Roman Catholic Legislature in the Province of Quebec. The Roman Catholic Province of Canada united under one government. Upon Canada was imposed the Separate School of Quebec. Agreement forced it. Delary The Bill in Habbe to be passed. We don't what was asked before and what will be asked again. Leaving it off will result in the Legislature going through without us having a chance to do anything. This Board should deal with the resolution tonight."

"The question," interposed Suggested Chairman of the Board Geo. Ostrom, following a pause after the remarks of the last speaker.

Put to vote only two opposition votes were cast, Trustee Cushing and Trustee Geo. F. Lent opposed the vote.

ANNEX TO SCHOOL ON WEST SIDE

Collegiate Report

In the report of School Principal F. O. MacLaurin of the Collegiate it was shown that attendance while fairly good for the school during the first part of the season had been lowered by numerous cases of colds and other illness. Mention was made by the Principal of a small fire which occurred in one of the rooms this week. The blaze which broke out in a waste basket had scorched a desk badly and seared the floor. The only explanation that could be given was that a small piece of matches had been dropped in the basket.

Settlement was made by the fire insurance adjuster for $67.00, pointed out Trustee Chas. Hyde, chairman of the Sites, Buildings and Repairs Committee. The desk will need repairing and we have the cost of repairing the remaining $70.00 on redecorating or floor repairs. The matter will be left to the discretion of the committee.

Teachers Praised

In the report of Inspector R. W. Anglin of the Department of Education, Toronto, who recently completed a survey of the Collegiate high praise for the teaching staff, the scholars and general efficiency of the school was contained.

It was pointed out in the report read the Board that although recommendations had previously been made in this respect, no action had been taken on the construction of a tennis court, a running circle or a well drilled playing and side lots ground for the students. An offer was also suggested that the length of the campus along Church Street.

Several valuable books have been added to the school library, but more were required, additional are needed," it continued.

Pupils to Teacher

"The ratio of pupils to teachers is about 25 to one. Discipline is good. Fire drills are practised thoroughly and teachers are either good or very good. Spelling of the pupils is about average and writing is above the average. The pupils' marks in history and geography when pen pictures doctor's certificates".

"The attendance of the school is larger than in former back ago. The Principal and staff of capable teachers are doing a splendid work to the youth of Belleville and the community. They continue to serve faithfully the best interests of their pupils in spite of the discouragements of, in many cases, salary decreases".

A good spirit pervades the classes, and movements of pupils are orderly. Tone, reference was made to a further re-arrangement of the taxes during the present session, thus giving rise to the hopes of Roman Catholic that their demands and legislation would grant their demands, and

Whereas:

The Public Schools of this Province are, as their name implies, open to and used by every child of school age, without any distinction, and as the system is entitled to and require for their efficient operation, the total revenues at present

Therefore be it resolved that this Board of Education of the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, does hereby protest against any legislation or Regulation which will impair their revenues or which will in any way divert government grants or local taxes for school purposes to the maintenance of Roman Catholic Separate Schools, or any other system of sectarian or denominational schools.

and further:

We strongly protest against any legislation which will subject the British subject to support any sectarian school or system of Roman Catholic of his right to choose whether he will support the Public Schools of the United Catholic Separate School, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Honorable the Prime Minister of Ontario, the Honorable the Minister of Education of Ontario and to Honorable Dr. Forbes, the member of the Legislature in Ontario for this electoral riding of West Hastings, and to the local press.

In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands and the seal of our Board.

Secretary. Chairman.

Dated at Belleville, this day of Febry. 1936.

"Mr. Cushing has referred to the historical background. Separate Schools were forced on Ontario in the year 1867 by the Roman Catholic Legislature in the Province of Quebec. The Roman Catholic Province of Canada united under one government. Upon Canada was imposed the Separate School of Quebec. Agreement forced it. Delary The Bill in Habbe to be passed. We don't what was asked before and what will be asked again. Leaving it off will result in the Legislature going through without us having a chance to do anything. This Board should deal with the resolution tonight."

"The question," interposed Suggested Chairman of the Board Geo. Ostrom, following a pause after the remarks of the last speaker.

Put to vote only two opposition votes were cast, Trustee Cushing and Trustee Geo. F. Lent opposed the vote.

MOTHERS AND SON RE-UNITED AFTER 19 YEARS OF SEARCHING!—TOP LEFT, Raymond Doyle as a lad of six; TOP RIGHT, Raymond Doyle as he looks today; LOWER LEFT, Mrs. Lila Rowe and her long missing son—"Mother Knows Best"; LOWER RIGHT, Mrs. Lila Rowe and her long missing son—"Mother forever." Here is one story of human suffering over the years that has a happy ending. When the city of Halifax was nearly destroyed more years ago, a mother and her son and husband were separated. For these 19 years the mother searched for and with whatever trace of her husband could be found. Finally one little picture and many memories, she never gave up hope. Meanwhile her son and his father had headed toward the United States. The boy grew to manhood; together they struggled for existence. Then the father died and his crying message to his son was "Find your mother." Adversity struck again and 26-year-old Raymond Doyle found himself destitute in Chicago. Raymond Doyle found himself destitute in Chicago. Raymond's mother, Mrs. Lila Rowe of Toronto, "ever-searching," was re-searching, as she knew with great joy in her heart that her search was ended. She wired money to Halifax and Raymond travelled west to Toronto. Then we was met by Toronto newspapermen. The rest of the story is told in the pictures ABOVE. The faded little snapshot of Raymond as a lad; the telephone call to his mother—the first time each had heard the other's voice in 19 years; the happy reunion; and finally, together at last, "until death" they say. So ends in happiness, this true story that is stranger than fiction.

Parliament Hill Hears

By WILFRID EGGLESTON

Mackenzie King's boyhood home still stands a short distance outside of Kitchener (then Berlin) and Woodside is a tale.

After forty years' residence in Western Canada, a contemporary and chum of the present prime minister came back recently to explore some of his youthful haunts. He found everything changed and some of the landmarks even had disappeared.

But, in spite of the destruction of a fine avenue of evergreens and other drastic changes in the "settlement," he found without difficulty the house, not so far from his own boyhood home, where Mackenzie King lived as a boy.

The house, standing about a big sadly reflecting on the transitory nature of all earthly things, when, noticing that he was being observed from two or three windows, he decided he had better be courteous and explain his presence.

He rapped at the door, and a lady appeared, wrestling with a shoe which she had evidently been attempting to put on.

"Yes?" she said.

"Pardon me, madam," greeted the contemporary. "I used to live in this neighborhood 40 years ago, and I just wanted to see the lovely old homestead again where W. L. Mackenzie King grew up."

"Oh, this ain't the place," she corrected, curtly. "He's dead." She was still wrestling with the shoe, and she tossed it at an aside: "You can't get shoes to fit no more."

"But this is the place," persisted the westerner. "I once knew this neighborhood in the dark as well as by day, and the changes since then can't fool me. I mean Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, the Liberal leader."

A window above had opened, and a man's bowsled head was pushed out. He had evidently overheard the conversation; "Say, mister, you are all mixed up. He's dead. And besides, his name wasn't King; it was Smith."

My friend, who told me this anecdote himself, saw there was no use arguing the point. He turned away without further remark.

Such is fame!

Archibald Mitchell, the member for Medicine Hat, and whip of the Social Credit group, is the son of an even more famous Archibald Mitchell who was one of the pioneer tree-planters of the "dried-out" prairie country, and who, through his efforts did much to beautify and make sharp hundreds of farm homes on the "bald-headed" plain.

Archibald Mitchell, senior, says his son, now an enthusiastic tree-lover of farmers and their families from the heart of the arid country to the irrigated lands around Coaldale and Lethbridge, always loves the shade trees, the apples, the berry bushes, the shrubs and the flowers. It made him impressive to him when these departed. Some of the children as much as ten years old had never seen a tree before in their lives, and it was like showing them fairyland.

All celebrated figures gather anecdotes about them; and it is always difficult for an outsider to make sure which are authentic and which are apocryphal. And it is never safe to appeal to the subject—a good jury for confirmation: half the time they 'sew you up' so that you cannot possibly get at it. And when the anecdote is as innocent as the following it is worth risking a chance:

"While they were still Colonel and Mrs. Rockall (says my informant) the Tweedsmuirs were invited to dinner with their Majesties at Buckingham Palace. When the function was over; and they were once more on their way home, they compared notes.

"Her Majesty," reported Lady Tweedsmuir, "said how delighted she was to see His Majesty and you talking together. She hoped you would say something to him about his reading, because he read so much that was awful trash."

At present Governor-General was reported to have received this with a gasp, and then he replied with a twinkle in his eye: "That's rather odd, because the first thing he said when we met was: 'When are you getting out another book? I always read yours, the moment they appear!'"

The collection of animal stories connected in some way with the Governor-Generals was augmented last week by Malcolm McLean, the member for Melfort, when, after repeatedly trying to get E. E. Perley, of Qu'Appelle to say who had made a certain allegation, Malcolm suddenly and heatedly across the floor of the House:

"Again I ask, who was the silligator?"

Mr. Perley observed that the House knew very well who the alligator was, and the incident closed.

Further "Animals I Have Met" include the reference of one of the members in the menace of dairy products from New Zealand in the House: "butter from the antipodes" and the observation by Dr. Thomas Donnelly of Willow Bunch, when interrupted by a private member in the course of a speech: "When I am in the big game hunting the was after Mr. Bennett or Hon. Robert Weir at Lethbridge, always been the shade trees, the apples, the berry bushes, the shrubs and the flowers. It made him impressive to him when these departed. Some of the children as much as ten years old had never seen a tree before in their lives, and it was like showing them fairyland.

VIOLET RAY USED TO SILENCE FILM

Process That Filters Out All Other Shades of Light Gives Clear Sound Reproduction

NEW MOVIE ERA

New York, Feb. 22.—An ultra-violet ray process of recording sound photographically on motion picture films, which is expected to open up "era of new realism" in the production of musical talkies and improve the "film speaker's voice" of many screen stars, was described and demonstrated here last night at a meeting of the Atlantic Coast section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. Introduced by the white light of an ordinary incandescent lamp that has been used in the sound recording process, but white light, it was explained, has many components which are missed by the recording apparatus in order to get a distinct reproduction of the sound. By inserting a light filter in the pathway of the recording beam, however, ultra-violet rays alone are said to pass and paint the "sound" image on the sensitive film, thus more accurately and distinctly than when the whole band of rays from ultra-violet to red, is permitted to reach the sensitized film.

Complete While Photographed

Recording sound with the ultra-violet system was likened to improving the detail of photographs by sharpening the focusing lens system of a camera. Because of the variety of wavelengths in ordinary white light, it was said, so to be virtually impossible to record all of them simply and at the same time. The wavelengths that remain, slightly out of focus blurred the edges of the sound pattern on the film and caused distortion. But it was explained that the various components of white light have different focal points, and by using a lens of proper power, causing "sound scattering" that has been used in the past to solve only a few simple acoustical problems in many high-fidelity recording and reproducing systems, consisting chiefly of a "sharper" focusing of the light rays, the filter and the addition of an ultra-violet filter.

A technical paper describing the system was read at the meeting by Loyd A. Jones, of the Dr. C. E. K. Mees laboratory engineer of RCA Photophone, Camden, N. J., and Joseph H. Hazen, engineer of the Camden plant, who was instrumental in the development of the system, was not present at the meeting, but has been at work along similar lines by Clarence Carlton of Eastman Kodak laboratory engineer of RCA Photophone, Camden, N. J., and Joseph H. Hazen, engineer of the Camden plant, who was instrumental in the development of the system, was not present at the meeting, but has been at work along similar lines by Clarence Carlton of Eastman Kodak laboratory engineer of RCA Photophone, Camden, N. J., and Joseph H. Hazen, engineer of the company's New York branch, reporting on the development of an ultra-violet system.

Systems Are Compared

By the new system, recording sound up to 10,000 cycles per second are said to be easily possible. In comparison with conventional methods in the reproduction of clear sound tones from a recording, made part of the demonstration, Kurt Weill for the proposed Broadway stage spectacle, "New Road."

When compared with the sound films said to comprise the "last word" in recording and projecting had been made by the "ultra-violet recording" using white light, the ultra-violet method evoked much praise at the meeting.

Mr. Baker explained that the system of recording by the use of ultra-violet rays is employed. Mr. Baker said the system is capable of producing better this method of reproduction long wanted sound. The Equipment has been made steadily for months, sound apparatus and is now under development at Camden, he added.

The technique for high-pitched voices of sons screen celebrities and sound effects also was described Mr. Baker said, "has long presented a difficult problem to the recording engineer."

"Heretofore, when a high-pitched sound was recorded at a frequency 9,000 cycles, it was necessary to reduce the speed of the recording to a point approximately 1,000 cycles per second, thereby making necessary for faithful reproduction of sound from the film.

DRAMA FESTIVAL

With the drama and amateur theatricals absorbing unusual interest, it was a very important matter to bring to Belleville for the second drama festival of the Bay of Quinte secondary schools as an adjudicator Mr. Sterndale Bennett of Toronto, who acted in the regional festivals of the first Canadian drama festival. Mr. Bennett's comments on the productions of Thursday and Friday evening at Belleville Collegiate theatre will prove of untold benefit to those actors who took part in the all one act plays and also to those who attended the festival and indirectly to those from this entire district who did not attend but are interested in the Little Theatre. For Mr. Bennett comes with a lifetime of experience to the task of suggesting where productions might be improved.

To sponsors and organizers of the district festival, a debt is owing for this second event of the kind. Stimulation of the imagination particularly in the years of late school attendance is essential in the well-used words of Hamlet "to hold the play" indeed the play is the thing to cultivate a sense of dramatic art first of all to inculcate a sense of the principles of life in all the forms drama, music, painting, sculpture, and applied or commercial art, as well as drama, to teach co-ordination and to stimulate sympathy with human life in whatever circumstances. Actors are marked by observation and imagination and are among the choicest vehicles of expression of the highest traditions of any race or nation. The drama is an essential expression of a great nation.

Credit must be given to the directors, players and staffs of the various groups in co-operating to make such a festival possible here. The district is better for having had so fine a festival of drama, by players of the secondary schools, with no reward sought but the opportunity to do their best.

It is understood that the two Belleville groups who played in the festival are also to compete in the regional festival at Kingston March 6 and 7 and Belleville's Thalt work will be watched with interest.

The Bay of Quinte Schools last year organized the first secondary school festival in Ontario.

EXPLORING

The world is not yet quite explored—Lincoln Ellsworth, the famous explorer, wants this century to wipe the world "unexplored" off the map. But in Antarctica alone there is work to take a hundred years to exploring, surveying and mapping.

The "unexplored" means the "unknown". That latter used to be a word that caused fear and trembling to many though it has dared the hardiest souls of all time. This call to heroism to explore the world, has been heard steadily since the days of Columbus and even many centuries before that. There have been great eras of exploration, as in the days of the Spanish Main and the spanish galleons and privateering but some of the glamor still remains though the progress is made not with swords and guns but with scientific instruments.

LOOKING FOR SPRING

Four weeks, from today, that is on March 21st, the sun will cross the equator and the official spring season will begin. To those who have passed through the winter which has been marked by unrelenting severity, even the mention of spring brings a flutter of hope. But out in Winnipeg they are looking for talking of spring's harbingers. Three specimens of prairie horned lark reached Winnipeg on St. Valentine's Day and the spirits of the people have risen despite the zero temperatures, which the Winnipeg Tribune says has marked "the present unparalleled ice age." It is pointed out that the prairie horned lark starts from the south in mid-February, and usually reaches the Manitoba capital about February 16 to 22. Winnipegers say the birds are two days ahead this year and do not make mistakes. So they hope winter is about ready to relent a bit and open the way for the springtime of grambolling lambs and running sap.

People of Ontario have not had any such hopeful signs as the Westerners have received. But they still believe the crow will smarge soon, that the robin will come back and finally bring in his train the swallow that takes the winds with beauty. Down in these parts people measure spring by St. Patrick's Day. In the era of unpaved roads; it used to be a spring words boasting about when one could say the dust was blowing on St. Patrick's Day. With the piles of Nature's wonderful white on streets and lots, people are wondering if a years St. Patrick's Day will be given us this year.

"EATING CROW" HITHERTO A SYMBOLIC TERM, applied in a contemptuous manner to those unfortunates who may have spoken unwisely and not well, may soon become a generic term applied to a new dish. "Chelicago" hitherto not esteemed as the top flight of a gourmet's fancy. According to Mr. John Spencer, a big game Hunter from Belleville, now sojourning in Miami, Florida, a dish of crow may soon become a gastronomic fact instead of a figment of fancy speech, and he supports his contention with a newspaper clipping which reads as follows:

CROW MEAT DELICIOUS

Tulsa, Oklahoma, Feb. 13—Eating crow need no longer signify disgrace, Dr. T. W. Stallings avers. Guests at his dinner described the meat of the bird as delicious. Guests included the Mayor and officials of hospitals and schools.

Mr. Spencer sends this message to Belleville friends which will no doubt be received with mixed feelings: "I am bringing back a special crow gun and will be able to fill any orders for the delicacy. In earnest as Mr. Spencer is a champion crow hunter, as previously mentioned in this column, local crows are in for a bad season if folks get to eating crow in any quantity. With a record of 300 crows shot in a season by Mr. Spencer there should not be any scarcity of the new delicacy" as far as his friends are concerned.

TOWNSEND PLAN, WHICH PROMISES TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS PER MONTH to all persons over sixty provided they retire from active work and spend the money each thirty days in their own ballwick came under fire in the United States Congress and it was charged that the plan was a very good one for Dr. Townsend, the California doctor who originated it, and his aids, providing it was alleged a yearly sum of $15,000 as a salary for the security for themselves. All in all the plan was declared unsound, unworkable and a menace.

GOVERNMENT RELIEF EXPENDITURES SEEM TO HAVE PROVIDED JUICY PICKINGS IN NEW YORK for those who customary spell relief relieve. An investigation has disclosed that government grafters in the five Manhattan have been costing from $250,000 to $300,000 a month in excess of what the figures should have been. Use of ten-ton trucks when one ton trucks could have been more serviceable, hand shoyellers on the big trucks and steam shovels on the small ones, billing for forty trucks when only fifteen were used, and similar discrepancies were found. The work has involved the expenditure of $1,700,000 per month and included the rental of 350 automobiles, 2,300 trucks, and large numbers of drag lines, dredges, steam shovels, air compressors, paving breakers, pumps, tractors and other machines, most of which have crews and fuel supplied by the vendors. Seems as if in times of national calamity and distress graft could not at least cease from grafting, but it seems that the emergency machinery created for national relief works creates just the openings which those urgently in need of it can only go half as far. Perhaps the trend is taken out of the mouths of the children of honest parents who ask little of life says fairly steady work and adequate wages. Grafters are bad in good and evil times but grafters who flourish at the expense of the poor and needy merit capital punishment more than many a poor wretch who sinned against society in a moment of passion, perhaps inflamed by liquor that the government of the land derived a revenue from and was wiped out quickly on the scaffold or electric chair. As has been said of a certain class of social sinners "Hanging is too good for them."

Ancient Directory Shows Life in District in 1856

Belleville Had Population of 7,000 Persons at That Time

FAMILIAR NAMES

Eighty years ago Thurlow boasted a directory within its confines known as "Snow Village". The village described in an interesting old "Canada Directory" issued in the year 1857, giving the statistics and villages of Canada with population which is now owned by Wm. Reynolds, Carrollton.

Although probably long forgotten by even the oldest residents of the section "Snow Village" was listed in the directory as a small community on the Grand Trunk Railway and there is had a population of about 100. Among those listed as residents were Samuel J. P. Casey, postmaster and store keeper; Thomas Corbett; George Phillips, Justice of the Peace; John Phillips and the Rev. William Jeff, J. P. and school superintendent. The name of the village was later changed to Phillipston, by which it is known at the present time.

Belleville, about eighty years ago, had a population of about 7,000, according to the old book. The town was described the chief one of the county a port of entry doing considerable business in imports and export of flour, lumber and other agricultural products supplied by the various manufacturing companies, and by a flourishing farming district. There is a probability that Belleville may be the only town incorporated by its contiguity to the Marmora Iron Works and to the quarries of valuable marble which are used lately and brought into active operation by the Grand Junction. Further: "A steamer leaves Belleville every morning for Montreal, distant 64 miles, fare $1.50 and $1, and returns the same evening calling at Picton and Bath. Two other steamers plying between Trenton and Belleville call at Belleville. Fare is $5.00 and $3.00 to Montreal. There are two daily stages to Bytown 92 miles north, another to Hungerford, fare $1, another daily to Napanee, fare $1.

Overcoming a lead of two goals within five minutes of the last gong and playing the K. O. I. team off their feet the local kids tied their opponents in the first game of home and home games here last night. The two goals that turned defeat into applause were the work of Corporal Whelan the local rower. He also opened the scoring for the game within ten minutes of play. The Belleville kids were greatly handicapped owing to the absence of Sidney Burgess, Corporal Arnott played in his place and showed up exceptionally well while Brooker, the visitors' goal played centre and gave a good account of himself. The teams lined up:

Belleville team: Goal, L. Arnott, Point, G. Arnott, Cover, Armstrong, Rover, Whelan, Centre, Lynn and Wood, Wings, Bellerville team: Goal, L. Arnott, Point, G. Arnott, Cover, Armstrong, Rover, Whelan, Centre, Lynn and Wood, Wings, Bellerville team: Goal, L. Arnott, Point, G. The latter, who is out of the game through sickness, played his position creditably and Whelan undoubtedly played one of the best games of the season. Referee, McCready. Score 4-4.
